Train station plan stymied temporarily

by BILL HILL

The new commuter railroad station promised to Arlington Heights will not be completed before next spring, according to Chicago and North Western Ry. officials.

In an effort to hurry the construction of the new station, railroad officials have asked the Village of Arlington Heights to assume the responsibilities of hiring an architect and letting bids on the project.

The village board's finance committee this week gave approval to that agreement. Final approval of the arrangement must be received by the village board Monday.

"We have a mandate from IDOT (Illinois Dept. of Transportation) to get these new depots completed as soon as possible. It will happen much quicker with this type of arrangement because of the many demands on our staff," said Rollins Coakley, manager of commuter services for the railroad company.

COST ESTIMATES for the new station, which will be built immediately east of the present building, are in the vicinity of $180,000, Coakley said.

The Arlington Heights project is part of a replacement and rehabilitation program the railway is undertaking with a grant from the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Stations in Evanston, Lombard, Lake Bluff and Wheaton also will benefit from the program, Coakley said.

The Arlington Heights downtown stop is the busiest station on the railway's commuter lines, serving more than 3,900 riders daily from Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights.

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 308-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1963 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also (Continued on Page 3)

The house of the future is not only here, but has been for almost 30 years.

Consider the assets: inexpensive and quickly erected but sturdy, almost maintenance free, and warm in winter and cool in summer.

There is one big drawback, though: the houses haven't been built in more than 25 years, since the company went bankrupt.

The Lustron houses stand as monuments to an idea that worked, but whose time had not come.

THE LUSTRON houses, about 25 of which are scattered in the Northwest suburbs, are easily recognizable by their all steel construction and pastel porcelain and baked enamel finish. When the Lustron Corp. promised all-steel construction, they delivered. There is not a stick of wood in its frame.

The small houses, all of the five-room, two-bedroom models, have panel steel exteriors that resemble an overgrown kitchen appliance.

But jokes and wisecracks aside, those who live in a Lustron home are not likely to part with them willingly.

"I wouldn't give it up unless I were a millionaire," said Mrs. Earl Wodrich, of 232 S. Hale St., Palatine.

The Wodrichs have had their Lustron house about 14 months. Retired, and having sold their larger house, they tried apartments and condominium apartments before they went looking for a Lustron house last year.

"THIS HOUSE wasn't advertised. We went to the real estate company looking for a Lustron house. Why? Because there's no maintenance," Mrs. Wodrich said.

Or as her neighbor Gordon Waddell at 325 S. Hale St. said, "This house was the reason we moved out here from Chicago in 1950. We saw one on display in Chicago and decided that's what we wanted. And we've been happy with it."

The reasons that attracted the Waddells in 1950 and the ones that drew the Wodrichs 25 years later are about the same: low costs; little, if any, maintenance; and good design and construction.

The houses' interior walls are enameled steel. There are no conventional doors, but rather sliding metal ones. The bedrooms are large and have picture windows, as do the living room and dining room.

The window placement is such that while both houses have air conditioners, neither one is used often because of good insulation and cross ventilation.

THERE IS VERY little wasted space. The houses have an abundance of cupboards, cabinets and closets, as well as built-in shelves and a vanity.

Originally the houses came with a combination dishwasher-clotheswasher in the kitchen. Waddell explained different tubs were used inside the same machine to accommodate dishes or clothes.

Waddell said when the houses first made their appearance, there was natural resistance from building unions and fears by some that houses would be ovens in the summer with condensation problems on humid days (Continued on Page 4)

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for speedier collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million. Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termax on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

Apparent murder victim's body found

The body of a man, an apparent murder victim, was found Wednesday afternoon along Beverly Road, about one-half mile south of Ill. Rte. 72 in an unincorporated area of Hanover Township. The unidentified man appeared to be 30 to 40 years old and had been shot once below the left eye, Lt. Frank Braun of the Cook County Sheriff's police said. The body was found about 4 p.m. lying face up approximately 100 feet west of the roadway by two men who were target shooting in the area. Braun said the man was probably murdered somewhere else and dumped where he was found.

He appeared to have been dead about 12 hours and was clad only in a pair of green wash pants and gray socks, Braun said. The body was taken to the Cook County Morgue.

Dist. 214 teachers weigh 7% hike

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive a 7 per cent salary increase this fall if a tentative contract agreement is accepted by teachers and the board of education. Under the proposed contract, teachers' base salary would increase from $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and would increase the same amount as the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year. The proposed contract also calls for an increase in medical coverage; elimination of certain nonacademic assignments such as corridor monitoring; a provision for freezing individual teachers' salaries if their performance is evaluated as unsatisfactory; increases in extra-duty and summer school pay; and an early retirement incentive plan. Teachers will vote on the proposal May 7 and it will be submitted to the Dist. 214 board of education for approval May 10.

Unit district vote petitions filed

Petitions requesting a referendum seeking voter approval for the creation of a unit school district in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 have been filed with the Cook County school superintendent. A committee of 10 residents from the Dist. 59 area have filed the petitions, but the request is expected to receive strong opposition from High School Dist. 214 which has already obtained legal counsel to block the movement. Under the unit district, all 21 elementary schools in Dist. 59 and two Dist. 214 high schools — Forest View and Elk Grove — would come under the jurisdiction of one administration. Dist. 214 officials said they fear formation of a unit district would weaken the high school district's tax base. Dist. 59 currently supplies 40 per cent of the Dist. 214 tax base, but only 27 per cent of the students.

Zettek backs films law

Elk Grove Village Pres. Charles J. Zettek says he may follow Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's lead and propose a local ordinance banning minors from viewing violent films. Zettek said Wednesday he agrees with Daley's proposal that those 18 and under should be prohibited from viewing sexually explicit or violent movies and said he would back a similar code in Elk Grove Village if the proposed Chicago ordinance is upheld by the courts. "Certainly we don't enhance youths' minds when we expose them to pornography and excessive violence," Zettek said. Elk Grove Village currently has an antilescency ordinance designed to block the showing of X-rated films in the village.

Carter will top President Ford, Daley predicts

Mayor Richard J. Daley said Wednesday that Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, who won Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary, could beat President Ford in the Nov. 2 general election.

At a news conference, Daley said Carter "is the one that stands prominently in the eyes of everyone. In my opinion, 'yes,' Carter could beat Ford in the November general election."

Tuesday's victory was Carter's seventh primary win in nine states. He won 37 per cent of the vote, followed by Sen. Henry Jackson with 25 per cent.

DALEY SAID Carter's Pennsylvania win was "very impressive. If he can get support in all the primaries being held, then it would be hard to deny that support at the (Democratic party's national) convention.

"There is no doubt that his tremendous victory in Pennsylvania is a startling and significant factor in the convention in New York," Daley said.

The mayor said he would support whoever the convention chooses as the presidential nominee.

"The question was whether Carter could draw votes in the northern states, and he's proven he can do that. He's proven he has an element which the America people feel gives him the ability to carry on as President of the United States," Daley said.

Carter's healing touch wins support of voters: Colson

Charles W. Colson, the former White House special counsel who went to prison for Watergate-related crimes, Wednesday said Jimmy Carter's healing touch may be responsible for his vast appeal in the 1976 presidential campaign.

"The American people want a healing in the country," Colson said during a class discussion at Wheaton College. "They really desperately want a healing of their wounds."

"I think Carter is tremendously responsive to this," he said, after making a chapel address.

Colson said, "Whatever it is that is disturbing Washington about Carter," he finds no such reaction elsewhere around the country, but rather "a tremendous response to Christ's message."

"And really, that's what Carter is talking about in many respects," Colson said.

Colson said he had defended Carter at a news conference in Atlanta, Ga., but worried that "if I said too many nice things about him, I'd probably hurt him."

Colson refused, however, to express outright support of the Carter candidacy.

Carter has spoken frequently in his campaign about his religious faith. Colson said that he experienced a conversion to Christ in 1973, shortly before he pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice in the Daniel Ellsberg break-in case.

Carter seeks unity; Hubert promises an answer

JIMMY CARTER and his wife, Rosalynn, following Carter's seventh primary victory.

by STEVE GERSTEL
United Press International

Jimmy Carter, having all but destroyed his main challengers for the Democratic nomination, said Wednesday his task now is to unify the party behind him. He said he doesn't care whether Hubert Humphrey heads supporters' pleas and enters the race.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, meanwhile, told reporters he would have "something" to tell them today of his decision on a possible Democratic presidential bid.

President Ford, campaigning in Texas, and Ronald Reagan, in Georgia, raised their rhetoric to new levels, and the financial hopes of all the candidates but Ford sank to a new low when a federal Appeals Court rejected their "begging" for immediate release of federal funds due them.

Carter's primary victory Tuesday in the big industrial state of Pennsylvania left in doubt the crumbling candidacies of Henry Jackson, Morris Udall and George Wallace. But the three men refused to surrender and promised to chase the Georgian right to the national convention.

Jackson announced "dramatic" changes in strategy, forsaking "gimmicks" to take his case directly to the voters, and Udall promised Wednesday to stay in the race "all the way. There is not going to be any withdrawal."

Before leaving Philadelphia to visit his Plains, Ga., home, Carter said, "My major effort from now on, since I've successfully completed the first phase of my campaign, is to prove I have strength among all kinds of Democrats in all kinds of states. I would like very much to have Sen. Humphrey's endorsement."

Asked whether the Minnesota should stay on the sidelines or enter the last primary open to him — New Jersey June 8 — Carter replied, "I don't care."

The deadline for entering New Jersey is Thursday.

The Texas Republican primary is essential for both Ford and Reagan. The president, in his sharpest attack yet on the former governor of California, told students at Tyler (Tex.) Junior College:

"Obviously, we should exercise great caution before heeding the words of a man who obviously has no experience and little understanding of the complexity of national defense matters. Superficial arguments based on incomplete knowledge are fundamentally harmful rather than helpful."

He also twitted Reagan for his Hollywood background, saying, "There are no retakes in the Oval Office. Glibness is not good enough. Superficiality is not good enough."

Reagan, who did not challenge Ford in Pennsylvania, was counting on beating Ford in Texas Saturday and Alabama, Georgia and Indiana next Tuesday.

In Albany, Ga., Reagan criticized Sec. of State Henry Kissinger's statement during his Africa tour that the United States is urging black majority rule in Rhodesia in two years.

"Going over there and encouraging the side that advocates bloodshed is a mistake," Reagan said. "I'm afraid we're going to have a massacre."

Reagan and the six Democratic contenders who last week failed in their attempt to get the Supreme Court to release federal campaign funds held up by congressional inaction on a new Federal Election Commission law, lost again Wednesday. The U.S. Court of Appeals heard more arguments but said it had no authority to release the money.

Faces veto threat by Ford

$3.1 billion foreign aid bill OKd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday gave final congressional approval to the $3.1 billion foreign military aid bill, most of it earmarked for Israel, and sent it to the White House where President Ford has threatened to veto it.

Senate action came only a few hours after the House passed the measure by a vote that narrowly defeated a Republican-led attempt to kill it. The Senate vote was 51 to 35, the House vote 215 to 185.

Those margins indicated there might well be insufficient votes to override a presidential veto.

The legislation is for the current fiscal year. A separate bill for the next fiscal year, which begins in October, is pending in congressional committees.

Ford has threatened to veto the current measure because of provisions for tighter congressional control over sale of arms to foreign nations.

These include placing a $9 billion annual ceiling on commercial as well as government-to-government sales of military weapons.

Another forbids discrimination against U.S. employees involved in arms sales by foreign governments on the basis of race, religion, sex or national origin, which the administration fears might offend Arab states.

The legislation also prohibits providing military aid to nations whose governments violate the human rights of their own citizens — a measure congressional sources said was aimed mainly at South Korea.

The Senate foreign aid subcommittee meantime interrupted work on the aid measure for next fiscal year to draft a letter to Ford urging that he not veto that legislation.

Republicans say Ford objects to giving Congress a review of some foreign military aid decisions.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., tried to get the House to send the fiscal 1976 bill back to committee Wednesday, and thus kill it. The House rejected that move, 214 to 185, then passed the bill, worked out by a House-Senate conference.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Wednesday the question is close enough in the Senate that he doubts the Senate could override a presidential veto. If a veto holds up, the Senate would likely just pass a bill with last year's spending amounts in it, Mansfield said.

7 blacks join Rhodesian cabinet

Rhodesia took seven blacks into its white cabinet Wednesday, a day after Sec. of State Henry Kissinger promised U.S. economic and political pressures for peaceful transfer to a black majority government.

The nationalist leaders, who have been demanding "majority rule now" for the country's 6.1 million blacks, called Prime Minister Ian Smith's move "a waste of time."

Smith appointed four tribal chiefs as full ministers and three black members of parliament as deputy ministers. The Prime Minister said Tuesday three more blacks would be appointed to deputy ministerial posts "soon."

Fall referendum planned in Spain

The government of King Juan Carlos will submit proposed democratic reforms for post-Franco Spain to a referendum next October and will call general elections early next year, Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro announced Wednesday. The October referendum will include changes in the laws of succession which will amount to a plebiscite on the monarchy, officials said.

GM profits score big increase

Reflecting the auto industry's sharp turnaround from its most disastrous sales level in 13 years, General Motors Corp. Wednesday reported an $800 million first quarter profit — almost 14 times greater than in the same three-month period a year ago. The first quarter profit came on record sales of $11.4 billion — up 50 per cent from a year ago — and second only to 1973's record level. Last year's $59 million first quarter profit was the lowest for the period in 29 years.

Soliah may face new charges

Steven Soliah, acquitted of participating in a fatal Symbionese Liberation Army bank robbery, may face charges for aiding his underground lover, Patricia Hearst. An alibi witness at Soliah's federal court trial, Emily Toback, 26, also could face a perjury charge. She testified she was in San Francisco the day of the bank robbery, but state records indicate she was visiting at Folsom Prison, 90 miles from San Francisco and 10 miles from the robbery scene.

FTC seeks breakup of 4 cereal makers

Federal Trade Commission investigators, claiming consumers are overcharged millions of dollars a year for breakfast cereals, Wednesday asked a judge to break up the country's four biggest cereal makers. Lawyers for the companies — Kellogg, General Foods, General Mills and Quaker Oats — said the charges were "absolutely absurd."

The complaint, first filed four years ago, contends the four companies engaged for more than 30 years in a "tacit conspiracy" to restrict competition and keep prices higher than they otherwise would have been. The trial is expected to last most of the summer.

Agreement reached in SF strike

A San Francisco official reported Wednesday an agreement has been worked out that is expected to end the 4-week-old strike of 1,700 city workers. Quentin Kopp, president of the city Board of Supervisors, said top union officials have accepted the proposal and were recommending it to the striking municipal workers. Kopp said Mayor George Moscone also endorsed the settlement proposal, the details of which were not revealed.

Folger raises coffee prices — again

The Folger Co., the nation's second largest coffee wholesaler, Wednesday increased regular ground coffee prices by 10 cents a pound and instant coffee by 2 cents an ounce in the second round of increases in eight days. The Folger Co., based in Kansas City, Mo., said the latest price move, which is effective immediately, stemmed from an unexpected 9 per cent price increase in imported green coffee since April 20. On April 20, Folger, a division of Procter & Gamble, announced price hikes of 15 cents a pound on its ground coffee and one cent an ounce on instant brands, citing a 13 per cent rise in green coffee prices since the first of the month.

Reagan hits Ford's foreign policy

Ronald Reagan challenged President Ford's foreign policy theme of "peace through strength" in his second nationwide television address Wednesday night. Reagan quoted defense experts as painting a picture of Soviet military superiority. He quoted NATO commander Gen. Alexander Haig as saying, "We're on the fine edge of disaster." former Strategic Arms Limitations Talks negotiator Paul Nitze as saying Soviet nuclear capability will increase after 1977; and former Sec. of Defense James Schlesinger as saying the West faces its most "formidable" threat since the 1930s.

Economic indicators post slight drop

The government said Wednesday its crystal ball for future economic activity — the index of leading indicators — showed a small decline in March. But it does not necessarily mean the recovery is faltering. The 0.4-per-cent drop in the index was the first and largest since a 0.5-per-cent decline last October and followed four months of increases, the Commerce Dept. said.

"There's nothing to be alarmed about," said Maynard Comlez, department's acting chief economist. "It's not unusual to have a one-month decline periodically."

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Three sergeants and a captain were ordered court-martialed Wednesday for the beating death of a Marine recruit in a training session.

The trials were ordered by Maj. Gen. Kenneth Houghton, commanding general of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, who also announced nonjudicial punishment for a colonel and a captain.

The charges resulted from the death of Pvt. Lynn E. McClure, of Lufkin, Tex., who was fatally injured while training with pugil sticks — padded poles used in simulated bayonet combat.

The courts-martial were ordered for: Sgt. H. E. Aguilar, named in six counts of negligent homicide and aggravated assault.

Staff Sgt. Harold L. Bronson, charged with involuntary manslaughter and aggravated assault.

Capt. C. V. Taylor, accused of failure to obey a lawful order and dereliction in the performance of his duties.

Staff Sgt. H. C. Wallraff, charged with dereliction of duty and violating a general order.

No dates have been set for the courts-martial.

McClure, 20, died in the Houston veterans' hospital March 13 after remaining comatose from the time of his injury Dec. 6.

Authorities probe site of air crash

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands (UPI) — Federal investigators Wednesday sifted the charred, strewn wreckage of an American Airlines 727 jet, looking for clues into the cause of the third fatal crash at the controversial airport in six years.

Local medical officials said 36 bodies had been recovered from the scene of Tuesday's crash — two of the victims possibly island residents killed when the Boeing 727 overshot the runway of Harry S. Truman International Airport, struck an automobile on the airport highway and careened into a gas station.

Unconfirmed local radio reports put the death toll as high as 38. Civil defense teams continued a search for more bodies.

St. Thomas coroner Bernard Rumsch said doctors were beginning to identify the dead, but many of the bodies were so severely burned and maimed that the process would be difficult and lengthy.

A spokesman for American Airlines said 34 of the 88 passengers and crew aboard ill-fated three-engine jet were confirmed dead, 51 were injured and three were "missing and still unaccounted for." Eighteen of the injured were hospitalized. None were from the Chicago area.

A team of 40 investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board arrived at the disaster site

Wednesday, but declined comment when asked if the length of the runway was a key factor in the crash.

The 4,658-foot runway has been repeatedly criticized by federal authorities and airline pilots as too short for landing by large passenger planes. The 727 is the biggest jet permitted to land at the airport.

One traffic controller at the airport, who asked not to be identified, said, "The FAA never should have approved that airport."

"The runway is too short and the machine which gives wind velocity and direction is not adequate," he said. "The runway is located between two mountains and though the machine is located in the center of the runway, sometimes the wind at the end of the runway is 15 to 20 miles faster."

"What it gets down to, and I am sticking my neck out to say this, is the FAA is a political machine from Washington on down," he said. "People come here and put in two years and get their promotion and don't really care what happens. I'm fed up with it."

The Virgin Islands government has been planning for more than five years to redesign the runway at the airport but has delayed because of lack of funds.

Asked about the runway, American Airlines spokesman Larry Strain said, however, "We wouldn't operate here if it was dangerous."

had refused to sign a report issued Monday on U. S.-foreign and military intelligence.

The report suggested the spy agencies introduced a "Big Brother" element into American life.

"Too many people have been spied upon by too many government agencies and too much information has been collected," it said.

"The government has often undertaken the secret surveillance of citizens on the basis of their political beliefs, even when those beliefs posed no threat of violence or illegal acts on behalf of a hostile foreign power."

"The government, operating primarily through secret informants but also using other intrusive techniques such as wiretaps, microphone 'bugs,' surreptitious mail opening and break-ins, has swept in vast amounts of information about the personal lives, views and associations of American citizens."

"Investigations of groups deemed potentially dangerous — and even of groups suspected of associating with potentially dangerous organizations — have continued for decades..." it said.

"Unsavory and vicious tactics have been employed — including anonymous attempts to break up marriages, disrupt meetings, ostracize persons from their professions."

The report said the reform recom-

FBI planted stories: committee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI often planted derogatory new stories — anonymously or through "friendly" reporters — about people or groups it opposed, the Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday.

"The FBI attempted to influence public opinion by supplying information or articles to 'confidential sources' in the news media..." the report said.

"Typically, a local FBI agent would provide information to a 'friendly news source' on the condition that the bureau's interest in these matters is to be kept in the strictest confidence."

It said the targets included the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights movement in general and Vietnam war opponents.

Committee members expressed concern over such media manipulation by intelligence agencies, but said they could do little to prevent it.

"The responsibility lies primarily with the press itself as to whether the press is going to be used in this manner," said Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky.

Recommendations were not designed to control federal investigations of "organized crime, narcotics or other law enforcement investigations unrelated to domestic security activities" or to hamper counterintelligence operations.

The recommendations covered a wide range of checks and controls, including:

- A ruling that "there is no inherent constitutional authority for the president or any intelligence agency to violate the law;"
- Creation of a new permanent Senate intelligence oversight committee with broad review and enforcement powers;

- Legal prohibition against the CIA, NSA and Army intelligence engaging in any domestic intelligence operations involving Americans, with a few carefully defined exceptions;

- A ban against the CIA and Army intelligence conducting any experiments on humans, including experiments with drugs;

- Forbidding the IRS to "collect any information about the activities of Americans except for the purposes of enforcing the tax laws."

Schools

Prospect Heights Dist. 23

Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 will offer a summer program at George Williams Camp, Lake Geneva, Wis. from June 21-26 for students in grades five, six and seven. The camping program is part of the regular summer school program "Off Campus Affective Education."

Students will visit Yerkes Observatory, a camp-run animal farm, a stone quarry and a century-old cemetery.

Cost of the program is $60 which includes lodging, meals, entrance fees, materials, insurance and round trip transportation. Students who live outside the school district may attend by paying an additional $25.

Deadline for registration is Friday, and forms are available at MacArthur Junior High School, 700 Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights. For information call Phil Cornwell, 259-4550, ext. 30.

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59

Orders are being taken through Friday for a spring plant sale sponsored by the ways and means committee at Forest View Elementary School, 1901 Estates Dr., Mount Prospect.

Red geraniums and begonias in four inch pots will be sold for $1 each. To place orders, call Corrine Marshall, 439-6597 or Judy Briesch, 439-6685. Plants will be delivered May 7.

East Maine Dist. 63

"Our Country 'Tis of Thee," a musical on the Bicentennial, will be presented by students from Gemini Junior High School at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Apollo Junior High School auditorium, 10100 Dee Rd., Des Plaines.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students. The director of the production is Margie Fleischman.

High School Dist. 214

Wheeling High School's senior class is sponsoring a blood drive Friday as a community service project. The drawing will be held in Room 104 at the school, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling.

Donations made during the drive will be credited to the community in which the student lives, and covers the students immediate family, including grandparents, for one year.

Vandalism laws topic of meeting

A special committee will examine anti-vandalism ordinances tonight as possible solutions to the problem in Arlington Heights.

Arlington Heights Village Prosecutor Ernest Blomquist will appear before the zero vandalism committee meeting today at 8 p.m. in the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The committee, headed by Trustee Robert H. Miller, is expected to ask Blomquist to examine anti-vandalism ordinances drawn up in other communities as models for similar laws here.

The committee, meeting since January, has been trying to determine the extent of the problem in Arlington Heights and what possible remedial steps can be taken to curb it.

A recent study by the committee found that about a third of the homes in Arlington Heights had been the target of vandals.

PTA unit seeks panel to study traffic hazards

The Arlington Heights Council of PTAs has asked the village board to form a committee to study traffic safety in the community and to identify hazardous areas.

The village board currently is considering a controversial thoroughfare plan to improve traffic flow in the village. The board referred the PTA request to the village's public health and safety committee.

Marty Kraybill, president of the PTA Council, asked the board to consider the safety of children in its new traffic plan.

"We recognize the conscientious effort the village officials are making toward improving traffic flow throughout the community," Mrs. Kraybill said. "But improved traffic flow often changes the status of residential streets and creates areas that are potentially hazardous to children," she said.

Mrs. Kraybill asked the board to form a joint safety committee comprised of village officials, school administrators and PTA safety chairpersons, which would identify hazardous traffic areas and make budgetary provisions for crossing guards and traffic control devices.

Commuter station plans stymied

railway officials. Village Pres. James T. Ryan and Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson have expressed a preference for a colonial style station, rather than the standard flat-roof style used for the Arlington Park station.

COAKLEY SAID the railway has no objections to the colonial style if the total cost of the project does not exceed $180,000 and the village accepts any extra maintenance duties required by the colonial design.

Coakley estimated that the colonial design would cost about $30,000 more than the standard style.

Hanson predicted that a colonial style station could be completed for about $180,000, including architectural fees.

A final decision on the design of the building will not be made until an architect is hired.

Hanson said he favored the colonial style because the station is located downtown. "It will be here for at least the next 75 years, so it should have a little facade to it," he said.

THE NEW STATION, regardless of its exterior design, will feature two waiting rooms, Coakley said.

The main waiting room will be open only during hours when the station's agents are on duty, but there will be another smaller waiting room on one end of the building that will be open at all times. It will be completely visible from three sides to reduce the chances of vandalism, he said.

The station will not have restrooms because of the maintenance and vandalism costs, Coakley said.

Coakley predicted that construction of the new station will not begin before August. The architect, once hired, will have 45 days to submit plans, which must be approved by the village, the railway and the department of transportation.

The present station will be demolished at an estimated cost of $2,000, Hanson said.

7% teacher pay hike included in Dist. 214 pact

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,850. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,848 approved this week by teachers in New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year.

Other provisions in the contract include:

- An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $600 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $800 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

- Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.

- A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.

- An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

- An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

- An increase in summer school pay. Teachers would still be paid 10 per cent of their base salary but the maximum summer pay would be increased from $1,250 to $1,358.

- The formation of a committee to recommend procedure for reducing staff as enrollment declines. The committee would report to the board by Feb. 1, 1977.

The contract package represents a total increase in district expenses of about $2 million, 11 per cent. The district has 1,089 teachers.

40-lane bowling alley planned on Kennicott Ave.

A $2.5 million bowling alley is being planned for a site on Kennicott Avenue near Dundee Road in Arlington Heights.

Arthur Schmidt of Barrington said Wednesday he will submit plans for the 40-lane bowling alley to the village if he is granted a Class D liquor license.

Schmidt's request for the license, which permits the sale of alcoholic beverages until 4 a.m. weekdays and 5 a.m. weekends, will be reviewed today by the village board's public health and safety committee. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

APPROVAL OF Schmidt's application for the liquor license has been delayed until a ruling is made by Village Atty. Jack Siegel on whether bowling alleys qualify for Class D licenses, said Frank Charlton, assistant village manager.

Class D licenses are for "hotels or recreational facilities," the village ordinance states.

Only Arlington Park Race Track and Arlington Park Hilton Hotel now have Class D licenses, Charlton said.

Schmidt said preliminary plans for the bowling alley include a nursery and lounge, as well as automatic scorekeepers.

Schmidt said he hopes construction will begin in June with completion scheduled for January 1977.

Ex-parks director enters guilty plea

John Trinka, a retired director of special services for the Chicago Park District, pleaded guilty Wednesday to single counts of mail fraud and tax evasion in a plea bargaining arrangement.

Trinka, 72, who now lives in Placida, Fla., was named in a federal indictment last January charging him with accepting payoffs amounting to more than $15,000 so that boat owners could obtain boat moorings in Chicago harbors administered by the park district. Trinka was in charge of issuing permits for buoys and slips in Chicago's five harbors.

The indictment charged Trinka with receiving the payoffs from 1965 to 1972.

Driver 'unfit' to stand trial

Linda Lee Smith, 24, accused of driving her car into a group of Chicago school children April 13, Wednesday was found mentally unfit to stand trial on charges of attempted murder and aggravated battery.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Louis B. Garippo made the ruling after a report on Miss Smith was filed by the court's Psychiatric Institute.

Miss Smith's car rammed into a group of 10 children, injuring one seriously.

Illinois briefs

Kidnaped girl, 12, found dead in woods

Catherine Jo "Cathy" Harris, 12, who disappeared April 19 after she got into a car with a man near her Newton, Ill., home, Wednesday was found dead in a wooded area near Greenup.

State police headquarters at Effingham said Cathy's body was found 1 1/2 miles south of Greenup and one mile east of Ill. Rte. 130, or about 18 miles north of Newton.

A state police spokesman said he had no information on the cause of death and did not know if the girl had been assaulted.

Held on a state charge of aggravated kidnapping in the girl's abduction was Michael Lee Lett, 21, Washington, Ind., a walkaway April 14 from Norman Beatty hospital in Westville, Ind., an institution for the criminally insane and other mental patients.

Bicentennial suit settled

The American Civil Liberties Union and the Peolone Bicentennial Commission have agreed to an out-of-court settlement on an ACLU suit charging the commission planned to use public money for a religious pageant, attorneys said Wednesday.

The suit, which was filed last Wednesday, was dismissed, but Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland said the attorneys could reinstate the case if the settlement was violated.

Under the settlement, the commission agreed to numerous changes in the Christian Evangelical Revival Celebration, including deletion of religious references and characters from the script.

Bill introduced to control unneeded licensing panels

by STEVE BROWN

New legislation, which could spell the end for unneeded state agencies, was introduced Wednesday in Springfield by State Rep. Harold Katz, D-Glenview.

The bill, commonly referred to as a "sunset law" is modeled after legislation approved last week by the Colorado legislature.

Katz predicted the measure will be approved by the House in this session.

The bill set up a timetable under which the General Assembly will review every six years the activities of state agencies which license or oversee the operation of more than 175 occupations. If the lawmakers decide the agency is not needed, legislators could vote to disband it.

"ONCE THE GENERAL Assembly creates these agencies there is no real monitoring," Katz said.

"Once created, they have a life all their own and they go on and on, spending the taxpayer's funds ad infinitum," Redmond said. Katz said the involvement of the Democratic leadership in the measure will help with the passage.

The agencies which will be reviewed if the bill becomes law include: the Illinois Dept. of Registration and Education, Commerce Commission, Liquor Control Commission, Dept. of Insurance and Commission of Banks and Trust Companies.

Katz said he has attempted several times to do something about regulatory agencies not protecting the public interest.

Katz said he had no particular agency in mind which should be abolished, but indicated the law might be used to reduce the number of occupations licensed by the Dept. of Registration and Education. They now license more occupations than any other state in the country, Katz said.

Restore special ed grant money: House

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois House, ignoring speeches by many members saying the state can't afford it, nonetheless voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to restore $39 million which Gov. Daniel Walker cut last summer from special education grant money. The vote was 126-29.

The special education deficiency bill sponsored by Rep. Thomas Hanahan, D-McHenry, drew debate on the state's delicate financial condition.

"I'm voting for this because we told schools to go ahead with programs for the disadvantaged kids and that we'd reimburse them," said Rep. Roland Tipsword, D-Taylorville. "But I'm asking you, where are we going to get the money?"

1 year after Viet pullout, vets wounds still healing

by KURT BAER

It was a sweltering day in Saigon, April 29, 1975 when the Soviet-made tanks smashed through the iron fence in the heart of the city and rumbled onto the grounds of the presidential palace.

Overhead, American helicopters were hastily evacuating the last remaining Americans from the U.S. Embassy.

A South Vietnamese police colonel strode briskly up to a military statue in front of the National Assembly Building, saluted and committed suicide.

The last exchange of automatic weapons fire crackled in the heart of what the victors were already calling Ho Chi Minh City.

THE VIETNAMESE War was over at last.

It has been reported that there was cheering and dancing in the streets when the communist troops swarmed into Saigon. But Leon Daniel, a United Press International correspondent who covered the final days of the war, said there was none.

Capt. Ralph "Jack" Powell has been away from Vietnam for six years now. But time will never heal all his wounds or blur the memories of his two years of combat in Indochina.

Powell, 30, now partially paralyzed, summoned up some of his feelings Wednesday from his bed at the Hines Veteran's Administration Hospital near Maywood.

"I was disgusted (a year ago when Saigon fell). Today I feel more disappointed. Not disappointed from the standpoint that I got injured. I was on my way to being a careerist and that's what goes with an (Army) career."

"I am disappointed because so much pain and effort went down the tubes," he said.

THE GUTTERS of Saigon were littered with weapons and uniforms discarded by government soldiers fleeing advancing communists, Daniel reports.

"I don't think the last days could have been any different than they were," said Powell, now now works for a paraplegic veterans association in Chicago and lives in Lombard.

"But early on, different American policies might have changed the outcome," he said.

One year later, there is good news and bad news out of South Vietnam.

THE GOOD NEWS is that there has been no bloodbath despite 30 years of fratricidal war. The bad news is the loss of many basic freedoms.

The government's biggest goal is reunification of North and South Vietnam with a capital in Hanoi. There are plans to rebuild the railroad between the north and south. Slogans, strung on banners, printed in newspapers and broadcast on radio and television, proclaim the slogans of Ho Chi Minh.

"Vietnam is one The Vietnamese are one."

"I've followed what little that's been reported (about Vietnam's reunification)," Powell said. "I see they had an election and that 90 per cent of all the eligible supposedly voted. But nobody reported what the choices were among the candidates. I saw nothing about differences in views or issues."

POWELL WAS ASKED for five words he associates with Vietnam. His choice seems to capture what many Americans must feel about that bitter conflict: "Waste, confusion, corruption, beauty and tragedy," he said.

In the next bed at Hines Hospital, Parley Runion, 30, of Pinckneyville, Ill., also lay crippled from wounds he sustained in Vietnam. He has been in and out of hospitals since he was injured in 1969. He has been out of the Army for nearly six years.

"I saw too many guys get hurt and killed in Vietnam," he said Wednesday. "I thought the war was senseless myself. A lot of guys did. But they went. They went and died. A lot of them were too scared to do anything else."

The U.S. Ambassador in Saigon at the end was Graham Martin. He was aboard the second to the last helicopter to leave the capital city.

Martin, now an assistant to U.S. Sec of State Henry A. Kissinger, sits in a wood-paneled office with a peaceful view of the Lincoln Memorial. He generally refuses interviews, explaining that he does not want to be seen as trying to defend what happened.

But Martin recently gave a House International Relations Committee this glimpse of his role in the final episode.

"My great concern was to get the United States out of Vietnam as quickly as it could possibly be done, leaving a South Vietnam militarily capable of defending itself with its own manpower, economically viable, and free to choose its leaders and institutions as its own people might freely determine..."

"Well," he said, "we didn't quite make it."

STARS & STRIPES

THE BIRTHDAY OF A FLAG

As the war with England wore on, a new flag symbolizing a new nation was in order.

On June 11, 1777, the Continental Congress concerned itself with a number of routine matters. Two orders of payment of money to John Murray were approved. A letter from Anna's Therop of Providence was read and referred to the Maritime Committee. Various monies were appropriated for military purposes in the war with England.

And then, almost incidentally, the Congress passed a resolution:

Resolved, that the Flag of the United States be 13 stripes alternate red and white, that the Union be 13 stars white in a blue field representing a new constellation.

With no more fanfare than that the old Union Jack that spoke of loyalty to England was removed and a field of stars joined the red and white stripes.

Strange as it may seem today, the resolution that created the flag was not even reported in the newspapers until three months later, and the birthday of our flag — June 11 — was not officially proclaimed flag day until 1917.

THE BIRTHDAY OF A FLAG
As the war with England wore on, a new flag symbolizing a new nation was in order.

On June 11, 1777, the Continental Congress concerned itself with a number of routine matters. Two orders of payment of money to John Murray were approved. A letter from Anna's Therop of Providence was read and referred to the Maritime Committee. Various monies were appropriated for military purposes in the war with England.

And then, almost incidentally, the Congress passed a resolution:

Resolved, that the Flag of the United States be 13 stripes alternate red and white, that the Union be 13 stars white in a blue field representing a new constellation.

With no more fanfare than that the old Union Jack that spoke of loyalty to England was removed and a field of stars joined the red and white stripes.

Strange as it may seem today, the resolution that created the flag was not even reported in the newspapers until three months later, and the birthday of our flag — June 11 — was not officially proclaimed flag day until 1917.

The way we see it

Anniversary of war's end

"In Vietnam today" . . . a phrase as common as "What's for dinner?" to a generation of Americans . . . has been at rest for one year.

Most Americans do not care to remember the Vietnam War, let alone observe the first anniversary of its ending. But it was just one year ago today that the last helicopters lifted off from the roof of the American embassy in Saigon.

We feel it would be hardly appropriate to mark this day on the calendar along with VE-Day and Armistice Day. But on this, the first anniversary, we think a review is in order of those factors that led us into Vietnam, allowed the war to continue for more than a decade and ended with the U.S. losing face before the world.

The war years were a time when the nation was torn by racial strife, assassinations, weak leadership and a decline in diplomatic and military supremacy. The nation was led, step by cynical step, into a conflict it did not want to be involved in. Once there, we waged a war without heart.

It was a cruel war in which many Americans died or were terribly maimed.

The frustrations of the war and the domestic strife brought on some of the most turbulent years this nation has faced since the Civil War.

The nation survived its test, however, and now seems ready to start anew. It starts with a generation looking for peace and for a way to prevent future Vietnams. At the same time, it seeks to do right by those Americans who suffered because of the war and those Vietnamese who fled to our shores when it was all over.

Americans may want to forget the war and their involvement in it, but they cannot forget the Americans and Vietnamese left behind by those years of fighting.

Hopefully, it will be on their memories that those who made the ultimate sacrifice helped to build better and more lasting relationships among ourselves and our world neighbors.

Elected superintendent is return to politics

A resolution now before the Illinois Senate which would return the state to an elected superintendent of schools is a bad one and the Senate should defeat it.

The measure, which calls for a constitutional amendment to be placed on the ballot in the November general election, passed the Illinois House of Representatives Tuesday by a one vote margin.

The constitutional amendment would eliminate the appointed state schools superintendent and abolish the 16-month-old state board of education and put education back into the hands of partisan politics.

The sponsor of the resolution, State Rep. Dwight Friedrich, R-Centralia, wants control of the office returned "to the people." He objects to State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin partly because he is from out of state rather than Illinois, and maintains the state office of education has been dictatorial and unresponsive to local concerns.

On the contrary, we believe

The almanac

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, April 29, the 120th day of 1976 with 246 to follow.

The moon is new.

The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus.

The Duke of Wellington, the British general who defeated Napoleon at Waterloo, was born April 29, 1769.

On this date in history:

• In 1878, Boston newspapers ran the advertisement: "Telephone, three dollars, guaranteed to work one mile. Five miles . . . five dollars."

• In 1931, President Herbert Hoover received the King of Siam, first absolute monarch to visit the United States.

• In 1945, American troops liberated 32,000 prisoners from the Dachau concentration camp in Nazi Germany.

• In 1975, President Duong Van Minh announced the unconditional surrender of South Vietnam to invading Communist forces.

A thought for the day: Catholic Bishop Fulton Sheen said, "Baloney is flattery so thick it cannot be true, and blarney is flattery so thick we like it."

Rep. Mugalian challenged

In his letter of April 15, 1976 State Rep. R. A. Mugalian alleges that my letter of March 7 stated that his Safe Power Bill is unnecessary. My letter contained no statement concerning the necessity of the bill.

The purpose of my letter was merely to point out that the safety of nuclear power has been, and is being studied and that such studies have concluded that nuclear power is safe. Contrary to the naive impression of Rep. Mugalian, the safety issues were identified in the early development of the industry. Such issues have been, and are continuing to be identified, studied and resolved.

Apparently, the well-intentioned but ill-advised Rep. Mugalian is not aware of the effects of a new-plant moratorium on plants already in operation. Such a moratorium would effectively kill the nuclear industry in Illinois, and adversely affect our economy and energy posture.

At this time I would like to address several specific points raised in Rep. Mugalian's letter.

• It would be beneficial to the taxpayers of Illinois if Rep. Mugalian would take the time to become aware of Public Law 94-197, which provides for the phasing out of all government involvement in nuclear liability insurance. One of the key factors in this program is the assumption that more plants will be built. Rep. Mugalian's bill is in direct opposition to such a phase-out of government support.

• Numerous studies have been conducted concerning the storage of nuclear wastes. I would refer Rep. Mugalian to BNWL-1900, "High-Level Radioactive Waste Management Alternatives." This 4-volume, 1590 page report was released in May 1974 and concludes that there are several viable ways to isolate such wastes from the environment.

• Numerous studies have been carried out concerning materials transportation and potential sabotage. Recently released was the "Draft Environmental Statement on the Transportation of Radioactive Material by Air and Other Modes." Potential sabotage has been studied by the Rand Corporation, Dr. B. Cohen, MITRE Corporation, Energy Research & Development Administration, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission just to name a few. In his study, Brian Jenkins of the Rand Corporation concludes: "Detonation of a nuclear bomb appears to be the least likely terrorist threat." Dr. B. Cohen of the Institute of Energy Analysis reached a similar conclusion.

• Uranium is in limited supply and the price is increasing as suggested by Rep. Mugalian. The same is true for coal and other fuels, however. In the past few years the price of imported oil has quadrupled in price. We will exhaust our known reserves of domestic oil and gas within the next ten to twelve years. Therefore, we should not ban the use of nuclear fuels nor place increasing reliance on imported OPEC oil (which now supplies 45% of all oil used in the U.S.) which subjects us to the possibility of another, even more severe, oil embargo.

Cheers for Mugalian

I wish to add my endorsement to your editorial concerning State Rep. R. A. Mugalian's Safe Power Bill and his comments published on April 15th. For those of your readers wishing to be better informed on the subject of nuclear power plants, particularly the awesome liquid metal fast breeder reactor (LMFBR), I recommend the following two books available in the Mt. Prospect Public Library:

• Sagan, Leonard A., Human and Ecologic Effects of Nuclear Power Plants, Charles C. Thomas Publisher, Springfield, IL 1974.

• Fuller, John G., We Almost Lost Detroit, Readers Digest Press, 1975.

Three cheers for Rep. Mugalian who, as a public official, has taken a courageous stand on an important issue.

Dana Peckworth
Mt. Prospect, IL

• It may surprise the ill-researched Rep. Mugalian to realize that the necessity of the fast breeder program was thoroughly addressed in a report to Congress by the General Accounting Office. The Draft Environmental Statement issued by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor also discusses the safety of such plants. The Generic Environmental Statement on Mixed Oxide Fuels discusses the environmental effects of breeder fuels.

In conclusion, it would seem that Illinois tax dollars could be invested in more productive areas such as job placement programs, increased medical care for the poor, minority housing projects, the RTA or increased police and fire protection. To spend more Illinois tax money to study a program which has been studied for over 30 years by many more competent organizations than proposed by Rep. Mugalian would be an irresponsible and unnecessary action.

Young's union charges unfair

As chairman of the Des Plaines Citizens for Mikva I'd like to comment on Sam Young's allegation that 50 per cent of the Mikva supporters are union members. This is utter nonsense, and it would be laughable except for the fact that it is so inaccurate. As I go through my list of people who were active on Mikva's behalf, I have difficulty finding any union members. I'm sure there are a few, but it is an insignificant number.

We are proud of our Mikva volunteers, all of them. Mr. Young's statement that our organization consists primarily of labor and outsiders is simply not true. We did have the support of some Republicans. I hope that isn't against the rules, because we are proud of them too.

'Inferiority' of America false: NATO

by RICHARD C. LONGWORTH

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The debate in the United States over American defense "inferiority" to Russia is not being taken very seriously in Europe.

"I think most Europeans feel this is not a real issue but is just a byproduct of the election campaign," an official at North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters said.

The question probably will not even be discussed when NATO foreign ministers hold their annual spring meeting in Oslo, Norway, May 20, he said.

A FEW EUROPEANS — most of them not in any official position — have joined in decrying what they see as growing Communist military superiority over the West.

But their case was hurt recently when The Times of London gave splash play to a report, said to emanate from NATO circles, alleging that Soviet troops could easily sweep across Western Europe without resorting to nuclear weapons.

The report was later revealed to be a "worst-case study" — a scenario deliberately giving the Communists the benefit of every doubt — written as a graduate thesis by an obscure Belgian officer.

THERE WERE REPORTS that it was leaked to The Times by Americans involved in the election-year debate.

Within NATO itself, there was said to be general support, both on the military and civilian side, for Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld's claim of "rough equivalence" between U.S. and Soviet forces.

"One nation can't be No. 1 in everything," a NATO official said.

Periodic NATO intelligence reports have sounded the alarm over the growth of Soviet naval forces, and the strengthening of Warsaw Pact armies in Eastern Europe. But the reports say Russia is catching up to the West — not surpassing it.

Defense officials here said they recalled arguments over "missile gaps" and similar issues in past presidential election years. They also are used to U.S. intelligence estimates being used for political purposes.

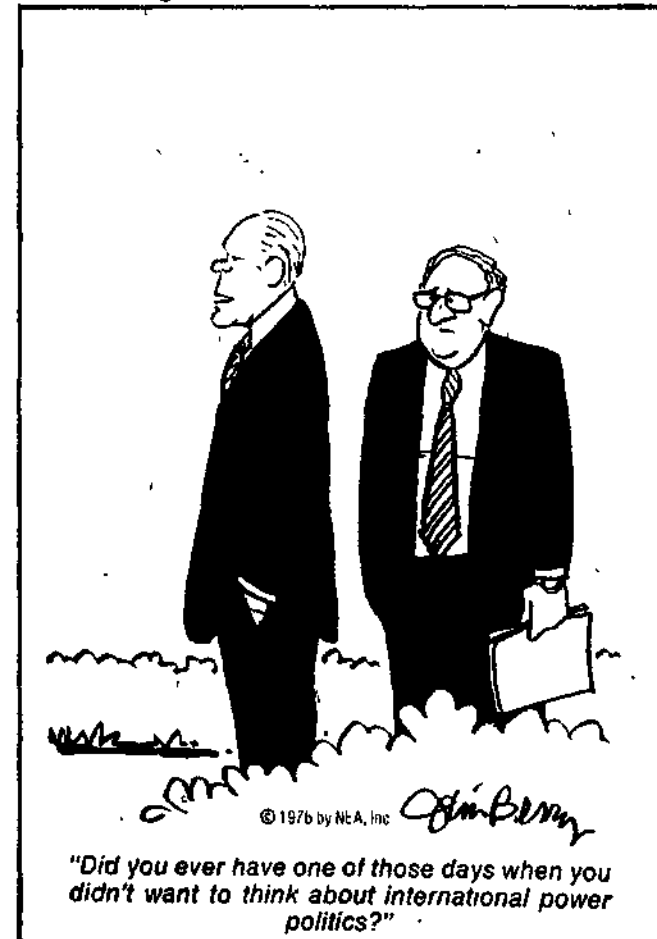

Several years ago, NATO prepared a pessimistic study on the East-West balance, hoping to persuade European nations to increase defense spending.

ON THE EVE of its publication, it was undercut by an optimistic Pentagon study drawn up to counter criticism of the Nixon defense policy. The two studies, in effect, only canceled each other out.

Dateline 1776

By United Press International
NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 29 — A local observer, the Rev. Ezra Stiles, summarized the views of Congress on independence as follows: Maryland delegates not yet clear, though coming to it; some Pennsylvania delegates against; two New Yorkers "toried at heart" and waiting the British peace commission; South Carolina unrepresented for the moment; Virginia delegates "firm and immovable and ready for all events."

Religious book store started when Washington president

I read with great interest the Saturday edition, March 6, of The Herald's LEISURE/TV TIME, your feature article on bookstores. You are to be commended for the excellent descriptions given the different types of stores in the area.

I was very disappointed as I read this article that you did not mention Cokesbury. We are the oldest bookstore in America having started the business back when George Washington was President. We have been serving the Chicago area since 1852 and moved into the Northwest suburbs in 1962.

We are owned and operated by the board of publication of The United Methodist Church and deal mainly in religious books and church supplies. We have the largest selection of religious books in the entire Midwest. We have a retail store located at 1661 N. Northwest Highway which is just on the border between Park Ridge and Des Plaines.

WE CURRENTLY distribute not only for the United Methodist Church but the United Presbyterian, U. S. A. and the United Church of Christ. We consider ourselves a very ecumenical store and serve customers of all faiths including Roman Catholic, Baptist, Lutheran and Episcopal as well as some fringe groups and Jewish Synagogues.

I do invite you to visit our establishment so that I might give you a tour of our operation. We are very proud of our heritage and have grown with the country. The fact that we were burned out in the Chicago fire and then rebuilt after the fire is an indication of our deep roots in the Chicago area.

In addition to the two retail stores in the area (a second one in Elm-hurst) we have our mail order regional service center. We distribute religious materials and books to churches and clergy in a 10 state Midwest area.

Please understand I am not being critical of your article because I think it was a very well done piece. I am sure you were not aware of us or you would have included this bit of history and Americana in this piece. I do hope you will take time to stop by and have a cup of coffee with me so that I can show you our facilities.

Target of IRS 'harassment' to speak at inquiry

by LEA TONKIN

An Elk Grove Village businessman, the target of an extensive Internal Revenue Service investigation, will appear in Chicago today at a taxpayer complaint hearing conducted by U.S. Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M.

J. Richard Dema, president of Tabcor Sales Clearing Inc. and Coronet Producing Co., 500 E. Higgins Rd., will testify at 11 a.m. to discuss "abuse and harassment" by the IRS and the need to change the tax laws.

The public needs a simple, understandable law and an ombudsman to deal with taxpayer problems, he said. "A taxpayer needs somewhere to go," Dema said Wednesday.

AS DEMA EXPLAINS it, his troubles with the IRS began about the same time Atty. General William Scott's investigators took a closer look at what seemed to be charity operations run by Dema. It was "about late 1973 or early 1974," he said.

It seems that Dema, as a promoter of wheelchair sports events and Amvets programs, attracted attention from both the state and the IRS.

The attorney general's Div. of Charitable Trusts and Solicitations was concerned because records indicate Dema kept 92 cents of every dollar collected for certain worthy causes.

In a case that continues to drag on, Dema was sued by Scott in August 1974 for charging unreasonable and unlawful fees in the annual Invitational National Wheelchair Basketball Tournament held in Downers Grove.

Dema in turn sued Scott's office in federal court, charging 32 violations of state law.

DEMA'S TAX PROBLEMS, on the other hand, "are a long story," he said. "It boils down to a multiple examination of my books, way beyond the law," he said.

After much IRS investigative activity described by him as "harassment," Dema finally gained an injunction barring the IRS from scanning his records for the period 1970-1973.

The IRS is appealing the injunction, Dema said. Now he is suing the IRS and its agent, David Feddor, seeking punitive and compensatory damages. He expects the case to be resolved by the end of 1976.

"I'm no hero," Dema said of his fight against the IRS. He adds, "But I just can't run away from it either." He says an IRS attempt to muddy the definition of independent agents started the conflict.

Dema's employees, as independent contractors paid their own taxes to the government. Then the IRS turned around and assessed Dema for taxes he was supposed to collect from the agents, he said.

Dema said the IRS assessed him an added $410,000 in taxes for the 1970-1973 period. During 1970, for example, he was assessed $140,000 on income Dema listed as $80,000. Asked about his income as a promoter, Dema said it's a "small volume." He said it mostly has been reclassified as "transfer payments."

A modern 'Plato' touted as cost-saving teacher

by JAMES A. WHITE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The computer is being touted again as the answer to rising business costs — this time with the promise it can help cut employee training costs and improve productivity.

That pledge is being made by Control Data Corp., now marketing a new computer-based education (CBE) system called Plato that can be bought or leased by businesses for use in their training programs.

"It is my belief CBE training is the most cost effective way to meet the critical need today for improving employee productivity in the face of ever present inflation and add to profits," says Control Data Chairman William C. Norris.

MUCH OF THE company's initial marketing effort will be directed at business-getting firms either to install Plato terminals in their offices or to enroll employees for individually-programmed training in Control Data centers.

Taking that a step farther, Norris says, "We expect to make training available in employees' homes terminal in many areas of the United States within three years."

Plato has developed over more than a decade in conjunction with the University of Illinois, which has granted a non-exclusive patent license to Control Data to produce and market the system.

The Plato user sits at an 8.5-inch square terminal screen and gives directions and answers questions for a selected course through a typewriter-like keyboard. In addition to words and numbers, Plato can flash up animated characters and other graphics, all within a response time of 0.2 second.

THE TERMINAL screen is sensitive to the touch and with the tip of a finger, Plato can be directed to move images. Freddy the Frog, a character in an elementary-level Plato course, hops from one side of the screen to the other when touched or will go wherever the user points.

Plato already is being used by 60 universities which have terminals linked by telephone lines to the University of Illinois. It also is being used to teach a course in high school consumer mathematics in the Baltimore school system.

Another user is the Federal Aviation Administration's training academy in Oklahoma City, where students, mostly FAA personnel, have been using four Plato terminals since last September.

"We're impressed with it and only wish we could afford more of them," Jay Moody, acting assistant academy superintendent, says of the Plato terminals.

THE TERMINALS cost the FAA $7,500 each and so far have been used only for basic courses designed by the FAA, principally in the area of navigational aids. Moody estimates the initial cost to install and operate a 24-terminal classroom now would be $400,000, so the academy plans to see if costs come down before further investment.

"There are some hooks . . . it's still pretty expensive," Moody said. But he said Plato has proved it can be used by the FAA to cut training time without hurting test results.

Savings in instruction time, he said, "can go as high as 30 per cent with some students using the terminals rather than having the instructor in front of the classroom."

Such results encourage Control Data to think Plato can attract a large slice of the $20 billion spent annually on training programs by government, business and educational institutions, no mention the international market.

Work and discipline—and 100 straight!

Tom Pitchford has a pocket full of pennies.

The Arlington tennis coach, in the day-to-day process of running the most successful tennis program in the Mid-Suburban League's history, often runs across stray coppers sitting on the ground.

He keeps them all, putting them in the pocket of his windbreaker, where they stay the entire season.

Prior to Arlington's dual meet with Forest View a couple weeks ago, Pitchford recalled, "I knew we were going to do well against Forest View."

"I didn't find a single penny all day and then just before the meet I was walking behind the bleachers and I found 10 within about five minutes."

Arlington then proceeded to soundly whip the Falcons, 5-0. At the time, it was their 96th MSL dual meet win in succession.

"I think the kids sit up on the steps

Charlie Dickinson
Staff Sportswriter

(in front of Arlington) and throw them down on the street," Pitchford said.

Pitchford figures the students of Arlington High School are just trying to get rid of spare change. He discounts the idea they are doing it to aid their team's team.

Tom Pitchford, and Arlington, don't need that kind of help.

The win over Forest View is just another mark on the books now.

The Prospect Knights were the team to beat Tuesday, and Arlington, as they have been in every conference dual meet for the last 10 years, was equal to the challenge.

They nipped the Knights 3-2 for their 100th victory in a row. You don't win all those meets merely by picking up lucky pennies.

Perhaps the truest measure of Pitchford's success comes from the comments of his peers, the coaches he has beaten regularly over the last decade.

Jim Gelhaar, the first-year coach of Prospect, said, "Tom deserves all the success he's gotten. There are coaches who won't help you if they know they are going to be competing with you."

"But Tom has never been like that. When I was a frosh-soph coach and when I became head coach at Prospect Tom was always willing to share what he knew about tennis with me and I respect him for that."

"I think the reason he is so successful is because he works extremely hard."

It is logical to assume Pitchford has been the determining factor in so many successful seasons.

Through the past 10 years Arlington tennis has produced dozens of quality players but only the coach has remained.

The fact the players keep returning and staying in touch with their coach is more a measure of success to Pitchford than dual meet wins.

"The rewarding thing for me is that the kids keep coming back even after they've left school," he said. "They always tell me the things I taught them that have helped them once they left Arlington."

Pitchford brings up the name Bob Richards (of Wheaties fame) when he explains the values he tries to give to his players and the students in his classes.

"He (Richards) wanted to be the best pole vaulter in the world and he worked 15,000 hours to reach that goal."

"Although he never made it he said he had the self-satisfaction of knowing he gave the most of himself trying to reach it."

"We shoot for the top. We want to be state champions. If you never shoot for the top you'll always have that doubt about whether you could have made it or not."

Shooting for the top involves work and discipline.

"I'm always looking ahead," Pitchford said. "I know the top three eighth grade players who will be freshmen at Arlington next year and they'll step in and play on the sophomore more team."

"I was the first to start tennis in summer school and playing on indoor courts. I spend time at Arlington during the summer getting to know the players."

"My players also play in tournaments during the summer and winter because that's when tennis players are made."

"You don't see much improvement in a player during a short season. That's just a time to hone what they learned during the off-season."

As for discipline, Pitchford disagrees with the coaches who feel there is no way to control young athletes who rebel against any form of control.

"I think the coaches themselves have to be disciplined," he said. "The kids carry those values with them when they leave high school."

"You coach the way you were coached and I had coaches that instilled discipline in me. I still have coaches that I see from high school and I respect them so much that I still call them 'Mr. Coach.'"

The discipline of the Arlington tennis team extends to being on time for practice, how they dress and how they conduct themselves on and off the court.

"One of the nicest things anyone said to me was when Jim Sheehan (the Arlington trainer) told me in all the times he'd seen my teams practice they were totally dedicated and concentrating on what they were doing."

"There was no horsing around and I could be doing something else and they would still work on what they had to do."

"Another coach in the league said he respected Arlington because we never make fun of another team no matter how badly we beat them."

"You hear coaches say there is no discipline these days but I just don't believe that."

Pitchford inherited the head coaching job in 1966 from Ken Schaller, who won the only state team championship for Arlington in 1964.

Jim Merkel and Jon Paczkowski gave Pitchford his only individual state title when they won the doubles championship in 1973.

"Mr. Schaller started from scratch and built the tradition at Arlington," Pitchford said. "Since I've been the coach I've had help from people like Gary Brodman (Pitchford's assistant coach)."

"My family has been great, too. Putting up with my moods and the way I neglect them during the season."

And, of course, there are the players themselves.

"I think I can remember every kid who ever played for me. And the kid who played at No. 2 doubles is just as important as the kid playing No. 1 singles."

"There has always been something special about each team. Something you remember long after the season is over."

Tom Pitchford is successful because he stresses values that are special long after the season is over.

MARK VAN GORP, the younger brother of Arlington tennis player Todd Van Gorp, inspects the special shirts that head coach Tom Pitchford had made to celebrate Arlington's 100th straight MSL dual meet victory.

ARLINGTON tennis coach Tom Pitchford (left) reminisces with a former student, Tom Fowler of Buffalo Grove, at the Cardinals' dual meet with Prospect Tuesday. Fowler was coached by Pitchford in Kankakee, and he wanted to be on hand for the 100th straight victory.

Breitbeil to direct varsity team Saturday at Northwestern

Northwestern's field announcer will say something similar to this:

"Starting at quarterback, Steve Breitbeil."

That's quite an accomplishment for a freshman. At this time last year Breitbeil was a starting catcher for the Rolling Meadows High baseball team. On Saturday he'll be leading one of the varsity teams in the annual Northwestern spring game at Dyche Stadium.

The Wildcats have five rostered quarterbacks, but two of them are playing spring baseball. Junior Randy Dean, last year's No. 1 signalcaller and the Big Ten's second leading passer in '75, will quarterback the other squad.

A strong showing by this 18-year-old athlete could cement his No. 2 quarterback position for the 1976 season.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. Tickets are $2 for adults with free admission for high school students and under.

Next month will also be special for another area man — Bob Scott. Hershey's guidance counselor will be inducted into the Evansville Athletic Hall of Fame on May 15.

Two weeks later Scott will have another thrill in serving for the first time as the head starter for the boys' state track meet.

With this catchy phrase on his business card, how can Scott miss:

"Have gun will travel."

Ever notice that it's almost like an eye test trying to see the finish tape at a track meet?

A soft wool yarn is used for high school meets to aid the judges in determining which runner's torso came across the finish line first.

After seeing pictures of the Drake Relays' finish line, one has to wonder why high schools don't use a more visible material as a finish tape. The college rule book requires the finish tape be composed of a one-inch white gauze or similar visible material.

Besides being able to be seen by both competitors and spectators alike, it would provide more drama to the moments after the finish when the runner jogs to a stop with the tape of victory still clinging to his or her body.

Page through any national magazine and you'll see ad after ad with the words, "Selected for use by the U.S. Olympic Team."

Did you ever wonder how or why the Olympic team selects all those products?

Any business that donates $35,000 to the U.S. Olympic Committee is permitted to advertise the slogan. Another $35,000 and the company can also use the Olympic symbol — five interlocking circles — next to the motto.

One man who probably won't be playing on any team again is Jim Kopatz. The former Illinois quarterback had high hopes of making it in pro baseball.

However, an arm injury forced this former Springfield superstar to quit the Illini baseball team last weekend. Despite the success he's had, Kopatz took the setback in stride:

"Right now, it looks like I'll be get-

Sox generous on, off field in 4-1 loss to Milwaukee

by BOB GALLAS

The White Sox fan giveaway featured a new car Wednesday during the Sox-Milwaukee contest, witnessed by a chilly but intimate gathering of 1,144.

The winner, Mrs. Cathy Davis of Chicago Heights, promptly accepted the car in the seventh inning and then perhaps provided the best comment on what was happening on the field — she drove her new car home.

Playing in only their second game in the last seven days, the White Sox were generous both on and off the field in a 4-1 loss to the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday.

The game, like today's afternoon game with the Brewers, was made a day contest to avoid playing in the evening cold. Despite the sunshine, the 51-degree game time temperature apparently didn't agree with the fans, who stayed away in droves.

Wood went the distance but was tapped for four runs and the loss, his third of the year against two wins. On the mound Wednesday for the fifth time out of 10 games played so far this season, Wood has pitched the last three Sox games, a win at New York, a loss at home against Boston and Wednesday's loss.

Though he had only one bad inning, a three-run third, Wood helped nurse some ailing Brewer bats back to health by doling out a hit to each of the Milwaukee starters.

"They (Milwaukee) have guys that handle the bat pretty good," said Sox manager Paul Richards after the game "We got as many hits as they did. Actually, we hit the ball harder. But now we need to hit it between them instead of right at them."

Cleon Jones shook off his slump and singled his first three times up as the Sox designated hitter to go three for four, raising his batting average from .192 to .267.

Jim Moyer, who leads Sox regulars in four trips, came up with a couple of fine defensive plays, including an unassisted double play in the seventh inning to draw Richards' praise. "He (Spencer) seems to make one (a good play) every day," Richards said.

The Sox are hitting .257 as a team, but several are struggling along at the plate. Ralph Garr (192) showed some signs of breaking out with a single and a well-hit fly out to right field. Garr was one for four. Carlos May (125) came in as a pinch batter for Buddy Bradford who had struck out three times, but Carlos grounded out. Chet Lemon (.184) was hitless in three trips.

The Sox scored their lone run in the first when Ralph Garr singled, advanced to third on a passed ball and fielder's choice, then scored on Cleon Jones' double to right.

Four consecutive hits in the third inning gave the Brewers three runs. Don Money singled in Charlie Moore and Pete Garcia. Moore had singled and went to third on Garcia's double. Then shortstop Robin Yount got the fourth straight Brewer hit, a single that drove in Money all the way from first when the ball got past Garr in left field.

The Brewers added a run in the ninth when Hank Aaron singled and Sixth Lezcano doubled to put runners at second and third. Kurt Bevacqua, running for Aaron, scored from third on an infield sacrifice by Bobby Darwin.

SOX SHORTS: The White Sox have hit eight home runs in the club's first 10 games this year. Catchers Pete Varney and Brian Downing have slammed four of them, a new apiece.

"Autograph Corner," a new feature at the ballpark, makes its debut Saturday when the Sox meet Detroit in an afternoon game. Players will be available to sign autographs between noon and 12:30 p.m. in the left field corner of the park. Pitchers Wilbur Wood and Dave Hamilton along with infielder Bill Stein will be the first three players featured.

One of the more popular Sox attractions, "Bat Day," will be Sunday when the Sox meet Detroit in a 12:30 p.m. doubleheader. The first 25,000 children under 14 accompanied by an adult will receive a free Louisville Slugger bat.

Cubs hang on in ninth

From Herald wire services

SAN DIEGO — Cub reliever Buddy Schultz came in and silenced a San Diego rally for the second night in a row as the Cubs held on for an 8-5 win in the third of a four-game series here Wednesday night.

Schultz entered the game with the bases loaded and one out, the Cubs ahead 8-4, and pinch hitter Willie McCovey at the plate. The Cub lefty got McCovey to ground out and forced Jerry Turner to pop out to end the game, gaining a save for starter Bill Bonham who is now 2-2.

The Cubs had opened up a 7-0 lead after four innings by rocking Padre starter Randy Jones, who had won his first four starts.

Rick Monday started the slugging in the third with a two-run homer to left center field after Dave Roselle singled. Jose Cardenal walked, Bill Madlock put down a bunt single, and Cardenal and Madlock pulled a successful double steal. Jerry Morales drove in the third run of the inning with a sacrifice fly.

The Cubs had misused an excellent chance to score in the first when Monday walked and Cardenal reached on an error. But Monday was doubled off second base after Madlock's long smash to right field was caught by Dave Winfield.

Jones, a 28-game winner last year and a winner his first four times out in 1976, was knocked from the box in the fourth. Manly Trillo led off the inning with a double and went to third on a single by Steve Swisher.

Trillo scored on an error by Hector Torres at short and, after Torres robbed Bonham of a hit, Monday ripped a two-run double and Cardenal drove him home with a hit up the middle.

Bonham had to pitch out of minor jams in each of the first four innings, including the fourth when Willie Davis led off with a double. But the Cub righthander retired Winfield, Doug Rader and Mike Ivey to quell the rally.

The Cubs and Braves weren't so fortunate in the fifth when consecutive singles by Fred Kendall, pinch hitter Enzo Hernandez, and Jerry Turner loaded the bases with one out.

Kendall scored when Trillo bobbled a possible doubleplay grounder and had to settle for an out at first. Davis then blasted his three-run shot over the fence in right, cutting the Cubs lead to 7-4.

Sports world Buffalo evens series with Celts

Randy Smith's 22-foot jump shot with three seconds left Wednesday night propelled the Buffalo Braves to a 124-122 NBA playoff victory over the Boston Celtics, tying the Eastern Conference semi-final series at two games each.

The fifth game will be played Friday night at Boston.

After Smith connected, rookie John Shumate partially blocked Don Nelson's 20-foot side court jumper just before the buzzer. The Celtics played for the third straight game without starting forward John Havlicek, who has an injured left foot.

The dramatic finish came after Buffalo's Ernie DiGregorio led a fourth-quarter charge with 13 of his 21 points in his first playoff start since facing these same Celtics in 1974.

It was DiGregorio's first start since Feb. 27, 27 games ago, and he responded with 11 fourth quarter points while the NBA's top scorer, Bob McAdoo, was on the bench with five personal fouls.

McAdoo, who returned briefly but fouled out with 1:11 left, wound up with a game high 30 points.

Shumate, the Notre Dame rookie who tallied 20 points, hit two free throws with 54 seconds remaining for a 122-120 Buffalo lead.

Dave Cowens, who faced Boston with 29 points and 28 rebounds, recovered his own shot and scored with seven seconds showing on the clock to forge the 12th tie of the game.

Then came Smith's clincher, his 27th and 28th points of the game.

The Braves moved to a 94-88 third quarter lead and had their biggest margin of the final period 112-105 with 5:45 remaining on DiGregorio's three-point play. But the Celtics came back on the shooting of Don Nelson, Havlicek's replacement, who sank 10 of his 27 points down the stretch.

Jim McMillian added 18 points for the Braves while Jo Jo White put in 28 for Boston. Charlie Scott scored 16 before fouling out early in the fourth quarter.

Rookie's first hit a big one

Doug Clarey, in his second major league at-bat, hit a two-run homer with two out in the top of the 18th inning Wednesday to provide the St. Louis Cardinals with a 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The 22-year-old Clarey, an infielder from nearby Cupertino, Calif., hit his homer off loser Mike Caldwell for his initial hit in the major leagues.

Willie Crawford, who started a 14th inning rally with his fourth hit and scored for a 2-1 Cards' lead, opened the 18th with his fifth single. After Bee Bee Richard popped up trying to sacrifice, Don Kessinger forced Crawford as the Giants' infield barely missed making its third double play. Clarey then batted for starting pitcher Mike Proly and hit a 1-1 pitch over the leftfield fence. For Proly, it was his first major league victory and his first decision.

Proly, however, allowed the Giants to tie the score in the 14th on a pinch hit double by Glenn Adams.

John Montefusco went the first eight innings and struck out a National League season high 12 batters, while John Denny held the Giants to four hits over seven innings. A throwing error by Denny scored the first San Francisco run, while the Cards scored their initial run on a double by Vic Harris in the sixth.

Ali foe 'loses' sparring test

Muhammad Ali and challenger Jimmy Young concluded preparations for their title bout in Landover, Md. Friday night, and if Wednesday's workouts are any indication of what will transpire then, the champion should have little trouble disposing of Young.

The 27-year-old Young, who presently weighs 200 pounds but hopes to be up to 211 for Ali, worked three unimpressive rounds against Mike Koranicki, a stablemate of Joe Frazier. Koranicki repeatedly tagged Young with left hand leads and once stung the challenger with a sharp right cross to the head.

"Bobby Brown, my trainer, told me I looked good. So that's all that counts," said Young, who was dressed in a yellow tee shirt with the inscription "Bubbling Brown Sugar." "I'm glad of it because it helped me. I'll go into the ring Friday night with a different attitude.

"I'm in the best shape of my career and I'm gonna do everything in my power, and more, to win."

Ali, meanwhile, who presently weighs 231, took it easy and passed up sparring, preferring to work on his legs. He has worked less than 100 rounds in the gym, compared to 180 for Young, but that does not concern Angelo Dundee, Ali's trainer.

"Sparring is not the big key with Ali because he's the worst gymnasium fighter in the world," Dundee said. "What's important to him is the road work, getting his legs in shape."

Martina survives 1st-round scare

A weary Martina Navratilova averted an upset by little-known Bunny Bruning in the first-round of the $100,000 Family Circle women's tennis tournament Wednesday, rallying to a 6-3, 1-6, 6-4 victory in Florida.

Navratilova, the strong left-hander born in Czechoslovakia, arrived from a tournament in Japan and a Tuesday night exhibition match in New York just hours before taking the court against Bruning.

Bruning entered the 32-women field Tuesday night after Marcie Louie sprained her ankle and was forced to pull out.

In other matches, Chris Evert, a master of clay courts, easily routed Wendy Turnbull, 6-2, 6-1; Betty Stove edged Valerie Ziegenfuss, 7-5, 6-3; and Marita Redondo squeaked past Kathy May, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

Navratilova managed to win the first set fairly easily before things fell apart for her. Bruning exploded to a 6-1 victory in the second set and built up a 3-0 lead in the final set before Navratilova could regain her composure.

Navratilova fought back to tie the final set at 3-3 and again at 4-4 before winning the final two games.

Baseball all-star game sold out

The Philadelphia Phillies announced Wednesday there were no seats available for the July 21 All-Star game and that the mail order sale of tickets to the game had to be canceled.

Phillies Executive Vice President William Giles said 42,000 of the stadium's 58,000 seats are already committed to season ticket plans and the other 16,000 are reserved for persons connected with baseball.

Giles said there would be an over-the-counter sale of 4,000 standing-room tickets and any remaining reserve seats 9 a.m. June 26 at the Phillies ticket windows.

"It's unfortunate that we can't take care of more of our loyal fans but we have no alternative. There's no doubt in my mind we could sell 200,000 tickets for the game if we had the space."

And in other sports news...

Doctors are amazed at the recovery of Indiana University's Steve Heidenreich, a sub-four-minute miler who was struck by a hit-run auto while running a late night workout less than six weeks ago. Heidenreich, who had a chance to qualify for the Olympics in Montreal, suffered injuries that forced him to undergo delicate brain surgery, but now he is "up and around" and already starting "workouts" — walking six laps around the local high school track near his home in Watertown, S.D. Heidenreich has now set a goal for the 1980 Olympic Games.

Scott May, star of the Indiana University NCAA basketball champs, added another award to his glittering collection Wednesday when he was named winner of the Joe Lapchick Memorial Trophy as the outstanding senior collegiate player in the country.

Dave Roberts of the Detroit Tigers pitched his second two-hitter of the season Wednesday as the Tigers beat Oakland 8-1.

Watson's slam in 7th gives Maine West win

A dramatic grand slam home run by Glen Watson in the bottom of the seventh inning gave the Maine West Warriors a 6-3 win over Niles North Wednesday and sole possession of first place in the Central Suburban League South.

Watson's blast, a 385-foot shot to center, came with one out. Buddy Doroskin pitched the distance for the Warriors, who are now 4-1 in the CSL South. Doroskin struck out seven and walked seven.

Bill Dusz went the distance and was on the mound for Niles North when Watson hit his homer, which knocked in Dean Carpenter, Tim Platek and Rob Earhart.

Niles took a 3-0 lead in the third.

West answered with runs in the third, fourth and then four in the seventh. In the third, Platek got on base with a fielder's choice, stole second, then came home on a single by Earhart.

In the fourth, Bob Zuccarini singled, went to second on a wild pitch and third on an error. Zuccarini scored on a fielder's choice by Dean Carpenter.

The Warriors, now 6-2 over-all, play today at Maine South.

St. Viator tops Holy Cross, 6-1

St. Viator got back into action after a weather layoff with a win against an old nemesis, Holy Cross.

The Lions from Viator, behind the one-run pitching of Jim Simmerman, grabbed their first win of the season against Cross after three losses, a 6-1 triumph.

Now 5-1 in East Suburban Catholic Conference play. The Lions were led on offense by Nick Baffa and Jim Kane, each of whom had a pair of RBIs and scored a run.

Simmerman struck out three and walked two in the game, played at Holy Cross.

After Holy Cross had scored a run in the second inning, Viator came back with three runs in the third frame, on singles by Mike Dooley and Jim Kane, followed by Baffa's two RBI single. Baffa, who went to second on the throw to the plate, eventually scored on a single by Jim Thompson.

Viator added a run in the fourth when Dooley got on base on an error, stole second, then scored on Kane's base hit.

In the sixth, Viator added two more. After singles by Maude and Mike Hermanson, Dooley drove in Maude from second with a single, sending Hermanson to second. Then Kane rapped his third hit of the day, a single, to drive in Hermanson with the sixth Viator run.

The Lions play next on Friday when they travel to play Barrington.

ting a job. You know, sports isn't everything. There's more to life than playing games."

Playing a game in Canton, N.Y. proved impossible recently for Colgate and St. Lawrence. The game ended in a 1-1, 10-inning tie. Reason for calling the contest — sun!

It was shining slightly over the pitcher's shoulder, blinding the batters. And the New York Yankees thought they were at a disadvantage when White Sox pitchers were using white sweatshirts.

The sun was also pretty bright Tuesday afternoon in the Northwest Suburbs, but that wasn't the reason why Rolling Meadows' game with Arlington was called off. Officially, the boys' game was postponed because of cold weather.

Ironically, most high school athletic events were played at the rest of the schools, including a girls' softball game at Arlington against Rolling Meadows!

Cards, Mertins stop Bison; Baues one-hits Falcons

A Herald staff report
Arlington ace righthander John Mertins survived scares in the first and last innings, but took the Bison by the horns and hurled the Cardinals past Buffalo Grove, 4-0, in the showdown of a busy afternoon of Mid-Suburban League baseball action.

Mertins outdueled Buffalo Grove southpaw Tim Prokof in earning his third straight league victory of the season and lowering his earned run average to a stingy 0.33. Both teams entered the contest with identical 4-0 records, the only unbeaten clubs in the league.

Arlington touched Prokof for a run in the first on a hit batsman, Mike Mayerch's single and a sacrifice fly by John Vukovich and added two more in the second on a walk, three straight sacrifices and Matt Spill's single to left.

The Cardinals closed out the scoring in the sixth on an error, a sacrifice, a walk and Mertins' run-scoring double down the leftfield foul line.

Buffalo Grove threatened with two hits in the first frame by Mike Marshall and Phil Czownyka and again in the seventh with Czownyka and Steve Chobanian left stranded.

BAUES CUFFS FALCONS
Hits and runs were about as scarce as tropical breezes at Forest View Wednesday afternoon where Palatine, behind the nifty pitching of Bob Baues, handcuffed the Falcons, 1-0....

Southpaw Baues fashioned a nifty one-hitter in recording the win. His only free pass was issued to one of Forest View's "little men," John Boyle, and he whiffed nine.

Joe Slawinski, representing the hosts on the mound, also fired a one-hitter. The Pirates collected an additional hit while lefty Jim Petran spelled Slawinski to face Palatine slugger Jeff Williams, with Williams ruining the strategy by pulling a leadoff double in the sixth.

Dan McSweeney had the other Pirate hit but neither were involved in the game's only score. The run came across in the fourth after Al Knotek had reached on an error and moved to third on a fielder's choice and a balk. Bruce Peterson's squeeze bunt then brought Knotek home.

Dave Fulton had the lone Falcon safety, dumped into short center after Baues had retired the first 13 batters in order. Left fielder Knotek helped out with a pair of nice catches including one diving grab to end the game.

IGRASEK BLANKS SAXONS
Rolling Meadows righthander John Igrasek racked up his second straight victory, striking out 12 Schaumburg batters in six innings, as the Mustangs charged to a 6-0 decision at Schaumburg Wednesday.

Meadows rocked Saxon starter Tim McCue for three runs in the first two innings as the Mustangs moved to their 2nd MSL win after three defeats. Mike Bramlett's triple in the first with Paul Marsilio on base was all Igrasek to left field by Jim Broderick. The Saxons are now 4-3 in league play.

Igrasek mowed down the big Schaumburg bats on just two hits in his six innings of work. Both safeties came off the bat of Terry Zarbeck, who beat out an infield tap in the fourth and hooked a liner into the right field corner for a triple in the sixth.

PROSPECT OVERCOMES CONANT

The Prospect Knights caught the Conant Cougars with three runs in the top of the seventh and pushed across two more in the eighth to post a 6-4 victory.

The win left the Knights at 4-2 in the Mid-Suburban League.

Conant starter Rob Totten had the best of Prospect, holding them to one run and a pair of hits through the first six innings.

Jeff Johnson had the hot bat for the Cougars, stroking three singles in five at bats.

Prospect was facing a 4-1 deficit in their half of the seventh and responded with three extra base hits to drive Totten from the mound.

The killing hit of the inning was a two-run double by third baseman Mike Crnich.

Todd Doney had a run scoring single to key Prospect's deciding eighth inning.

HAWKS VICTORIOUS
Playing in their second extra-inning game in two days, the Hoffman Estates Hawks rallied for two runs to defeat the hosting Elk Grove Grenadiers in eight innings 10-8.

A run-scoring single by Jon Staback and a wild pitch provided the winning margin. After the Grenadiers reached relief pitcher Bob Slawek for a single and a double in the bottom of the eighth inning, Slawek stranded the runners to earn the win.

The Hawks appeared on their way to an 8-4 victory going into the bottom of the seventh. But they hadn't figured on the grand slam pinch-hit homer by Tom Curran.

Hoffman had built its lead on two runs in both the sixth and seventh with the help of an error, ground out and a two-run double by Joe Gajewski.

Bob Ray, the third Gren pitcher used, was the loser.
Gajewski and Staback led Hoffman's 11-hit attack, each going two-for-four. Tony Kees and Kevin McCloughan each had two hits for the Grove.

BARRINGTON BEATS HERSEY
Barrington's Carl Shellenback pitched six strong innings and slugged a second-inning home run as the visiting Broncos turned back Hersey, 9-3, in a non-conference game Wednesday. Barrington erased a 3-2 Hersey lead by scoring five times in the third inning.

The Huskies got all their runs in the second on hits by Chuck Veselits, Bobby Hart, and Brian Hastings, a bases-loaded walk to Steve Gianinni, and a passed ball.

Beverly wins roll-off

For two teams that just missed bowling for the league title you might think a roll-off for second place might be a letdown. But if any bowler on either team felt unmotivated they didn't show it in their performance as Beverly Lanes defeated Teddy's Liquors 10-4 to capture the second place trophy in the Paddock Classic Traveling League.

Formco Metal Products emerged out of a four-team scramble to win the first half of the classic league by one point over Beverly Lanes. Formco maintained their momentum throughout the second half and once again were crowned the undisputed Paddock League champions. The strong second place finish by Teddy's Liquors in the second half necessitated a roll-off for second.

Beverly jumped out of the gate quickly and won the first two games 971-928 and 983-924. Teddy's Liquors held the lead throughout the third game but was forced to hang on for a seven-pin victory after Beverly charged in the latter frames. One more strike by anchorman Bob Glaser in the 10th frame would have reversed the decision.

Needing a total of eight points to win under the play-off format Beverly held a 5-2 lead. Ken Miller led the scoring in the first round by shooting 205-221-184 for a 608 series for Beverly.

Beverly Lanes increased their lead to 7-2 when they won the fourth game 1001-986. This forced Teddy's to win the next three games in a row to have a chance for the over-all victory.

Mike Wagner started the fifth game for Teddy's by stringing the first eight strikes in a row. Hopes for a perfect game were ended when his ninth ball broke a little too sharply into the pocket and the four pin refused to fall. The booming 268 game by Wagner gave him and his teammates a 952-923 win and made the point total stand after five games at 7-4 in favor of Beverly.

The hopes for Teddy's Liquors were severely damaged when they started the sixth game with four opens in their first six frames. Bob Glaser poured in a 234 game for Beverly to lead his team 934-888 game victory and the second place trophy 10 points to 4.

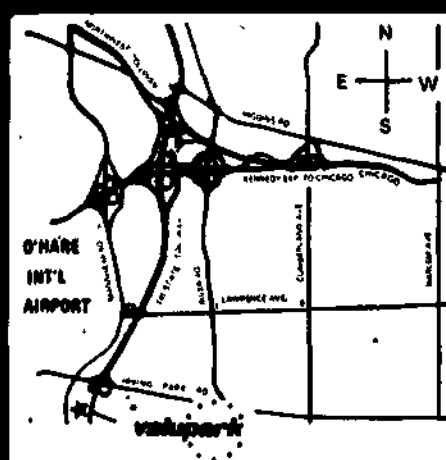

Glaser averaged 202 for the roll-off to lead all scorers. Don Sawicke averaged 191 to be top scorer for Teddy's with teammates Bob Weseman and Mike Wagner bowling at a 190 clip for the six game match.

Developers drop high-rise plans for one-family homes

by LYNN ASINOF

Wastebaskets are full of plans for high-rise, high-density, planned-unit developments.

The planned-unit development concept, which once made Northwest suburban developers see dollar signs, originally was hailed as a giant step forward in land development. Today, mention a planned-unit development and any self-respecting developer will shudder.

In almost every town in the Northwest suburbs, a huge apartment or condominium project is being redesigned for single-family homes.

The reason — no one really likes to live in high-rise, high-density developments.

"You can build high-rises by the lake, but you can't build them in a cornfield," said Jerry Stone of Residential Planning Corp.

"PEOPLE ARE willing to give up privacy to live in a place they want to live," Stone said, noting that people will sacrifice a lot of privacy for a view of Lake Michigan. "But you are not going to give up privacy to look at a highway."

Stone and several others at a meeting of the Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago said the planned-unit development concept was a fad. They said it was overrated and oversold, and the industry got caught off guard.

"It isn't that they didn't look far enough ahead. They didn't look ahead at all," Stone said. He said the early demand for multiple-family housing was caused by the baby boom, which created a big singles market for apartments in the late 1960s.

The homebuilding industry responded. In fact, it overreacted and began ignoring the basic fact that people want single-family homes. People want back yards and they want privacy.

A RECENT survey conducted by the builders' association showed that 91.2 per cent of potential buyers want a single-family home. About 81 per cent said they would settle for a smaller home rather than purchase a townhome. Nearly 80 per cent said they would settle for a smaller lot to be in the neighborhood they want.

James Hemphill of C. A. Hemphill and Associates, said studies always have shown that people want single-family homes.

"The single-family home is what people want. Whatever it is we produce, it is going to have to be as much like a single-family house as it possibly can," he said.

In the day when developers were making their pitch for planned-unit developments, municipalities were told that single-family homes were a tax burden.

MIKE LEVIN of Barton-Aschman and Associates, consulting firm, said fundamental changes are taking place which now make the single-family home the most desirable form of development.

First, Levin said the declining birth rate is taking its toll on the school systems, which were geared for large school-age populations. He said school districts now are encouraging single-family developments because they attract school-age children.

The single-family house also has been shown to provide the most stable population for long-term community planning.

Finally, Levin said the tax structure is changing and moving away from the traditional property tax. He said state income tax and motor fuel tax funds are returned to the local government according to population.

"That means every resident in your community is generating the same amount of revenue. If this trend continues, it will favor residential development because it brings in people," he said.

WHILE THE single-family home is taking on new value, the planned-unit developments are beginning to show their weaknesses. Jerry Berger of Bergson Corp. said a major problem is that no one wants to maintain the private streets and open space inherent in planned developments.

In addition, the recreational facilities included in most projects have turned out to be a headache, while the homeowners' associations designed to govern the complex often are unworkable.

As a result, developers are reworking their plans for projects that won approval under the planned-unit-development concept, two, three or four years ago.

In Palatine, for example, plans for a 1,874-unit planned development called Plum Grove Hills have been scrapped in favor of a 70-acre single-family home project.

PARTRIDGE HILL in Hoffman Estates originally was proposed as a multi-level townhouse development. It is now a single-family project. The same is true of Schaumburg's Kingsport Village, which was originally proposed as a 710-unit townhouse and condominium development.

Some developers and planners think the future lies with new zoning concepts and innovative approaches to the rental market.

Duane Linden, an architect and land planner, favors concept zoning with special design criterion. He said this approach gives the builder a choice of housing but provides specific standards that must be met.

Berger, however, said he thinks developers will return to the concept of straight zoning.

"Not necessarily all single-family, but straight zoning," he said, (Continued on Page 9)

HOMEBUILDERS now are saying they never should have built high-rise apartments out in the cornfields of the Northwest suburbs.

Homebuilding rises 100%, but apartment starts drop

A swing towards single-family development in the first quarter of 1976 resulted in a 100 per cent increase in permits for single-family homes, reports the Bell Federal Savings and Loan Assn.

Permits were issued for 3,564 single-family homes during the first quarter of 1976 compared to 1,782 permits for the first three months of 1975.

"The significant difference occurred in the unincorporated areas where a 127 per cent increment was observed with single-family permits rising from 342 to 775 in the first quarter of this year," said Roland J. Barstow, president of Bell Federal.

Barstow said apartment construction has declined significantly in the six-county metropolitan area. In the first quarter of 1976, apartment permits declined 17 per cent, totaling only 1,714 compared to the 2,055 reported in 1975.

"IN VIEW OF the decline of apartment construction so far this year, it will be interesting to observe this market in the next three-to six-month period," Barstow said.

Barstow said apartment recovery is essential to a full-fledged recovery in the homebuilding industry.

"To achieve this, builders will have to become a good deal more confident that they can sell or rent new multiple-family units in addition to the current backlog," he said.

Several signs, however, point to a housing recovery, Barstow said. For example, funds have continued to flow into savings institutions at near-record levels while mortgage rates have leveled off at about 8.75 per cent.

Rental vacancies are minimal, Barstow said, noting this could provide the stimulus for multi-family construction. Builders also have reduced their inventory problems and have responded to consumer demand for fewer and smaller rooms.

"WHEN ALL is said and done, consumer confidence is really the key to reviving the homebuilding industry," Barstow said, noting that inflation, employment, mortgage money and interest rates all play an important part.

"At the present time all of these factors are favorable, so I can't help but feel that housing will continue to build up strength in the next quarter," he said.

Schaumburg was sixth among the housing leaders in the first quarter of 1976, with permits issued for 101 single-family homes. Permits for 81 of those houses were issued in March.

Coming up

May 1-3: Realty World's first national convention begins at 9 a.m. at the Sheraton Chicago. Management expert John C. Lang, Clifford A. Robedeaux and Arnold Carter will be the principal speakers.

May 2-4: The corporate planning executive committee of the American Bankers Assn. will conduct a workshop for bank planning officers at the Chicago Marriott Hotel.

May 2-5: "The Crisis in EDP Organization" will be the topic of a 2½-day meeting sponsored by the Center for Management Development of American Management Associations at the AMA, Management Center, Chicago.

May 5: The Chicago Real Estate Board will conduct its annual installation at the 93rd Annual Banquet in the grand ballroom of the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

Let George do it? Most owners would rather not

The great majority of our nation's homeowners are also do-it-yourselfers, said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston.

Goss said recent IMIC studies show that 74-plus per cent of all private, single-family detached homes, had some home repairs performed in 1975 by members of the family. This figure reflects an 11 per cent increase over 1974.

Reports already tallied this year indicate that the dollar volume for home repairs in 1976 will exceed a projected $30 billion. The estimates for 1976 also show more than 100 million remodeling assignments involving 75 different categories of house improvements.

Other IMIC findings include the following facts:

- Where improvements or repairs are made, 67 per cent are performed by the male head of the household; 24 per cent are the result of a son's efforts and the remainder are done by female family members or male-in-laws.

- The median age of the head of the household is 44 — three years below the median age for all household heads in the nation.

- At $14,829, doer households have a median annual income that is six per cent over the median annual income for all households of four members — two adults plus two children.

"Interest in home improvement activity is growing throughout the nation — but especially so in the sunshine belt," Goss said. "The climate-comfort states — Alabama, Arizona, Carolinas, Florida, Georgia, New Mexico and Southern California — are attracting new residents and new home workshop enthusiasts in record proportions."

The new breed of home repairer has also proved professional in his interest — extension courses in plumbing, carpentry and interior decoration are mushrooming.

"Doing basic homework at home," Goss said, "is an effective way to keep maintenance costs down. It also helps perk creative talents."

Prudential opens office

The Prudential Insurance Co. recently opened a district agency in Schaumburg at 850 E. Higgins Rd.

Leo M. Ruefer Jr. is manager of the new agency. He was manager of the firm's Palatine district.

The sales managers are Edgar Danielson, Anthony Liga, James Sedlack, Nicholas Weinrauch and Leonard Zurek.

Cost, convenience decide home vs. coin-op washing

Whether you buy a washing machine and dryer for doing your laundry at home or haul it in one big basket to a coin-op depends on cost and convenience. Costs can be determined with a fair degree of precision. Figuring convenience isn't so easy. When spending for any major purchase, comparing costs and benefits on some rational basis will get you more value per dollar.

Attempting to compare costs of a washer and dryer vs. a coin-op yourself can be time consuming. Fortunately, home economists at the USDA's Consumer and Food Economics Institute have updated their figures from an earlier study on "The Cost of Doing Laundry at Home" to provide the answers.

For any size load the cost breaks into three elements — equipment, operations (electricity to operate the washer, water and gas to heat about two-thirds of the water) and supplies (detergent and disinfectant). Costs range from 48 cents for an 8-pound load using heated water for three loads per week to 24 cents for an 8-pound load using cold water for 10 loads per week. In each case the difference between using cold water and heated water amounted to 4 cents a load. Frequency decreased costs, as the more you use the washer, the less it costs per load.

Managing your family's money

by MERLE E. DOWD

The automatic washer used in the study cost $305, was bought on credit and was expected to last 11 years (determined from another survey). Repairs for the washer were figured at 5 per cent or $15.25 per year. Either a decrease in service life or an increase in service costs (almost a certainty due to inflation) would change the cost per load slightly — particularly at the high end or maximum loads washed each week.

Supplies were figured for detergent at 9 cents per cup and for a chlorine disinfectant at 93 cents a gallon. Detergent and disinfectant cost 11 cents for each 8-pound load. Electricity and gas for heating the water came to 9 cents using heated water or 5 cents with cold water for each 8-pound load.

Laundry with 12-pound and 14-pound washing machines showed a clear cost advantage for the bigger machines. For only 5 cents more, half again as many clothes could be washed in the 12-pound machine. However, moving up from a 12-pound to a 14-pound machine cost 4 cents more per load but increased capacity by only 2 pounds.

Using heated water, the cost per pound of clothes washed varied from 6 cents a load for the 8-pound machine to 4.4 cents per load for the 12-pound washer, and 4.1 cents a load for the 14-pound washer — all operated at the maximum load and at 3 loads per week. Similar reductions affected costs with more loads per week.

Drying costs also varied only according to the machine costs. For drying an 8-pound load in 30 minutes, the cost amounted to 32 cents per load at a rate of 3 loads a week. When the frequency increased to 10 loads a week, the cost per load dropped to 19 cents.

The dryer cost $229 and was estimated to last 14 years with a similar repair allowance of 5 per cent of the dryer's cost. Operating cost included electricity to run the dryer and to supply the heat. When bigger loads were dried for 45 and 60 minutes, costs increased to 39 cents and 47 cents respectively at 3 loads a week. At the rate of 10 loads a week the cost for 45 minutes was 26 cents and at 60 minutes was 34 cents.

Washing and drying one 8-pound load of laundry in a coin-op do-it-yourself operation typically costs around 55 cents per load. On this basis, unless you averaged at least 5 loads of laundry each week, doing your laundry would cost less at a coin-op.

Convenience shows two faces. Some homemakers prefer to wash and dry laundry at home. For many loads, a home laundry strings out to many hours washing and drying one load at a time. Others prefer to haul a week's or two weeks' laundry to a coin-op and use several machines to get the job done quickly.

When you know the facts and evaluate your own ideas about convenience, you can decide which route makes the most sense for your home.

Printer buys Elk Grove site

Bennett & Kahnweiler Associates announced the sale of the one story 38,791 square foot building at 855 Morse Ave., Elk Grove Village to Kukla Press, Inc. The property, formerly occupied by Metropolitan Printing Company, was owned by Field Enterprises, Inc.

Kukla Press will extensively remodel the building to accommodate its greatly expanding printing business.

Stock losses small, thanks to late rally

NEW YORK (UPI) — A late blue-chip rally just about erased earlier losses as prices closed mixed Wednesday in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange despite a disappointing government economic report and interest rate concerns.

The Dow Jones industrial average, off about six points at the outset, rallied for a 5.20-point gain to 1,000.71. The blue-chip average, which has experienced trouble at the 1,000 level, lost 7.25 points Tuesday.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.37 to 102.13, the NYSE common stock index added 0.10 to 54.35 and the average price of an NYSE common share increased by six cents.

DECLINES, however, edged advances, 761 to 649, among the 1,858 issues crossing the tape. The 480 unchanged issues reflected considerable investor uncertainty.

Volume totaled only 15,790,000 shares, down from the 17,760,000 traded Tuesday. The lack of volume showed the selling pressure was not strong and that the buying was selective, analysts said.

Generally, most analysts said the blue chips rallied when selling dried up during the afternoon. Some early selling occurred after the Commerce Department reported its leading economic indicators fell 0.4 per cent in March, the first decline since last October. While the report disappointed some investors, economists were not alarmed.

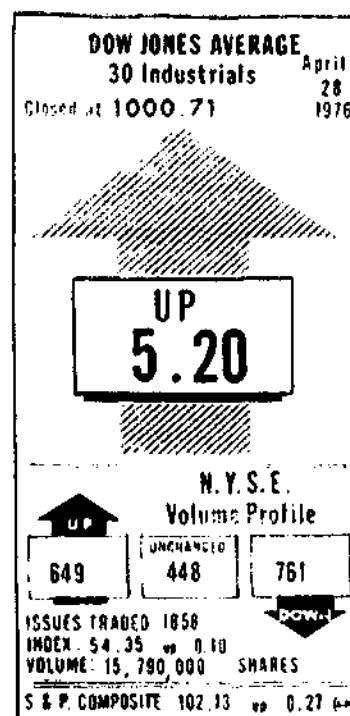

On Tuesday, the government reported the nation had a trade deficit on balance of payments of $1.6 billion in the first quarter, the first deficit since the first quarter of 1974.

MARCOR TOPPED the Big Board active, losing 1/4 to 36 1/4 on 291,100 shares, including a block of 179,700 shares at 36 1/4.

Texaco, which reported higher earnings Tuesday, was the second most active Big Board issue, gaining 1/4 to 27 1/4 on 237,700 shares. Occidental Petroleum, which reported lower earnings was third, off 1/4 to 14-3/8 on 194,000 shares.

Bandag, the fourth most active Big Board issue, fell 3-1/8 to 23 on 179,500 shares, including a block of 94,500 shares at 23.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased two cents. Volume totaled 1,920,000 shares, compared with 2,090,000 traded Tuesday.

Plush design for bath luxury

Totally North American in concept is the carpeted bathroom. Where else in the world do people actually have the comfort of toe-teasing cushions on the floor?

In Japan, dirt-removal is accomplished outside of the tub. So the rooms are either all wood or all tile. A hand shower attachment does the honors for soaping and rinsing. And only then does one step into the steaming hot bathtub!

In Italy and England, it's all tile. And cold, too, except for the heated towels. Some wise person decided to use exposed steam-heat pipes as towel bars — and now it's a tradition.

But in the United States and Canada we have indulged ourselves when it comes to warming up the bath. Even an oldie, such as the one shown today, can be given a full-dress treatment.

Designed by Meredith Zalastani of Braintree, Mass., it's blatantly fun and a little funky. The princess chair fills a barren corner, resists steam damage (wicker and rattan prefer moisture to overheated dryness) and provides a spot for sit-down grooming chores.

The pillowslips and table cover are washable cottons and polyesters, terry toweling can't get hurt and the tie-backs are equally moisture-proof. So what appears extravagant actually is practical.

Your home

by Carolyn Murray

Zalastani began the furnishings project by selecting the completely washable floor covering. The plush "Camelot," by Burlington House's Area Rug division, is made of polyester pile yarns and has a no-slip Duregan back. And although it acts here as a wall-to-wall covering, it is sold in 6-foot widths or in carpet-size kits up to 6 by 9 feet.

The designer specified a coffee brown for this bath, but 14 other colors are available, at about $8.50 a yard.

For this older apartment, the designer chose an opulent peacock feather-patterned covering for walls and ceiling. But for a lower key approach, one of the textured bamboo-type wall coverings or solid paint color would work nicely. The main idea is to give the bath some personality along with all that upholstered comfort.

DON'T JUST stand there cold and dripping. Step out of the tub onto a foot-pleasing Camelot plush carpet. This one by Burlington House Area Rugs is completely washable in cold water. And designer Meredith Zalastani adds a dozen or more other grace notes to what was once a sterile all-white bath.

Single-family housing demand rising steadily

The new trend in housing is the return to the single-family home, said Jerome L. Howard, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. "The long uptrend of apartment starts as a proportion of total activity is not only over but has already started to go in the other direction — shifting back to single-family activity," he said. "This is the beginning of a trend that will continue for the next decade and a half."

"We have crossed the threshold of a single-family housing boom that in the next 15 years will rival the post-war single-family housing boom of the late 1940s and 1950s — and in one very real sense will exceed that golden age of housing activity," Howard said. "More single-family housing units will be started in the next 15 years than from 1948 through 1960."

The MBA president said the volume of single-family housing sales in recent years is an indicator of the trend. "Sales of single-family housing have soared since their recession low point at the beginning of 1975. Sales of existing homes reached record levels last September. Every month since then the number of existing homes sold has exceeded the level ever recorded for that month. From January last year, to February this year, existing home sales climbed 40 per cent."

Howard also said that consumers demand for new housing has rebounded even more sharply. Sales went up 60 per cent from December, 1974 to February of this year.

In the news

MARK BERBERICK has been named the top producer for the Rolling Meadows office of Circle America/Kole Real Estate, Ltd., for the month of March.

Berberick has been with the Kole organization since May of 1975, and has worked out of the Rolling Meadows office.

Mark Berberick

The Palatine office of ERA has set a new company record for residential real estate sales in month, with over $1,400,000 in sales for March.

Announcement of the record month was made by Robert L. Zaun, president of ERA.

Located at 235 N. Northwest Highway, the manager of the Palatine office is F. Charles Oswald.

Force accounts scare builders

The construction industry is becoming increasingly alarmed at the growing tendency on the part of local governments to use "force account" or "day labor" for its construction services.

From Maine to Hawaii, the problem is the same, according to a recent nationwide chapter survey conducted by the Associated General Contractors of America. Local governments are using public employees with equipment purchased or rented to repair or to build what they need instead of giving the job to the general contractor who has submitted the lowest "responsible" bid.

Richard T. Haas, director of information for the contractors association said contractors contend that the public is being shortchanged by the use of day labor on public projects. He said they make several good points for the low bidder system:

- competitive bidding assures the lowest price to the public.
- The quality of the work is guaranteed by a bond.
- the quality of the work is guaranteed to detailed plans and specifications;
- the job must be completed and at a specified price.

Financial penalties are often imposed for delays.

A recent report made by the New York City Citizens Budget Commission said that a study of four test contracts let by the City's Department of Highways revealed that 45 per cent more resurfacing for the same amount of money could be realized by using outside contractors as opposed to municipal departments doing the same work.

Similar results hold true for less urbanized areas as well. Several Oregon contractor associations recently commissioned a study by the Civil Engineering Department of Oregon State University to analyze a specific highway construction project which was constructed by county forces in Jackson County, Oregon to determine the ultimate cost to the taxpayer.

The study, published in January, revealed if the project had been constructed in accordance with the plans and specifications adopted, the project would cost the taxpayer a minimum of $92,000 more than it would have cost had the project been constructed under contract. "The result of the low standard of workmanship achieved will be continued cost to the taxpayer through continued roadway maintenance costs, and through the added costs to the motorist due to delays and safety hazards."

The report continues: "If government employers would realize that by removing the responsibility for construction management from the public works employee, government and the taxpayer would gain design requirements, cost effectiveness and project quality which provides the longevity, safety, and comfort to the motoring public. This condition can only be achieved by constructing and maintaining roadways by contract."

"There are exceptions, of course," says a spokesman for the Associated General Contractors of America. "For example, snow removal, emergency repairs, and small maintenance jobs on public facilities have been a traditional function of many state and local governments."

A general contractor might find it financially impossible to move men, equipment, and material to a remote highway or bridge site for a $3,000 repair job. And in some sparsely populated areas, there are no local contractors. When "outside" contractors bid, their price can be more than the cost of local day labor forces. Admittedly, such cases do exist," AGC says, "but they are rare."

The problem of day labor is a very real and a growing one for the general contractor, Haas said. He said the contractor knows now that he must adequately inform the public of the advantages of contract construction over that of day labor or be faced with a declining job market.

Developers abandon high-rise projects

adding that most developers would never think planned-unit developments again.

STONE CALLED for a change in the approach to the rental market, saying most of these projects are institutional.

"Why can't we merge single-family with our rental concepts," he said.

In communities where multiple-family development has become a way of life, however, Stone said it may be difficult to change the trend.

"The Northwest area, let's say Arlington Heights, is an area that is in a trap," Stone said. "The land is so high priced that the builder is forced to go multiple."

Stone said the problem is compounded by the fact that most of the Northwest suburbs don't allow small-lot, single-family development where lot frontages are 50 to 60 feet.

"The small-lot, single-family is the best solution. The next best thing would be townhouses," Stone said.

Even with the push for single-family homes, the builders said some 50 per cent of the people needing housing in this country can't afford a single-family home.

"When people want something and they are unable to get it, they find a substitute," Hemphill said. He said that substitute most likely will have a single-family flavor.

Before repairing rented homes

Make certain lease is long term

I receive letters from time to time from really generous tenants who make extensive improvements to a property without being aware that they will probably not benefit in the long run.

Following is a typical letter concerning this kind of mix-up.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We must be the most naive couple in the world. And our ex-landlord must be the biggest heel in the world.

We rented a house which was in such terrible condition, the owner couldn't sell it. As a result, we were given a really low rental. In order to make it livable and attractive, we worked hard to get it in shape.

We sanded the floors, plastered, painted, papered, installed cabinets and built in shelves. Fortunately, my husband is very handy and likes doing this kind of work.

Our landlord was tickled to death! He complimented us and even went so far as to say that we had surely

Mr. Meltzer on real estate

by Bernard Meltzer

added greatly to the value of the property.

Lo and behold! He sold it, and he was right. He got more for it than he had been trying to sell it for before we rented it.

We could take nothing with us, of course. So here we sit in the new home we have rented, which also needs extensive work. We can't afford anything that is in perfect shape. —ARE WE NAIVE?

I guess maybe you are a little naive. But your landlord is not really a "heel."

Consider that you have learned a valuable lesson. Before you go ahead and improve property that belongs to someone else, be certain that your lease will be a long term one, so that you will live in that house long enough to benefit from your hard work.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: The roof on our house was leaking so badly that we decided we needed a new one. We called two local roofing concerns which came and inspected the property.

One of them has submitted an estimate to install a new roof for a cost of $2,400. The other has submitted an estimate for the same job at a cost of $1,100.

Now we really have problems. Which one should we use? — RAIN-DROPS KEEP FALLIN'.

As an old economist, I would refer to the home repair business as an imperfect market. Estimates to perform the same work are not always the same price.

The more expensive job may be no better than the less expensive one. Your first step should be to request references from each of the contractors, in order to determine their reliability and honesty. A good contractor is generally known by his reputation, and should be willing to furnish you with such information.

Then, by making phone calls or personal visits, you should be able to determine which is the better contractor. If they both sound good, naturally, employ the less expensive one — and do something extravagant with the difference!

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I don't know anybody else this happens to, but it sure happens to me every year — and sometimes twice a year.

Someone from the bank which holds my mortgage comes and goes over my house from top to bottom. Since I have never missed a mortgage payment, nor have I been late with it, I can't understand why they have singled me out.

Have you ever heard of anything like this? — PUT UPON.

Your mortgage lender is quite unusual. Your bank really cares about its investments, and is doing its job.

The representative from the bank who visits you from time to time is an inspector whose job it is to learn whether the mortgagor (you, in this case) is maintaining the property properly.

Take a look at your mortgage and read it carefully. You'll see that you agreed to keep the property in good condition, and also agreed that the bank is entitled to inspect your house in order to ascertain whether you have lived up to the agreement.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: With the good weather imminent, I decided to get an early start on fixing up my swimming pool this year. The painting contractor presented me with an estimate so high that it would be cheaper to join a swim club. Is it difficult for me to do this type of job myself? — IN THE SWIM.

The type of swimming pool maintenance that you refer to in your letter requires a lot of hard work — but not a great deal of skill. If you are willing to invest the time, there is no reason why you cannot do it yourself.

Purchase a good commercial solvent and an ample supply of swimming pool paint. The initial step is to clean the walls with the solvent, scraping away any loose paint. Then apply several coats of the new paint.

If you have water and a bathing suit, the rest should come naturally.

Keeping utility costs down helps make homes salable

There are many ways to make a home more salable including a coat of paint here and there, kitchen and bathroom improvements and manicuring the lawn and shrubbery.

"But one approach that sellers frequently do not utilize — one which will become increasingly important to the home buyer in years ahead — is cut back on utility costs through sensible energy-saving steps," said Virgil E. Grand, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

"At the rate utility costs are increasing — some 20 per cent per year nationally — buyers soon will be asking about these costs before asking about the down payment or monthly mortgage payment," he said.

Grand said that the seller who can offer prospective buyers an energy-tight home "will be miles ahead of those who cannot."

Ceiling insulation at least six inches of batt insulation or six to eight inches of blown insulation is a must. "It will pay for itself in just a few seasons," Grand said.

Roof ventilators can reduce cooling costs about 20 per cent in poorly ventilated attics. They help keep the house cooler, and therefore allow the air conditioner to work less. However, roof turbines should be covered in the winter or they will work against the home owner.

Weatherstripping helps stop air leaks around doors and windows in summer and winter. "Alatex base caulking lasts longer and seals better," Grand said.

Exterior doors should be solid or honeycomb insulated, and be tightly gasketed around door frames.

Good storm windows and doors can save 18 per cent or more per year on the heating bill.

Curtains with thermal insulated linings soon pay for themselves, especially if kept closed on summer days and winter nights.

Disposable filters on heating systems should be changed every two or three months. Permanent filters should be vacuumed every month or less. Dirty filters make the furnace motor work harder to get air through, resulting in higher costs.

Families do well in money lending

The typical American family did better borrowing money in 1975 than the typical corporation, according to the United States League of Savings Associations.

John Stafford, staff vice president and director of research, said that during 1975, when it came to long term financing, the fellow who got a mortgage had a better interest rate bargain than the AAA-rated corporations and far better than most public utility companies.

"Stated more explicitly," Stafford said, "John Doe the homeowner did better at the association on Main Street than the big corporation did on Wall St. John Doe's interest rate was lower."

The conventional rate on new single family home mortgages dropped below 9 per cent as soon as 1975 got underway, and by April, had dropped below the rate on corporate bonds, Stafford said. It continued below the AAA corporate bond rate for the balance of the year.

"Thus for nine months of last year the average American family got thirty-year funding at a lower rate than those of the giants of American industry whose corporate performance gave them the top credit rating," said Stafford.

The home owner did better than the top rated public utility companies over the entire course of last year.

"There is a simply reason why the American family working with its association on Main Street did better than the big corporation working with the investment banker on Wall St.," Stafford said. "Main Street quartered the savings and loan business that was generously supplied with savings in 1975, and the association quickly translated these funds into mortgage loans once the year began. Good savings flows this year and translation of these savings into mortgages means that again the American family will get a jump on the big corporations when it comes to the rate charged on long term money."

The following charts show the comparative costs of long-term financing at the 1975 peaks; at the 1975 lows; and show how public utility and new home mortgage rates compared in the last quarter of 1975.

World trade hall of fame dedicated

In commemoration of the nation's bicentennial and 200 years of international trade, the Chicago World Trade Conference and its sponsors, the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry and the International Trade Club of Chicago, established a World Trade Hall of Fame, dedicated April 21.

The World Trade Hall of Fame is located in the lobby of One Illinois Center, 111 East Wacker Dr.

The World Trade Hall of Fame honors past winners of the "Man of the Year in World Trade" Award, presented annually by the Chicago World Trade Conference since 1971. The award henceforth will be known as the World Trade Hall of Fame Award, and will be presented to an individual who has demonstrated distinguished leadership and innovative contributions to the promotion of free world trade.

Past award winners and their titles at the time of the award are: 1971 - William Blackie, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, Caterpillar Tractor Co.; 1972 - Robert S. Ingersoll, Ambassador-Designate of the United States to Japan, and chairman of the board and chief executive officer, Borg-Warner Corporation; 1973 - Gaylord Freeman, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, The First National Bank of Chicago and First Chicago Corporation; 1974 - Russell Baker, senior partner, Baker & McKenzie; and 1975 - Brooks McCormick, president and chief executive officer, International Harvester Company.

In announcing establishment of the World Trade Hall of Fame, James H. Ingersoll indicated that the theme of the exhibit is "World Peace through World Trade." Ingersoll, president of the International Trade Club of Chicago and vice president-external affairs, Borg-Warner Corporation, said "The perpetual exhibit recognizes the role of free world trade as essential not only to America's growth and progress, but also to the goal of world peace and the betterment of all mankind."

He said that the World Trade Hall of Fame idea was initiated by the International Trade Club's Bicentennial Committee, which sought a memorial of a permanent nature, testifying to the importance of international trade in our 200-year history. The concept grew from a simple bronze plaque honoring an executive of the year in world trade to a massive three-part 1,000-square foot, 15-foot high exhibit, which will be implemented as a continuing project of the Chicago World Trade Conference.

The World Trade Hall of Fame exhibit was designed by the Chicago architectural firm of Fujikawa Conterato Lohan and Associates (formerly the office of Miles Van Der Rohe), under the direct supervision of Joseph Fujikawa. The developers of the Illinois Center complex, Metropolitan Structures, Inc., have made the space in One Illinois Center available to the Chicago World Trade Conference as a temporary location for the exhibit, pending construction of a World Trade Center. As part of the exhibit, a new identification symbol for the Chicago World Trade Conference was developed by Gruenert & Partners, Ltd., a local graphic design firm.

Record savings during March

Record savings deposits continued at the nation's savings and loan associations in March, 1976 when the business recorded an estimated net savings gain of $7 billion, the United States League of Savings Associations reports.

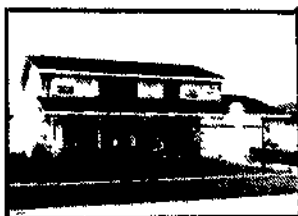

In its monthly Trends Report the trade organization explained that the $7 billion estimated gain included $3.3 billion of interest credited to savers' accounts. The $3.7 billion in new money is approximately equal to the inflow in March, 1975, which was $3.8 billion.

The League bases its estimates on reports received from 947 savings and loan associations and cooperative banks which represent about 51 per cent of the assets of the business.

The Trends Report said that on a seasonally adjusted annual rate, net savings flows amount to $63.7 billion.

On the lending side of the business, associations closed an estimated $5.6 billion in mortgage loans, up from the $3.1 billion in mortgage loans closed in March of 1975.

For the January-March period, mortgage loans closed were an estimated $13.7 billion, nearly double the $7.4 billion recorded in the same period of 1975, an indication that the recovery in the housing market is picking up markedly.

The trouble with spring is it can be so darned expensive.

This ad will give you a rough idea of what some typical home remodeling and repair jobs cost these days.

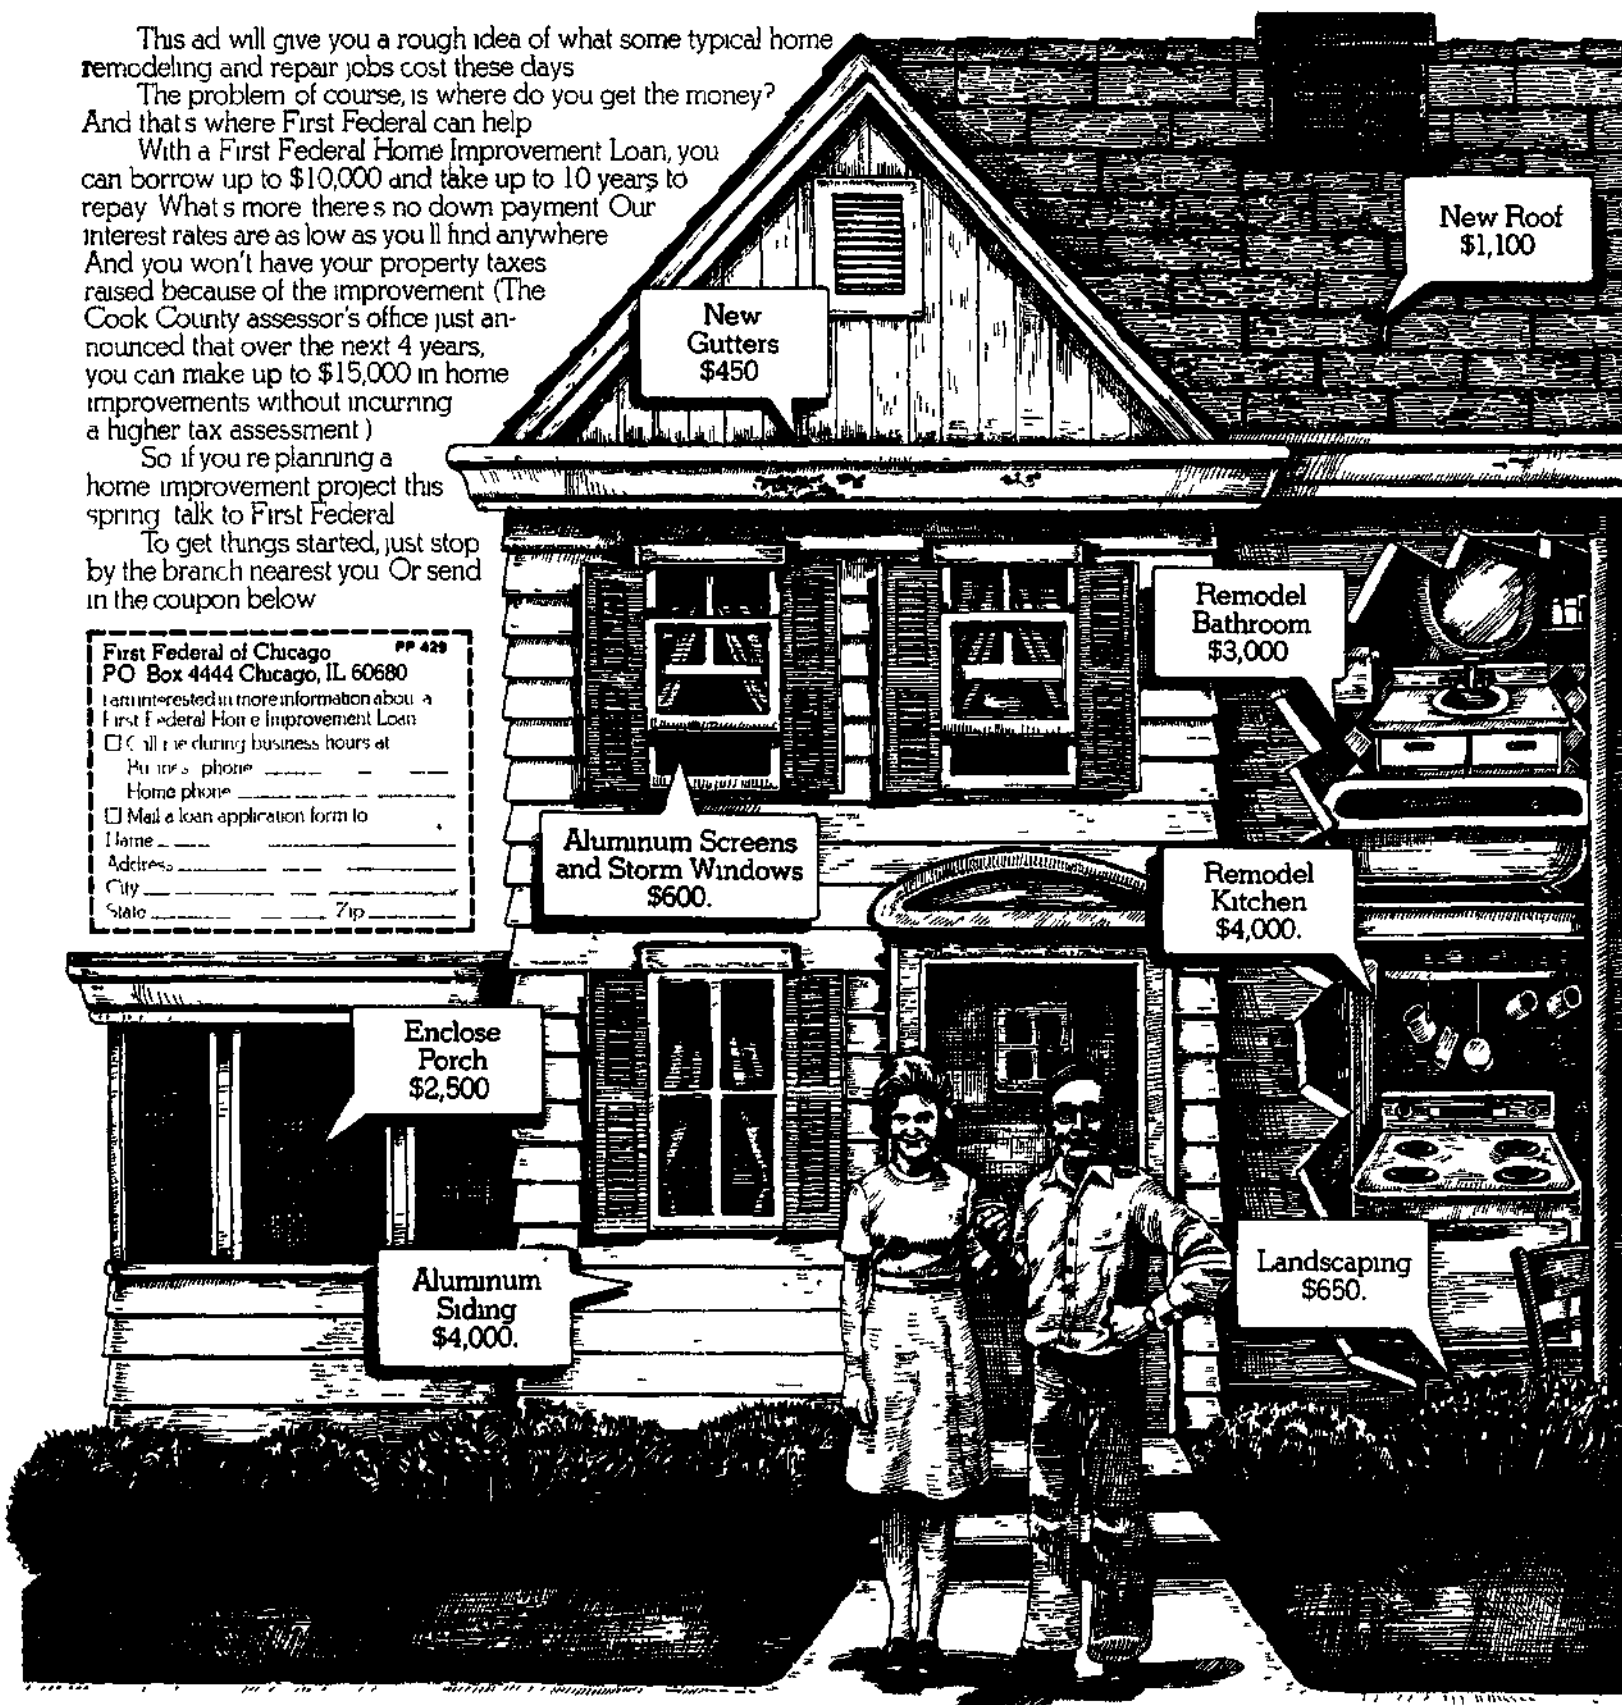

The problem of course, is where do you get the money? And that's where First Federal can help.

With a First Federal Home Improvement Loan, you can borrow up to $10,000 and take up to 10 years to repay. What's more, there's no down payment. Our interest rates are as low as you'll find anywhere. And you won't have your property taxes raised because of the improvement. (The Cook County assessor's office just announced that over the next 4 years, you can make up to $15,000 in home improvements without incurring a higher tax assessment.)

So if you're planning a home improvement project this spring, talk to First Federal.

To get things started, just stop by the branch nearest you. Or send in the coupon below.

Ask Andy

Cat has set of purr vocal cords

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to John Ketchan, 12, of Winnipeg, Man., Canada, for his question: HOW AND WHY DOES A CAT PURR?

This is one of Andy's most popular questions, which means that lots of pen pals ask it over and over again. If Andy were to answer it each time it was asked, it would be in the paper almost every week. Naturally, even the most popular questions can be selected only once in a great while. If you happen to be curious about cats purring, Andy hopes his answer will be satisfying.

People and most animals have a set of vocal cords located in a special section of the windpipe called the larynx. They are special bands of elastic tissue attached to the walls of the throat. Small muscles help them open and close. These muscles can stretch them, change their shape and bring them close together. When the vocal cords are close together, air brought up from the lungs causes them to vibrate — producing sound. Changing their shape changes the sound produced.

A cat has two sets of vocal cords, one set above the other. Not all experts are in complete agreement on the details of what happens in our furry feline's throat, but most agree that the following explanation is pretty close to the facts.

As you know, cats tend to be rather chatty creatures. They mew and meow and can also produce a series of shrieks, screams and prolonged hollers. These sounds come from the lower or everyday set of vocal cords. Above these is a special second set that is reserved for the soft, sweet purring sound.

As to why a cat purrs, well, Andy is sure that anyone who owns a cat can pretty well figure this out. A little bit of observation will tell you that Miss Puss does not purr when she is angry or excited, but only during her periods of comfortable relaxation. These times are even more enjoyable when she has the companionship of a special human friend to stroke her soft fur.

Cats are unable to use both sets of vocal cords at the same time. If the everyday meowing set is working, the purring set is silenced. If the purring set is in motion, the meower set is turned off. The smaller cats are the only cats that purr. Larger cats such as the lion and tiger never purr — but they sure do growl a lot.

Most pets have their special way to let you know how they think and feel about you. The dog's enthusiastic tail wagging is his sign of affection. A cat lets you know by purring, with a special set of vocal cords reserved just for this purpose.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Bill Davison, 11, of East Brunswick, N.J., for his question:

HOW DOES AN AEROSOL CAN WORK?

The list of products available in aerosol cans is almost endless. Household goods such as paints, burn ointments, and even cleaners, as well as garden insect sprays and weedkillers, are just a few examples. Contained in a can ready to spray, such products are convenient to use with no mess to clean up afterward. Aerosol is a term used for very fine particles of liquid or solid substances suspended in the air or in some other gas. These particles are so fine that they remain in the air a long time.

In an aerosol container, the product — paint, for example — is mixed in solution with a liquefied gas and held under high pressure. When the cap is pressed down, the valve opens, and the solution moves through the hollow plunger to the opening in the cap. At this point the liquefied gas vaporizes, and the solution breaks into a fine spray as it emerges from the cap. Because the contents are held under pressure, aerosol containers should always be kept away from open flames and areas where the temperature exceeds 120 degrees F.

South takes the full count

The first bad news to hit South was when the four of spades was opened. The second bad news when East played the queen and then the king and West dropped the deuce.

Then came some good news. East shifted to the queen of hearts.

South won and cashed his king and queen of diamonds only to get some

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

more bad news. East showed out on the second diamond.

South paused for a while to think about the club suit. Then his face relaxed into a broad smile. West had shown up with six spades, four diamonds and one heart. He could not hold more than two clubs. Suppose he held just one! Then East would hold four and South would pick them up.

Could South find out if East did hold four? Yes, he could. South cashed his other high heart. When West followed, he could not hold more than one club. So South led a club to dummy's ace, led back the 10 of clubs and showed East his hand. It didn't matter what East did at this stage of the proceedings. South had his contract locked. ## Plan in advance, don't obscure small plants

Plant heights important along borders

In a garden that stands in the open and can be seen from various points of view, the arrangement of flowers according to heights should be considered, of course.

But in a border planting where you are limited in the ways you can view them, flower heights and their relation to one another are all important. Without careful planning small plants may be obscured by taller ones.

To help with your planning you will find that flower heights are usually shown on seed packets as well as in seed catalogs. These are not 100 per cent reliable but at least they give you, with a fair degree of accuracy, probable heights.

In each of the sketches flowers are arranged with the smallest ones in front and the tallest ones in the rear, while those in between form a transition. Arranged this way all flowers may be observed.

It's your landscape

by George Creed

Heights of edgings and hedges are critical in planting borders. If the flowers you intend planting are going to be tall, avoid edgings that are too small — as in Sketch A. Here, taller plants lean over the edging and cancel out the effect originally intended for it.

A hedge obviously too tall for its location is illustrated in Sketch B. It hides most of the flowers in the border when viewed from a distance. And to see the small flowers next to the hedge, one would have to stand close to the hedge and lean over it.

Correct relationship between hedge and border planting is shown in Sketch C. Here the planting does not obscure the plant behind it.

In choosing edging or hedges to enclose your border planting, select those that will be in good proportion to the plants within the enframement.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Could you give me some information about getting started in the field of landscape architecture?

A I would suggest that you write to the Department of Landscape Architecture, Pennsylvania State University, Pa. I'm sure they will be glad to help you.

Q How fast will a silver maple grow?

A In 10 years a seedling will grow to a height of approximately 25 feet.

Job changes lead sales of Chicago-area homes

Job changes, including transfers and voluntary relocations that generally involve new jobs, are the leading reason why people buy and sell homes in the Chicago area, according to Baird & Warner, Inc.

Of the company's 4,070 residential transactions in 1975, 47 per cent of sellers and 44.61 per cent of buyers cited transfers and voluntary relocations as their reasons, said Robert G. Walters, senior vice president and general manager of the company's residential sales division.

The total giving job changes as their reason is down slightly from 1974. That year 51.5 per cent of sellers cited job changes while 50.7 per cent of buyers gave that reason.

The next leading reason among buyers is upgrading to a better home, listed by 14.7 per cent, and buying a first home, cited by 14.5 per cent. Then comes moving from an apartment, 8.1 per cent; investment, 6.5 per cent; and miscellaneous, 5.5 per cent.

Among sellers, the next leading reasons after job changes are liquidation, listed by 12.8 per cent; retirement, 8.3 per cent; upgrading, 8.1 per cent; moving to an apartment, 4.7 per cent, and miscellaneous, 14.5 per cent.

Unregistered Arizona land sales stopped

Two Arizona development companies which failed to register 15 subdivisions in and around Phoenix with the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development have submitted to a Federal court injunction suspending the sale of lots.

Glenarm Financial Corporation and its subsidiary, Glenarm Land Company, must stop selling lots until they register their subdivisions with HUD's Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration.

Last summer the registration office learned that the companies were selling unregistered lots. Glenarm made no attempt to register the properties and continued to sell lots in apparent violation of federal law.

HUD asked Glenarm to send letters to purchasers who had bought land while the companies were violating the law, notifying them of their rights to cancel their contracts and to receive refunds. The developers sent the letters but they did not offer an acceptable plan for refunds, and continued to sell lots.

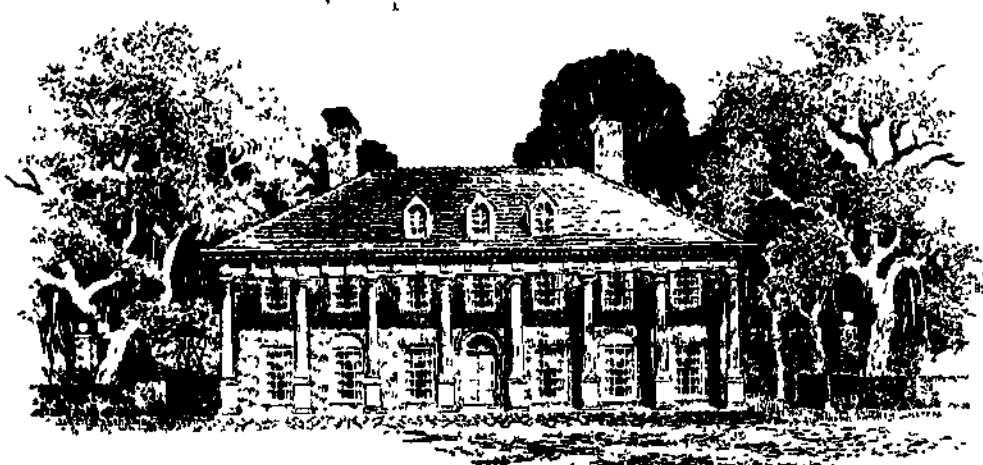

In the meantime, Glenarm started a proceeding under Chapter XI of the bankruptcy act, which allows a company to continue in business if it makes satisfactory arrangements with its creditors. Glenarm listed the purchasers as creditors.

The filing of a bankruptcy action automatically stops all other legal proceedings. However, Glenarm agreed to forego the restraint and HUD filed a complaint which led to the injunction.

On March 25, the Federal Bankruptcy Court issued a permanent injunction against Glenarm and its individual officers and employees.

The developers may not resume selling lots until they register correctly and give prospective buyers property reports fully disclosing the companies' financial condition and up-to-date facts about the land.

Reminiscences of the Deep South . . .

In 1803, when Thomas Jefferson completed the Louisiana Purchase, he was very much criticized, and it was said by some that he was exceeding his constitutional authority.

However, future years proved his transaction to be a brilliant one, for during the 1840's American shipping along the Mississippi and its tributaries exceeded the tonnage of the entire British merchant marine. The great houses built along these famous waters reflected this exciting age of new prosperity.

The elegant house pictured above can be built for you this year, and will prove to be a most valuable possession in years to come. If you are interested in building this house, or would prefer some other exceptional residence of Southern Classical, Georgian, Tudor or French origin in the price range of $130,000 and upwards and would like to make the building process a pleasant experience, we invite you to call us for an appointment.

In the news

MILT REED of the Mt. Prospect sales office of Circle America/Kole Real Estate was the top producer for his office for the month of March.

Reed has been with the Kole organization since October of 1974, where he started out as a part time salesman. He has been a consistent leader in sales and listings during his tenure with Kole Real Estate, Ltd. and is a member of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

Mil Reed

RICH PHILLIPS has broken an all-time sales record for the most volume in sales for one month, not only in the Elk Grove office, but for the four T. A. Bolger, Realtors offices.

Phillips participated in $435,000 in sales for the month of February. Dusan added that Phillips has exceeded $835,000 in sales volume for the year to date.

Phillips lives in Elk Grove Village with his wife, Sharon, and their three children.

JOAN BROCK, Palatine resident who recently passed her real estate broker examination, has been named "Salesman of the Month" for two successive months by Robert L. Zaun, president of the ERA real estate firm.

Mrs. Brock was the top sales person in the Palatine office of ERA during the months of January and February. She has been with ERA and its predecessor firm, Homefinders, since 1974.

Born in Chicago, she graduated from St. Mary's high school and also attended Mundelein College. While in high school she attained top scholastic honors, was president of her class for three years, was elected vice prefect and was active in the press club and the dramatic club.

Joan Brock

Prior to joining ERA, Mrs. Brock sold condominiums. She has been active in the Palatine Hills PTA and the St. Thomas Womens Club. She pursues the hobbies of bowling and interior decorating.

"WOODY" SQUASSONI has been named residential sales leader for the month of March at the Des Plaines office of Wm. L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors.

He achieved this honor three times in 1975, five times in 1974, twice in 1973 and four times in 1972. He was presented with a plaque and a cash award for achieving the highest number of sales and listings during the month of March.

Squassoni has been a member of the Kunkel residential staff since 1966 and is a lifetime member of the "Million Dollar Sales Club" of the Illinois Association of Realtors for achieving real estate sales exceeding $1 million in the past six years. In 1975 Squassoni achieved real estate sales in excess of $2 million. He also has obtained the designation of Graduate, Realtors Institute for completing the three-phase seminar of the state Realtors Association.

Associate director of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors in 1972, Squassoni is currently on their social activities committee. He also is a member of the Elks, Moose and Anvil Clubs.

He resides in Des Plaines, with his wife, Vi. They have three children.

Rohlwing Grove ceremonies held

Groundbreaking ceremonies took place last week for a shopping center at the northeast corner of Devon Ave. and Rohlwing Rd., Elk Grove Village.

The six-acre Rohlwing Grove Center is being developed by Applied Shopping Centers, Inc. of Santa Ana, California. It will contain an Eagle Discount Center supermarket, a DeKoven Drug store and 13,440 feet of retail tenants. A savings and loan facility is planned for the near future.

T. H. Brophy & Co. of Northfield is the leasing agent for the shopping center. Schaffer-Bonavolonta Architects Inc. of Chicago is project architect.

March shows 42% boost in construction industry

The outlook for the construction industry improved in March as contracting for all three broad categories of work — housing, nonresidential buildings, and heavy construction — showed sizeable gains.

According to the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company, March contracts for future construction of all kinds totaled $8,907,887,000, a gain of 42 per cent over last year's depressed level. This stronger flow of new projects in March brought the seasonally-adjusted Dodge Index of total construction contract value to 185, nine per cent above February's 176 (1967-100).

McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company, an authority on the construction market, produces Dodge Reports on construction activity and Sweet's Catalog Files of construction product information.

strength in both housing and energy-related construction, which were last year's hot building markets, recent contract data are offering evidence that an upturn in the lagging nonresidential building market is finally taking hold," said George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for F. W. Dodge.

From a low of 120 last December, the index of nonresidential building contracting has moved up to its current March value of 146 in a series of consecutive monthly gains.

"While this is still a tenuous recovery, the conditions needed to keep it going are looking better all the time," Christie said. "If, as it now appears, 1977 is to be the big year for business capital spending, then contracting for commercial and industrial facilities should be rising through the balance of 1976."

The value of March contracts for new nonresidential buildings was $2,560,990,000, a gain of 17 per cent over the year-ago amount.

Contracts for residential work in March totaled $3,618,002,000. After more than a year of steady expansion, the housing market is currently operating more than 50 per cent above its exceptionally low rate at this time in 1975.

More than half the $2,728,895,000 March total of nonbuilding construction contract value consisted of a few large electric power generating plants. Most of the remaining types of nonbuilding construction (highways, sewer and water projects, and other public works), which depend principally on government funding, have fallen behind last year's pace.

During the first quarter of 1976, a total of $21.4 billion of new construction of all kinds was initiated, exceeding last year's opening quarter by 30 per cent.

NEEDLES FLY ON Friday afternoons as Henrich House Helping Hands work on lap robes for veterans' hospitals. These women, all residents of the Des Plaines senior citizen housing complex, meet to knit, crochet, embroider and sew. Liz Lutz, left, and Edna Ruckstaetter, agree that it's healthier to contribute to life instead of just being on the receiving end.

UP TO THE FLOWER-bedecked laundry room on ninth floor goes Annie Miller. Hardly ever is she alone in her apartment. If it isn't one of her Henrich House friends visiting, it might be one of her three children, 11 grandchildren or 19 great-grandchildren.

Henrich House

Where seniors live better for less

by ELEANOR RIVES

From the outside, it looks like any new modern apartment building with clean lines, security entrance, parking area for tenants' cars, a well clipped lawn and convenient downtown location.

On the inside it has a personality all its own. Henrich House, the 2.3 million complex at Lee and Ashland in Des Plaines, houses 143 people in 128 one-bedroom apartment units, all of them happy to be there.

Small wonder. What other apartment building supplies not only shelter but companionship and a social life, a handsomely furnished lounge/waiting room, a craft room, a library (as yet unstocked) and a large party room where guests can wheedle jazzy music out of an old upright piano painted white?

WHERE ELSE do tenants give a kitchen shower on a kitchen? Where else do rents run between $17 and $70 a month? And what other apartment building can boast a waiting list of 350 people — 55 of them Des Plaines residents and 295 non-residents?

Henrich House is the new nine-story, low-cost, senior citizen housing project built with funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The first set of keys went to the Ray Jorgensens, who moved in early in July 1975. Tenants continued to move in at the rate of four apartments a day until the building was fully occupied.

To be eligible for residence, applicants must be 62 years of age or older (in the case of a married couple, one of the two must meet that age requirement); total income for a single person must not be over $5,400, for a couple, $8,300; and total assets must not exceed $15,000. Rent is based on income and preference is given to Des Plaines residents.

"IN AN APARTMENT such as this, lives are far more intermingled," said Connie Manika, manager-side of the building. "First there's a period of adjustment. We must remember that all these women were once bosses of their own houses."

Residents share not only the community rooms but also many activities. Sam Tapson, senior citizen coordinator for the city of Des Plaines, works with the Tenant Council in deciding the calendar for the month. Two representatives from each floor are on the council.

"Churches and organizations come in and give parties," said Marguerite Kaminske, 71-year-old retired nurse and current president of the Tenant Council. "Roselyn and Gil Newman are going to present their Indian lore program; we have fantastic bingo parties; Mabel Warke is coming with her slide show. There's always plenty going on."

NOT LONG AGO, the Dancing Darlings, a local performing group, took about 75 residents to St. Mary's Church in Des Plaines and put on one of their shows. Maine West students, and a few others, painted bright giant flowers on the walls of the laundry room. Groups came in to sing at Christmas time.

But it's not all receiving for the oldsters; it's giving as well. They stocked the party kitchen by throwing their own shower. Myrtle Callahan started the Helping Hands Club, a group that made 50 bunnies for Des Plaines Elks to distribute at Easter and is now making patchwork lap robes for veterans' hospitals. Residents have compiled a cookbook which is in the process of being printed. A club of creative people willing to share their talents is being formed.

TENANTS TAKE care of each other, er, too, checking out each apartment every morning. One person on each floor goes down the hall looking for the outside doorknob card that signifies the resident is at home and well.

Virginia Edwards, 67, social chairman, organizes monthly birthday celebrations, potlucks, holiday parties and sends cards to those ill or hospitalized. Paul Stull often runs errands for his neighbors. Hans, the janitor, got in on the act by offering a quilting loom. And so it goes throughout the building.

On the eighth floor, Annie Miller, an energetic mite of a woman, 86 years young, is constantly inviting one neighbor or another in to have dinner with her. Before moving into Henrich House, she lived in her granddaughter's Des Plaines home, but "Here it's more like my own," she smiled.

ANNIE BAKES, sews, washes, irons, does all her own cleaning despite the fact that she lost her right arm some 23 years ago in a freak accident. She likes people and partakes in almost everything.

"I don't have time to breathe," she said. "Now, I'm not lying. I don't know what I do. Sew, cook, neighbors come in, we talk, we watch TV."

On the seventh floor, Helen and Bill Tuck laugh over the fact that the ratio of women to men is 14 to one. "I'm real careful to make good meals. I have to keep him," said Helen of her 76-year-old husband. "I was going to put a bell on his leg to know where he's at," she laughed.

The Tucks lived in a trailer camp before moving into their apartment, so tastefully decorated and furnished. Said Bill: "We love it here. This is the

Consumers Union wants cigarette advertising banned

Consumers Union, in its May issue of Consumer Reports magazine, has called for Congress to ban all advertising of cigarettes.

The consumer organization zeroes in on the tobacco industry's touting of low tar, low nicotine cigarettes, which ads imply are significantly safer than brands with high levels.

However, according to Consumer Reports, while the lowered "tar" content — which is a catch-word for a number of harmful compounds — is beneficial, the moderately low nicotine is actually worse than higher nicotine.

THE REASON: Consumer Reports quotes a series of scientific studies which first established that nicotine is the addictive agent in cigarettes — more addictive than alcohol or barbiturates; and then, a 1971 study which showed that when people smoke cigarettes with lower nicotine than they are used to, they smoke more. Because the body craves a certain level of nicotine, the smoker will unconsciously satisfy that desire by smoking more cigarettes, by smoking them to a shorter butt, and by inhaling deeper and more frequently, the report said.

While the average American cigarette today contains less than half as much nicotine as in 1955, Consumer Reports said, cigarette consumption has climbed at a faster rate than the number of smokers, indicating higher per capita consumption.

In further explaining the upsurge in cigarette smoking, the Consumers Union report points to what it terms "one of the shrewdest business decisions the (tobacco) industry ever made."

That was the industry's offer in 1969 to voluntarily remove all cigarette advertising from TV. While it seemed like a humanitarian gesture, it also resulted in the end of free, equal-time, anti-smoking spots on TV, which had been ordered by the Federal Communications Commission in 1967.

By 1969, those messages had resulted in a decline in cigarette sales of more than 12 billion — a greater drop than had resulted from the Surgeon General's report on smoking and cancer in 1964.

BUT IN the first year that cigarette ads — and anti-smoking ads — were off TV, cigarette sales rose by 13 billion. They have continued to gain huge sales each year since then, reaching a new peak of over 600 billion in 1975, the magazine said.

The bulk of the TV advertising was shifted to magazines and newspapers. The industry spent $314.7 million on advertising in 1970, $205 million of it

Keeping up

by Monica Wilch Perin

on TV, and still spent $306.8 million on advertising without TV in 1974.

Consumer Reports raked the industry for ignoring its previous promises and its own ethics code against equating smoking with youth, health, success, sexuality, etc. The magazine singled out Philip Morris for its "shameless exploitation of the woman's movement with its slogan, 'You've come a long way baby.'"

"Women have also come a long way toward equality with men in lung cancer," the magazine noted, citing American Cancer Society statistics showing women's death rate from lung cancer has doubled in the last 10 years.

Consumers Union challenged magazines and newspapers — singling out The New York Times — to "put principle ahead of profit" and refuse cigarette advertising. It named several that do this now — Good Housekeeping, Readers Digest, National Geographic, The New Yorker and The Christian Science Monitor.

THOSE PUBLICATIONS, it said, forfeit upward from $3.6 million annually.

The ultimate solution, however, Consumers Union says, is for Congress to ban all cigarette advertising. "It is immoral to permit the advertising of an addictive product that causes lung cancer and contributes to heart disease," it stated.

The organization further proposed that the FCC reinstate anti-smoking messages on TV at the same level they were in 1970, and see that they are particularly aimed at children's programs.

Consumers Union proposed that such an anti-smoking campaign be paid for with the $60 million annual subsidy the Department of Agriculture now pays to the tobacco industry.

A number of causes for aplastic anemia

Can you give me any information about aplastic anemia? I would like to know what, if any, is the treatment for this disease. Also do you know of any cases that have been cured and how they were cured? My sister has this disease and everyone at this end, including the doctors, is in the dark about how to treat it. I would appreciate any information you can give or who to talk to about this.

I am sure that your doctors understand this problem very well. It's the difficulty in treating it that is bothering them.

Aplastic anemia refers to the inability of the bone marrow to form blood cells. This may affect all of the different types of blood cells, including the red cells, white cells and the little platelets involved in blood clotting mechanisms. In other instances it may involve only one type of cell, specifically the red blood cell formation.

What causes it? In a number of instances the real cause is never identified. There are rare cases in which it appears to be a birth defect. In other instances it may be related to exposure to some toxin; that includes benzene solvents or it can follow the use of an infinite variety of medicines that people commonly use. Some antibiotics have been identified as particularly likely to depress the bone marrow and produce this type of an anemia. Excessive radiation can sometimes damage the bone marrow. A good example here would be the numerous patients who had aplastic anemia after the two atom bombs were dropped in Japan.

Other patients develop bone marrow problems secondary to infections, including viral hepatitis. The failure of bone marrow can also precede the development of other disorders including leukemia and cancer type diseases. Some of the bone marrow failures seem to be related to the immune response of the body in which a person essentially becomes allergic to his own tissues.

WITH THIS LONG list of different causes for the disease it's not too surprising that there is a lot of confusion about managing it. The best management in some instances is total removal from exposure to whatever it is that initiated the problem to begin with. If a person were being constantly exposed to some chemical toxin capable of doing this, obviously that person should be removed from exposure to such agents. Blood transfusion is a form of immediate treatment for many patients.

Sometimes the spleen is removed, particularly in those patients who continue to rapidly destroy red blood cells after a transfusion and who also have an enlarged spleen. There is considerable debate about the advisability of this procedure. Some patients do recover spontaneously, particularly when their problem is related to having taken a specific drug or being exposed to some toxic agent. In some persistent cases bone marrow transplants have been used successfully.

Rarely a patient may have a tumor of the thymus gland, a large gland just above the heart, that is associated with aplastic anemia. Removal of the tumor has resulted in cure in about half of the patients with this problem.

For information on blood formation and anemias send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 4-3, Understanding the Anemias. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The home line by Dorothy Ritz

Black walnut trees do damage certain plants

Dear Dorothy: Here's another for you to check. Two friends at a party were discussing the trouble one was having with her rhododendron plants. The other asked if there had been black walnut trees in the area — that they damage and even kill other plants in the root zone. Can this be true? — Joyce Braun

Unhappily, yes. Even after the black walnut has been removed, the toxic effects may persist for a long time. Experts say the trouble extends to a 50-to 60-foot radius around a black walnut and sometimes as far as 80 feet. Besides the rhododendron, those plants most often affected are azaleas, all evergreens, potatoes and tomatoes. Happily, however, this is not a common occurrence.

Dear Dorothy: What can I be doing wrong for my Teflon-coated pans to get so scratched that much of the coating is gone? Can the pan be recoated? — Janet Bloch

You could be using too hot a temperature and using sharp instruments to turn food. Teflon-coated pans cannot stand too high temperatures and only plastic or nylon articles should be used to move and turn food around. The pan can be recoated but it would cost more, as a rule, than to get a new pan.

Dear Dorothy: I have several linen calendars from years past and I'd like to use them. Do you know of any way that I could remove the colors in them? — Sue Lehrer

No. Apparently dye remover won't remove these colors and a chlorine solution strong enough to work on the colors might hurt the fabric. But since these linen calendars are so colorful and practical, why not use them as they are?

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 288, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60005.)

Flowers that excite the senses

If you find sensuous and romantic connotations in flowers, consider growing bloomers that will excite your senses this year.

Tuberose, from Mexico, is one of these. A single pot of tuberose bulbs, grown outdoors in summer, will fill a room with heady fragrance. Here is an often overlooked gem. The double kind, known as "The Pearl," is the most popular tuberose. This is by far, my favorite scented summer flower.

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good

Fragrant freesias are another superb choice for the feminine garden. A native of South Africa, the freesia is a spring-flowering bulb that is potted in August, but a good one to keep on your list of "must-haves."

LADIES' EAR drop (fuchsia), nestled in a hanging basket, transforms a shady eave into an elegant nook, blooming in July and August. There is probably no more delicate a beauty than a graceful fuchsia, unless it is a hanging basket of apricot, picotee or cascading double tuberous begonias, also a shade-loving plant.

At Disneyworld this past February, I saw the most colorful gazanias in full bloom. Gazanias fear neither drought nor sun, are easy to grow and provide summer-long color splashes. Their large blooms often reach five inches across.

Shasta daisies are fringy, large, showy and make superb perennials. Spider lilies (lycoris) are artistic-looking and have design qualities. Pineapple lilies (eucomis) are crimped, frilly and make good hanging specimens. But the rubrum lily is the royalty of the clan and gets my vote for the ultimate in lily beauty.

EXCITING bird of paradise (strelitzia) intimidates most people out of growing this seemingly-difficult specimen. But if three-year-old specimens are purchased, there will be little wait before flowering. Birds are "made" for tub culture on patio or deck.

Bi-color dahlias are show winners that will blow your mind. The coloring of dahlias embraces every conceivable shade and combination of shades — except blue. Dahlias rank among the easiest of all garden flowers to grow successfully.

Don't forget Peruvian daffodils (ismene) on your list of the exotic and unique. The large white flowers are richly perfumed and uniquely shaped, having a delicately fringed cut framed by five long white sepals.

All of the above are available from the George W. Park Seed catalog (Greenwood, S.C. 29747).

AS THE garden glories begin to fade, their memory can be preserved with a perfume still. The Edmund Scientific Catalog (617 Edsco Building, Barrington, N.J. 08007) carries a perfume still for $10.75, which is a standard distillation condenser. The exotic, the sensuous, the romantic can be converted into perfume, cologne, hand lotion, aftershave, perfumed soap and other items when the thrill of their bloom is gone.

DAHLIAS COME in every conceivable shade or combination of shades except blue. They are among the easiest flowers to grow.

Where seniors live better

best we ever had."

MYRTLE CALLAHAN, 74, has a special loyalty to the third floor where the tenants' personalities blend so beautifully that they have their own monthly bingo parties in addition to the building activities.

She, too, previously lived in a trailer and finds living at Henrich House not only more enjoyable but more economical. "For the first time, I can save a little money to spend on myself," she said.

Up on the fourth floor, Hazel Haedlike, 78, loves living in her apartment despite the fact that she must use a walker to get around. She has a gem of a 15-year-old granddaughter who comes in and does her cleaning for her.

Hazel, who was first chairman of the Tenant Council, wishes it were easier for her to get outside. She loves the outdoors.

IN THE FIRST floor office, Mrs. Manika explained that tenants may stay at Henrich House as long as they can manage their own apartment, even if that means bringing someone in to help look after them for a temporary period. "Every maintenance need is taken care of," said Connie. "We do everything possible to help them stay here, but our prime concern is their welfare."

Connie has a special affection for the elderly. "They are a beautiful, natural source that's being wasted," she said. A sign in her office reads, "Youth is a gift of nature, but age is a work of art."

She promises tenants, "We respect your privacy, your wishes. If you want to be alone, okay. But we won't allow you to be lonesome."

And tenants, like Myrtle Callahan, are apt to respond, "I enjoy every day and every minute I'm here."

One woman even kissed the door.

Sisters engaged

KAREN GILDEMEISTER

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gildemeister of Arlington Heights are announcing the engagement of two daughters, Karen to Ron Teiszczak of Hanover Park and Margaret to John W. Newton of Hastings, Mich.

Karen and her fiancé, son of the Eugene Teiszczaks, plan a September wedding. They are both working for Jewel Food Stores, Karen in Chicago and Ron in Schaumburg. Both graduated from Harper College, and prior to that she attended Hersey High and he went to Conant High.

Margaret and John, whose parents are the Robert F. Newtons, will be married in early summer. Since graduating from Hersey High, she is working at Marshall Field's, Woodfield. John went to high school in Hastings and now works for Illinois Bell Telephone, Arlington Heights.

Crystal set and car were luxuries

No electricity and no running water are among the memories George W. and Freda Fowler have of their early married years in Arlington Heights. However, an old Dodge car and a crystal radio were among the family luxuries.

The Fowlers, who have resided at 23 E. Golf Rd. in Arlington Heights for 46 years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary April 21 with a dinner at the Swedish Manor Smorgasbord in Arlington Heights.

Freda, not quite 70, was born in Highland, Ill., and she met George, of Forest City, Iowa, when he was working for a construction company that sent him to Highland. After their marriage April 21, 1926, in Edwardsville, Ill., Freda and George moved to the Des Plaines area where they resided until moving to Arlington Heights in 1930.

GEORGE WAS THEN working for Benjamin Electric and perhaps it was having their own well drilled in Arlington Heights that made him switch to well drilling about 20 years ago. At 78 George is still a well driller.

The Fowlers reared five children: Marian Callahan, Robert, Lorraine Mailford and Darlene Robertson, all of Arlington Heights, and Mildred McPherson of California. Because their dad always took the car to work, the children remember the long walk into town to attend the movies and shopping with Freda for groceries.

The family also includes 14 living grandchildren and a great-grandson.

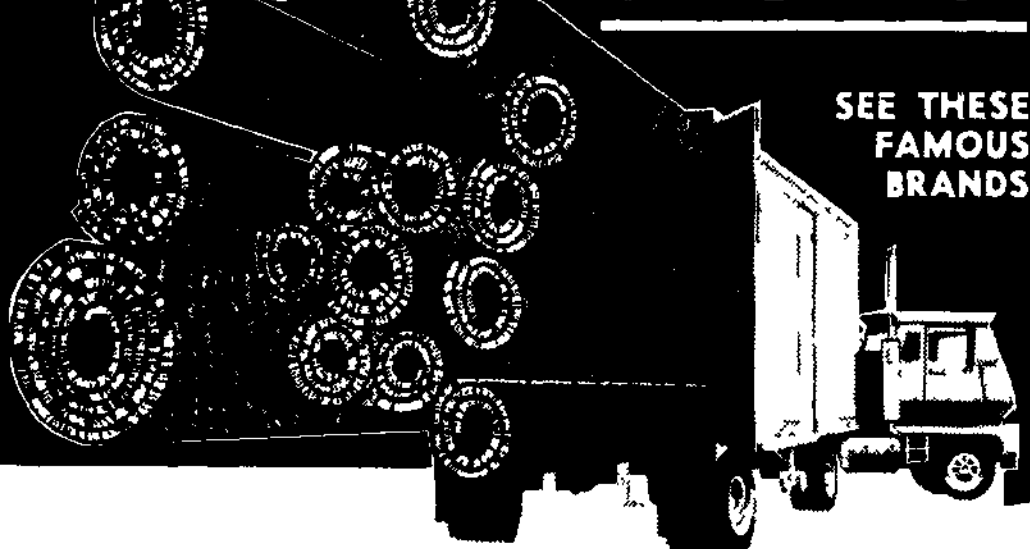

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Fowler

AAUW conference opens

The 24th biennial conference of the Northeast Central Region of American Association of University Women, which includes Illinois, opens tonight at the Sheraton O'Hare Motor Hotel, Rosemont.

Several members of Northwest Suburban Branch of AAUW have been involved in arrangements for the three-day meeting which ends Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Carlson is local arrangements committee chairman and Mrs. Kathy Lawyer her co-chairman. Included on the committee are Enid Rosene, serving as registrar and Judy Stettner as chairman of signs and posters.

Mrs. Pat Dahl of Northwest Suburban Branch is a member of the program committee for the conference with responsibility for publicity and the press room.

RUTH JONEN of Schaumburg Branch is chairman of pages for the Saturday sessions.

At tonight's opening meeting delegates will hear a panel of recipients of grants and fellowships in the AAUW Educational Foundation programs.

Friday will be taken up during the day with four concurrent capsule conferences around the themes of "Women as Decision Makers," "Women as Conservators," "Women as Molders and Shapers" and "Women as Idea Inventors." Sabra Patterson of Arlington Heights Branch will be speaking on the idea of self-awareness during the "Idea Inventors" portion.

SPEAKER AT THE evening banquet Friday will be Robert Theobald, considered one of the foremost experts on the future, who will talk on "Beyond Despair: Creating Alternative Futures for America's Third Century."

Dr. Helen B. Wolfe, AAUW's general director, and Dr. Elizabeth May, president of the International Federation of University Women, will be joined in addressing Saturday's closing luncheon by leaders in three other women's organizations. They are Dr. Hazel Koskenlinna, president of Wisconsin Business and Professional Women; Mrs. Carol Toussaint, national vice president of League of Women Voters; and Ms. Mary Jean Collins-Robson, former national board member of NOW (National Organization for Women).

Inspired cuisine from New Orleans

Spring comes to various parts of the country at different times. One of the first areas to welcome sweet springtime is the Mississippi Delta — New Orleans country, home of Creole cuisine. And that's where the inspiration for the menu pictured today comes from. It makes a delightful lunch (or supper) anywhere, anytime.

The Creole cuisine that developed in New Orleans is a piquant blend of French, Spanish and native influences. Main dish for your party might be a Shrimp Creole. Serve it over a bed of fluffy white rice and, for contrast, add a green and white salad of watercress and Belgian endive. For dessert, along with a bowl of mixed fresh fruits, pass Pecan Pralines — those sweet confections invented in the bayou country.

To drink throughout the meal serve cups of piping hot tea. The clean fresh taste of tea goes admirably with both the spicy main dish and the fruit-and-sweet dessert course.

SHRIMP CREOLE

- |  |   |
|--|---|
| 4 tablespoons butter                       | 1 (1-pound) can whole tomatoes          |
| 4 tablespoons flour                        | 1 1/2 cups hot water                    |
| 1 cup chopped green onions                 | 1 1/2 teaspoons salt                    |
| 1/2 cup diced celery                       | 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper             |
| 1/2 cup chopped green pepper               | 1/4 teaspoon Tabasco sauce              |
| 2 tablespoons chopped parsley              | 1/4 teaspoon leaf thyme                 |
| 1 garlic clove, crushed                    | 1 bay leaf                              |
| 1 (8-ounce) can Spanish style tomato sauce | 1/2 teaspoon sugar                      |
|  | 1 1/2 pounds frozen, shelled raw shrimp |

Melt butter in a large skillet. Make a roux by stirring in flour and cooking over low heat until it is golden brown. Add onions, celery, green pepper, parsley and garlic; cook, stirring constantly, about 5 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients except shrimp. Cover and simmer 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Bring to a full boil and add frozen shrimp. Stir and bring to a second full boil and remove from heat. Serve with rice. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

FRESH FRUIT BOWL

- |                             |   |
|-----------------------------|---|
| 2 bananas, sliced           | 2 cups fresh or canned pineapple wedges |
| 1/4 cup orange juice        | Sugar                                   |
| 2 1/2 cups orange sections  | 3/4 cup Kirsch (optional)               |
| 1 pint strawberries, halved |   |

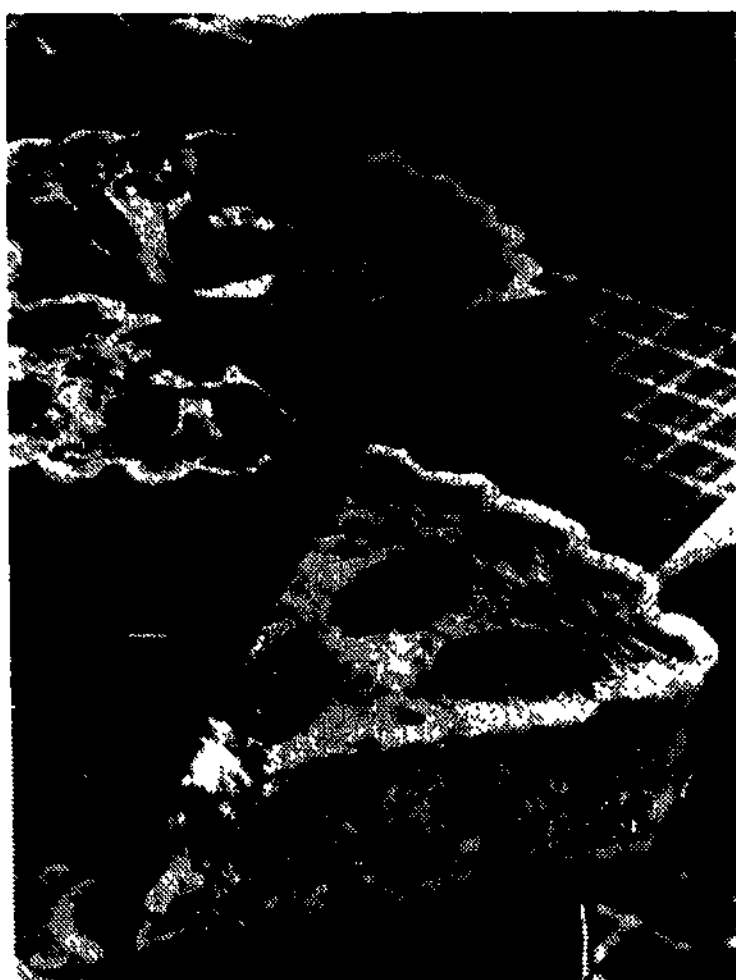

Coat banana slices with orange juice to prevent darkening. Place fruit in layers in serving bowl saving the perfect pieces for the top. Sprinkle sugar over berries and fresh pineapple. Arrange fruit in pretty pattern for top of bowl. Pour Kirsch over all. If desired, garnish with sprigs of mint. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PECAN PRALINES

- |                      |                      |
|----------------------|----------------------|
| 1 pound brown sugar  | 3/4 cup pecan pieces |
| 1/4 cup water        | 1/4 cup pecan halves |
| 2 tablespoons butter | 1/2 teaspoon vanilla |

Combine sugar and water in heavy saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, to soft ball stage or 236 degrees on candy thermometer. Remove from heat; stir in butter, then pecans and vanilla. Beat until mixture begins to sugar, about 30 seconds. Immediately drop by spoon onto waxed paper lined cookie sheets or buttered marble slab. Remove when firm. Makes 1 1/2 dozen 2-inch pralines.

Broccoli and sausage team up for weekend brunches

Broccoli-Sausage Quiche

Brunches are a popular way to entertain well and with a limited menu. Everyone seems to enjoy this form of dining with friends or business associates, especially on a Saturday or Sunday when all want to relax.

A broccoli-sausage quiche, served with a fresh spinach salad, prepared brioches or pecan rolls and a fresh fruit compote, taxes the energy of the hosts and their guests very little. For even less work set a buffet with colorful decorative paper plates.

BROCCOLI-SAUSAGE QUICHE

- 2 (10 ounce) packages frozen chopped broccoli (6 ounces)
  - 6 eggs
  - 2 cups milk
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 teaspoon onion powder
  - 1 1/2 cups grated Swiss or Gruyere cheese
  - Pastry-lined pan
  - 1 tablespoon butter
- Cook broccoli in a small amount of boiling salted water until crisp-tender, about 5 minutes. Drain well. Slice frankfurters slightly on the diagonal. Beat eggs until blended and mix in milk, salt, onion powder, cheese and broccoli. Pour into pastry-lined pan. Arrange sausages decoratively on top. Dot with butter. Bake at 425 degrees 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 375 degrees and bake 25 to 30 minutes longer, or until set and slightly puffed. Let cool a few minutes on a rack, then remove pan sides. Cut in wedges. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Pastry-lined pan:

Mix together 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/2 cup butter until mixture is crumbly. Add one egg and mix until dough clings together in a ball. Pat into the bottom and sides of a 10-inch flange pan with removable bottom and two-inch sides. (Must have two inch sides).

Steak fits slow cooker

Here's a recipe for owner of electric slow cookers. Dial a Steak dinner uses inexpensive cuts of meat smothered in a mixture of vegetables and seasonings. Dial the correct setting on your cooker and six hours later, dinner's ready

DIAL A STEAK

- 1 pound lean round steak
- 1 cup (1 medium) sliced onion
- 1 cup (1 medium) green pepper rings
- 1 1/2 cups (14 1/2-ounce can) peeled tomatoes and juice
- 1 cup (about 2 stalks) 1-inch thick, diagonally sliced celery
- 1 crushed large garlic clove
- 1 teaspoon oregano leaves
- 1 teaspoon salt

- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1 beef bouillon cube
- 1/2 cup boiling water
- 1/4 cup flour
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1 cup raw white rice

Cut steak into serving-size pieces small enough to fit crock pot. Place steak, onion, green pepper, tomatoes and juice, celery, garlic, oregano, salt and pepper in crock pot. Dissolve bouillon cube in 1/2 cup boiling water; add to crock pot. Mix well. Cover and cook as manufacturer directs for 6 hours. Combine flour and 1/4 cup cold water. Turn crock pot temperature to high. Stir flour-water mixture slowly into crock pot. Cook 10 to 15 minutes or until thickened. Prepare rice according to package directions. Serve rice with pepper steak and gravy. Makes 4 servings.

Should be enough lids

Home gardeners should have enough canning lids this summer, but it may take a while to convince everybody, according to the Ball Corp., the country's largest supplier of home canning lids.

Since last year's shortage, the Muncie, Ind.-based manufacturer has increased its lid production capacity by 65 per cent and at peak performance is turning out more than four million lids a day.

Ball added production lines at its Muncie and El Monte, Calif., plants and has been operating three shifts a day, seven days a week since last year.

Ball, the Bernardin Co., Evansville, and the Kerr Co., of Oklahoma, had been the only manufacturers of the home canning lids, but other companies have either expanded into the market or been created to produce lids, to increase the supply.

BALL SPOKESMAN Garry Demaree said there may still be a run on lids for a time in supermarkets around the country this spring.

Some gardeners may continue to buy lids en masse, thinking there will be another shortage, Demaree said. "But when they return to the supermarket, they'll find the shelves restocked," he said.

Witnesses at a recent Washington hearing had opinions that ranged from the belief things will be better to conviction that conditions will be as bad as last year.

John N. Bell Jr., a Safeway Stores Inc. vice president, said the 1976 supply situation "seems considerably improved over the 1975 picture."

An A&P spokesman told the House Small Business subcommittee A&P may not be able to fill the 1976 orders, but this might be because the lids were going to a larger number of stores.

MOST PESSIMISTIC was Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., who said his constituents already were complaining well before the New England canning season, and that the shortage "could be as bad as last year's disaster."

Some supermarkets around the nation have reported not being able to obtain lids, but that's a problem in distribution, not availability, Demaree says. "We anticipate there won't be a repeat of last year's shortage."

Ball was turning out three million lids daily last year when President Ford suggested Americans grow their own gardens as a way of fighting inflation. Many took his advice and increased the demand on home canning supplies.

New wine

A new varietal dessert wine made with Montonico grapes is being introduced by a California winemaker, using a variety that until now has been used only for blending sherries and muscatsels.

Winemaker Ed Friedrich of San Martin Vineyards Co. said Montonico has been grown in Italy since antiquity. The grapes from which the California wine was made were produced from cuttings brought from Calabria, Italy, in 1900, Friedrich said.

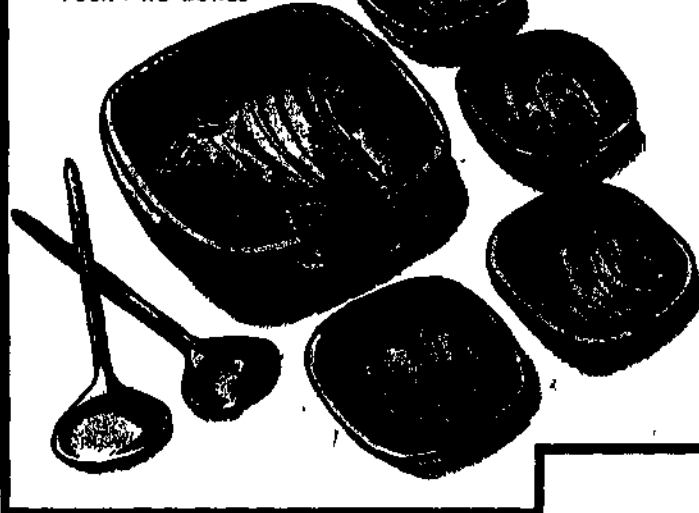

The California wine is called Vin Santo, or Wine of the Saints, a designation given wines in old Tuscany that were aged at least five years in small barrels and stored high in farm-house attics.

Her casserole is always 'good for ya'

I don't think I'm a good cook. Rather, I cope with the problem of cooking. I got this job because I happened, by genetic accident, to be the wife and mother in this family and that's what wives and mothers do. They cook. So, I muddle through.

Sometimes the results are pretty good, fantastic even. Sometimes they are so bad they immediately become a permanent part of the family history.

Heaven knows I'd like to be a good cook. I'd like to know that my sons brag outrageously about my poached whatever and my daughters-in-law worry constantly about measuring up. But I'm afraid it will never happen. The parts of my cooking that my family remember are the mistakes.

I CAN THINK of one in particular. It was a casserole made of ground beef, mashed potatoes and canned gravy. It just sort of laid there in the dish, a gray sodden mess, glistening with grease. My kids still talk about it. Whenever the dinner table conversation turns to "Really Sick Things I Have Known," someone mentions that casserole.

"Remember that thing Mom made once with the mashed potatoes?"

There will be a chorus of gags and groans as each member re-lives that moment in family history.

I can see it all now, some day in the future. The whole family is gathered around the holiday table... sons, daughters, grandchildren. They've all come to Grandma's house for Christmas dinner. The table is gorgeous. Maybe by then I'll even know how to make roses out of radishes. There will be a hush of silence as the turkey is borne triumphantly in all its golden goodness to the place of honor at the head of the table. There is reverent adoration for its glistening perfection. Suddenly someone will say:

"REMEMBER THAT thing Mom made once with the mashed potatoes?" There will be a chorus of groans, gags and "sicks." My grandchildren will stare at me in awe and I will know that I have become a legend in my own time.

Such is the stuff of legends. Well, no matter. As I've said before, there are some things I make that are really successful. I know there are things that always work for you, too. Why don't we share them?

If there is something you make that is fast and easy and fits into your working day well, tell me about it and I will share it with the readers of this column. If we all hang together and give each other some support, maybe we will be able to cope successfully with the job of being responsible for, if not actually preparing, 1005 meals a year.

I GET TIRED thinking about it. I'm glad I'm having something easy for dinner tonight. It's an original recipe that has been thoroughly taste-tested by my family and declared good, if not great, even. It came about when I was trying to make something with ground meat other than hamburger, which I was tired of. I needed a complete protein dish, filling enough so that I could just serve a salad and fruit with it. The first time I served it my son looked at it suspiciously and asked, "What's in it?"

"Never mind what's in it," I replied. "It's good for you." That's how it got its name.

MOM'S "IT'S GOOD FOR YOU" CASSEROLE

(serves at least six)

- 1 1/2 pounds ground bulk pork sausage (from a butcher shop preferably)
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1/2 cup chopped onions
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon salt (or less, watch it)
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 small can tomato paste
- 2 one-pound cans garbanzo beans, drained
- 1 one-pound can kidney beans, drained
- 6 ounces medium sharp cheddar cheese shredded

Cook sausage, onions and green pepper together until meat loses its pink. Add tomato paste, seasonings and beans. Stir well to blend. Add one tomato paste can of water and simmer about 10 minutes. Add cheese. Cover and remove from heat. Let stand until cheese is melted. Stir again before serving.

This freezes well, but wait until you thaw it to add the cheese. If you are doubling the recipe, taste before adding more cumin and pepper. It can get pretty hot.

Herrings, not sardines live in sea

by GAYNOR MADDOX

My first surprise about sardines came when my father, who was a true gourmet, told me there is no such thing in the sea as a sardine. In general, he said, they are herrings.

Only when canned, the overall name of herring is broken down to the Mediterranean pilchard, the Norwegian brisling and many other names according to the country the ocean loches, including the United States, Portugal, Canada, South Africa, Japan and Norway.

Another interesting fact about these tiny fish from the sea was that Portuguese railroad workers broiled sardines on the railroad track heated by the noonday sun and ate them for lunch.

RECENTLY I learned more about the virtues of sardines. They are among the best and cheapest sources of protein. Also, because of their heavy calcium content, they can be used by persons who cannot digest milk and cheese.

Why not try sardines on crackers for luncheon? Spread them attractively on a cold plate with a few sections of lemon or mash and stuff them into a freshly cut tomato. My father insisted they should have very little "fixing." I have found that he was right.

Recently I learned much more about them in February Consumer Reports.

"Brisling are small fish that are caught in Norwegian fjords with huge purse seines — fine-meshed nets that encircle thousands of fish at a time. The fish are transferred live to small holding nets in shallow water. The brisling can swim in the holding nets but can't feed. Thus the fish digest and expel their stomach contents and "clean" themselves. (The process is called thronging)."

THE THRONGED brisling or Norwegian sardines are rather expensive because of the extensive processing of them, which includes smoking for an hour over oak fires and packing in olive oil.

According to Consumer Reports, sardine-oil is apparently the norm in Maine and Canadian sardine canneries. Also, skinless and boneless sardines from Portugal, Morocco and Spain are an entirely different kettle of fish, as fishing boats go out into the Mediterranean and Atlantic after the pilchard, which is, perhaps, the "original" sardine.

Sardines are packed in olive oil, soybean or vegetable oil, or in tomato or mustard sauce. According to Consumer Reports, "If economical eating is your primary goal, consider cultivating a taste for sardines packed in tomato or mustard sauce."

Mexican feast is order for the day

by LOIS SEILER

Feliz Cinco de Mayo — or Happy Fifth of May. A national holiday in Mexico, the celebration of the Fifth of May is similar to our Fourth of July. The day commemorates the Battle of Puebla, which took place over a hundred years ago. Although Mexican freedom reigned for only a year to be regained nine years later, that battle signified Mexico's resistance to foreign invasion.

Cinco de Mayo is special for those who love liberty. In Los Estados Unidos (the United States), we, like Judy Dougherty, Mount Prospect, can join in spirit with our country's neighbors and plan a Mexican feast for family or friends.

Judy, her husband Hal, and their two children, enjoy Mexican food and prefer their dishes on the mild side.

For her guests, Judy starts off the meal with a guacamole appetizer and gaspacho soup dish. For dinner, she likes enchiladas, refried beans and tacos.

Judy said a cook can be as inventive as she wishes with enchiladas. So she combined several recipes to achieve the flavors she wanted.

She uses either cooked chicken or ground beef as the filling for softened tortillas, which are rolled up and baked in a tomato sauce seasoned with garlic, onion and chili powder. Longhorn, Mozzarella or Monterey Jack cheese may be sprinkled on top, and the entire dish can be made ahead and baked before serving.

Judy folds and fries tortillas to make the taco shells. Guests then fill their own shells with Judy's mixture of ground beef, tomato sauce and kidney beans. Grated vegetables and cheeses top the meat, and guests add amounts to suit their tastes. Judy makes her own Sangria from Burgundy wine, limes and sugar, and definitely recommends the homemade over the bottled variety.

Desserts are Judy's specialty, as well as her favorites to make. Although not Mexican, Raspberry Walnut Torte is a family favorite and makes a suitable dessert for her Mexican meal. It's sweet but has a refreshing tang and is pretty in appearance.

Judy enjoys Mexican cooking as a novelty, but her preference is for French recipes. Her major hobby is tennis, followed by arts and crafts and piano playing. She has taken several classes at Harper College, serves one day a week as a teacher's aid, and is first vice president of a local PEO chapter.

ENCHILADAS

8 tortillas
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 cup tomato puree
½ cup beef stock
Salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon cumin
1 pound ground beef
¾ pound longhorn cheese, shredded
Tortillas can be found in the refrigerator or frozen food department of most grocery stores. Heat them in oil over medium-low heat to soften.

Meanwhile, saute onions in olive oil. Then add garlic, chili powder, tomato puree, beef stock, seasonings and cumin.

In a separate pan, brown ground beef. After tortillas are soft, spread a little sauce over each one. Divide ground beef evenly among the eight tortillas. Sprinkle with some of the shredded cheese. Roll up and lay in a greased, 7 by 11-inch baking dish, seam side down. Pour the rest of the sauce over enchiladas and sprinkle with remaining cheese. If all ingredients are still warm, bake at 350 degrees just until cheese melts. If you've done ahead and refrigerated, bake 30 minutes. Serves 8.

If chicken is substituted for the ground beef, chicken stock should be used instead of beef stock.

TACOS

1 pound ground beef
1 (1 pound) can kidney beans, drained
½ cup onion, chopped
1 small can tomato puree
1 (15 ounce) can tomato sauce
1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
2 tablespoons sugar
Salt and pepper to taste
12 frozen or canned tortillas
Brown beef and add beans, onion, tomato sauce and puree, chili powder, sugar and seasonings. Keep warm.

Defrost often for efficiency

A small freezer unit that is part of a refrigerator (unless it is frost-free) will require defrosting more frequently than a large freezer unit.

Just remember, the more frost on the unit, the more difficulty it has operating efficiently, and the more expensive it is to run. It will also affect the cabinet's ability to quickly freeze your unfrozen foods.

Defrosting also gives you an excellent opportunity to reorganize your space, put the items with the latest dates at the bottom (or back if you have an upright freezer) and put the older items on top or in front where you'll see them.

Never let frost reach a depth of one-half inch. Collection of frost on walls or shelves of a freezer causes the temperature to rise several degrees. A rule of thumb might be to defrost every two months. Choose a time when stocks are low and store the remaining stock in the refrigerator while defrosting.

Heat about ¼-inch shortening in skillet. One at a time, fry tortillas. As they fry, fold in half, leaving an opening large enough to add filling later. Fry until crisp and drain on absorbent paper.

Place taco shells on serving plate and put meat sauce on the table in warming pan or chafing dish, along with separate dishes of the following toppings:

1 onion, chopped
2 tomatoes, chopped fine
1½ cups shredded lettuce
1 cup shredded cheese
Tacos should be filled with meat and toppings. Twelve tacos will serve 6, with accompaniments.

SANGRIA

1 bottle (a fifth size) red burgundy
Juice from 3 limes
½ cup granulated sugar
Orange and lime slices
Mix lime juice and sugar together until sugar is dissolved. Let set. Pour in burgundy. Add ice and float orange and lime slices on top. Serve with meal.

RASPBERRY WALNUT TORTE

1 cup flour
⅓ cup confectioner's sugar
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
1 (10 ounce package) raspberries, thawed
¾ cup chopped walnuts
2 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder

½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ pint whipping cream, whipped
In small mixing bowl, combine 1 cup flour, confectioner's sugar and butter. Blend well. Press into bottom of an ungreased, 9-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Cool.

Drain raspberries, reserving juice. Spread berries over crust and sprinkle with walnuts.

In small mixing bowl, combine eggs, sugar, ¼ cup flour, salt, baking powder and vanilla at low speed. Blend well. Pour over walnuts. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes, until golden brown. Cool and cut into squares. Serve with whipped cream and the following raspberry sauce:

½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup water
Reserved raspberry juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice

In small saucepan, combine all ingredients except lemon juice. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick and clear. Stir in lemon juice and cool.

Put whipped cream on squares of walnut torte and pour sauce over cream and cake. Serves 9.

BURRITOS

45 milliliters or 3 tablespoons cooking oil
340 grams or  $\frac{3}{4}$  pound stew beef, cut in 1 25 centimeter ( $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch) pieces 250 milliliters or 1 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
5 milliliters or 1 teaspoon salt

375 milliliters or 1½ cups water
1 (120 milliliter or 4 ounces) can green chilies, drained
1 (450 milliliter or 15 ounce) can refried beans
60 milliliters or ¼ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
12 flour tortillas

Heat 30 milliliters or (2 tablespoons) oil in a large skillet; cook beef, pork and onion until meat is browned and onion is tender. Add garlic, salt and water; heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 2 hours or until meat is tender and begins to fall apart. Add chilies and, with fork, gently flake meat. Continue cooking, uncovered, until all liquid has evaporated.

Heat refried beans in 15 milliliters (1 tablespoon) oil. Add cheese; heat until cheese is melted.

In center of each tortilla, spread about two tablespoons bean mixture in a thin layer. Spoon about 30 milliliters or 2 tablespoons meat mixture near one edge of tortilla. Roll up, folding ends in securely, forming a rectangular roll. Place burritos on a cooky sheet; cover with foil. Heat in preheated 160 degree Celsius (325 degree Fahrenheit) oven for 15 minutes. Serve with taco sauce or chili hot dog sauce and eat like a sandwich.

Residents argue plan to rezone Oakton St. plot

A group of Des Plaines residents are protesting a revised plan for a 25-acre commercial and residential development at 850 Oakton St.

The residents, most from the Oakton Street-Webster Lane area, attended a public hearing Tuesday night to protest a request to rezone the property from single-family residential to commercial and multiple-family.

About 60 residents appeared to protest. About 160 have signed petitions asking the city to deny the request by the O'Hare Development Corp. Two earlier plans also were opposed by residents.

THE REVISED PLAN calls for construction of a 50,000 square-foot shopping mall, a two-story office building, a four-story nursing home, 54 townhouses, 156 coach house condominiums and 60 five-story condominium-apartment units.

Residents said they are opposed to the commercial area and the heights of some of the buildings, saying they want single-family houses built on the property. They said the project would create traffic congestion.

William J. Moore, attorney for the developer, said, however, that construction of single-family houses is not economically feasible. He also said he believes the project is compatible with the area and will be an asset to the community.

"We think we have come up with a meritorious compromise to the objections to the previous plans," he said. "Sometime or another you have to take into consideration the guy that owns the property."

THE PROPERTY, which is bounded by Oakton Street, Webster Lane, Forest Avenue and Fourth Avenue, has been the site of a greenhouse.

The first plan proposed by the developer called for construction of a discount department store, single-family houses and a 6-acre park.

A plan proposed last fall asked for a zoning change to allow construction of a shopping mall, a four-story office building, 240 condominium-apartment units and 27 single-family houses.

In the newest plan, the nursing home replaces the office building, the townhouses replace the single-family houses and the coach houses replace some of the condominium-apartments.

The plan commission and zoning board of appeals are reviewing the proposed development and are expected to make a recommendation to the city council within several weeks. The matter then will be reviewed by the council's municipal development committee before being voted on by aldermen.

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 396-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army Intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1953 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also (Continued on Page 3)

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN
The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for speedier collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $80 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termex on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR, instilled by their final days in Laos, followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

7% teacher pay hike included in Dist. 214 pact

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,850. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,840 approved this week by teachers in New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year

Other provisions in the contract include:

• An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $500 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $800 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

- Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.

- A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.

- An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

- An increase in summer school pay. Teachers would still be paid 10 per cent of their base salary but the maximum summer pay would be increased from $1,250 to $1,356.

- The formation of a committee to recommend procedure for reducing staff as enrollment declines. The committee would report to the board by Feb. 1, 1977.

- An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

The contract package represents a total increase in district expenses of about $2 million, 11 per cent. The district has 1,080 teachers.

Petitions ask Dist. 59 unit issue be put to vote

by JUDY JOBBITT

Petitions requesting a referendum on forming an Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit school district have been filed with the county schools superintendent by a committee of 10 residents from the Dist. 59 area.

The request is expected to receive strong opposition from High School Dist. 214, which has already retained legal counsel to block the movement. Dist. 214 officials said they fear the unit district reorganization would weaken the high school district's tax base.

The committee filed the petitions with Richard Martwick, Cook County school superintendent, after getting about 350 signatures during the weekend. The committee said in a press statement that the members "are confident the facts will convince the voters that a unit district will benefit our childrens' education and the taxpayers who support it."

INFORMATION ABOUT filing the petition and the committee's statement were withheld from The Herald until Wednesday by the committee.

Leah Cummins, committee member and Dist. 59 public relations director, said the consensus of committee members was to withhold this and other information from the Herald because of the "adversary stance" the paper editorially has taken on the unit district. She said committee members "wanted to see it in the other papers to be told accurately. Paddock's put itself in an adversary stance with the editorial. You've positioned yourself and you've positioned us."

The petition sets the boundaries for the proposed unit district contiguous with the current Dist. 59 boundaries. The proposed unit district would include Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools, currently in High School Dist. 214, in addition to the 21 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59.

Dist. 59 currently supplies about 40 per cent of the tax base, but only about 27 per cent of the students in Dist. 214. By forming a unit district, the committee anticipates receiving more funding for education in the Dist. 59 area than is currently available under the dual district system.

THE PETITION also calls for a combined education and building fund tax rate of $3.84 per $100 assessed valuation for the unit district, which equals the anticipated combined tax rates for Dist 59 and 214.

"Speaking as a member but not for the committee of 10, I felt the educational and financial benefits available as a result of reorganization as a unit district made it necessary to move ahead and file the petition in hopes of bringing this issue before the voters at the earliest opportunity," said Thomas Guy, committee member.

In the statement the committee said it decided to file the petitions "based on the conviction that there are opportunities and advantages to be gained by our children as a result of reorganization. Our goal is and always has been to take this important issue to the public."

Frank Bristow, administrative assistant/attorney for Martwick, said Wednesday that the petitions were received. "We have not yet accepted it. We are taking it under review now," he said.

IF THE PETITIONS meet the legal requirements, Martwick will call for public hearings in which any individuals or school districts affected by the reorganization could present evidence.

The original center-mounted grass catcher.

Snapper was the first to figure it out. Where to put the grass catcher on a lawn mower.

If you put it on the side, we discovered, it sticks out and gets in the way when you want to do some close trimming. And as the bag fills, the mower gets off balance, making it hard to handle.

Snapper decided to mount the bag in the center, right between the handles. This way you can get in those tight spots easily. And, since all Snapper self-propelled mowers have rear-wheel drive, traction is improved as the bag fills.

Get a Snapper mower. The mower with the original center-mounted grass catcher, developed and perfected over years of experience.

Another feature that makes Snapper fast. First.

Prospect Heights Dist. 23

Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 will offer a summer program at George Williams Camp, Lake Geneva, Wis. from June 21-26 for students in grades five, six and seven. The camping program is part of the regular summer school program "Off Campus Affective Education."

Students will visit Yerkes Observatory, a camp-run animal farm, a stone quarry and a century-old cemetery.

Cost of the program is $60 which includes lodging, meals, entrance fees, materials, insurance and round trip transportation. Students who live outside the school district may attend by paying an additional $25.

Deadline for registration is Friday, and forms are available at MacArthur Junior High School, 700 Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights. For information call Phil Cornwell, 259-4550, ext. 30.

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59

Orders are being taken through Friday for a spring plant sale sponsored by the ways and means committee at Forest View Elementary School, 1901 Estates Dr., Mount Prospect.

Red geraniums and begonias in four inch pots will be sold for $1 each. To place orders, call Corrine Marshall, 439-4597 or Judy Briesch, 439-6665. Plants will be delivered May 7.

East Maine Dist. 63

"Our Country 'Tis of Thee," a musical on the Bicentennial, will be presented by students from Gemini Junior High School at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Apollo Junior High School auditorium, 10100 Dee Rd., Des Plaines.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students. The director of the production is Margie Fleishman.

High School Dist. 214

Wheeling High School's senior class is sponsoring a blood drive Friday as a community service project. The drawing will be held in Room 104 at the school, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling.

Donations made during the drive will be credited to the community in which the student lives, and covers the students immediate family, including grandparents, for one year.

In general...

An environmental education workshop for teachers will be held Saturday and May 15, at Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. Conducted by the National Park Service in cooperation with the National College of Education, Evanston, the workshop may be taken for one hour of graduate credit. Sessions will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For registration and information contact Wayne Schimpff, 1866 Mandel, Westchester, Ill. 60153, 562-2127.

Closing nears for Park View

Panels draw school rental rules

Parent advisory committees in River Trails Dist. 26 have started to form guidelines for the redistricting and rental of Park View School, which is slated for closing at the end of the school year.

The board voted earlier this month to close Park View, 805 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, in response to declining enrollment and decreased revenues in the district.

A committee to establish new attendance boundaries for Park View students will survey parents to find any preferences for reassigning students.

THE 25-MEMBER committee held its first meeting Tuesday at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

Children from Park View will attend Indian Grove, Feenhanville and Bond schools next fall, and the parent committee will make recommendations on how to divide the Park View students among these schools.

"The survey is to see whether we can find a pattern if most people in a particular area prefer a particular school," said Leslie Galloway, co-chairman of the boundary committee.

Before beginning the door-to-door survey, the 25-member committee will tour the three schools which will receive the transfer students, Mrs. Galloway said.

The parent committee setting guidelines for leasing Park View also held its first meeting Tuesday.

THE SEVEN-MEMBER committee prepared a list of questions about renting the school, such as the length of the lease, insurance responsibility, tax obligations and custodial service, according to Martin Rosinski, committee chairman.

Rosinski said the committee probably will set parameters for the lease rather than decide who the tenant will be.

Several groups already have contacted Dist. 26 about renting the school, and all requests are of an educational nature, such as a day-care or special education agency, Rosinski said. He said the building probably will be leased to several groups.

Deadline Saturday for fine arts contest

The deadline for entering the Des Plaines Bicentennial fine arts contest is Saturday.

Artists may submit their original works in one or more of the following four categories: oil and acrylics, watercolors, sculpture and mixed media. Two $100 prizes will be awarded in each category following an exhibit at the Des Plaines Civic Center May 22-23.

Entry blanks are available at the civic center, 1420 Miner St., and at local banks and savings and loan associations. No entry fee is required. For information call 827-1776.

use with the entire project," he said. "We realize that the property will not be a landfill forever and try to plan for its future use."

BUT IN THE meantime, 235 to 275 trucks a day from municipalities and private firms throughout the North and Northwest suburbs empty trash and fill at the site. The refuse is immediately covered with a layer of dirt.

The landfill, opened in 1963, has been excavated to provide space for the refuse, and will be filled with dirt and leveled before the land is reclaimed for a future project.

Daniels said although there is a stigma attached to landfills, he believes they are necessary and if properly operated do not create problems for adjacent property owners.

"The average citizen only thinks of it as a garbage dump," he said. "This is nothing more than a big earth-moving project."

"THERE'S A difference between a garbage dump and a good sanitary landfill," he said. "Dumps are a thing of the past because the government won't permit them to operate."

He said he does not believe a properly operated landfill will depress property values, citing the company's Westchester operation as an example.

"I like to show off that project because there are $150,000 and $200,000 homes near it, and people still are building expensive homes nearby," he said.

Daniels concedes, however, that there are places not suitable for landfills. "I think compatibility is very important," he said.

Burglars hit homes, take cash, valuables

Burglars stole nearly $2,000 in cash and valuables from two Des Plaines residences, police said Wednesday.

Werner Radtke, 1247 Washington St., told police $165 cash, a calculator, binoculars, bank book, and mink coat had been stolen from his residence.

There were no signs of forced entry. Police said the total value of the stolen items was about $1,000.

Police also said $50 cash and $800 in jewels were stolen from the home of Georgia E. Pfeiffer, 2060 Pine St.

Police said the burglars probably pried their way through a kitchen door.

Four rings, four watches and cigarette lighter were among the stolen articles.

Mayor's prayer breakfast

Preston Bradley of the Moody Bible Institute, will be the featured guest at the annual Mayor's Prayer Breakfast Monday sponsored by the Des Plaines Jaycees.

This will be the last prayer breakfast held in honor of Mayor Herbert H. Behrel, who will retire in September after 19 years in office.

The breakfast will be held at 8:45 a.m. in the penthouse ballroom of the O'Hare Inn, Mannheim and Higgins roads, Rosemont. Tickets are $5 per person or $45 for a table for 10 persons. Reservations may be made by Friday by calling Robert Flood, 297-9905; Mike Yesner, 726-6340; or Gary Cooper, 824-3271.

Milwaukee upgrade plan gets review

Wheeling is reviewing an Illinois Dept. of Transportation plan calling for reconstruction of a one-mile stretch of Milwaukee Avenue through the village.

The IDOT improvements to the road will begin 2,150 feet south of Lake-Cook Road and extend to 1,775 feet south of the intersection of Milwaukee Avenue and Dundee Road, a portion of the street that is in bad shape.

Thomas Markus, assistant village manager, Wednesday said the state will finance the program, but the village must agree to maintain the improvements when they are completed. The village board is expected to take action on the matter next week.

STATE OFFICIALS have given the village no estimate how much the project will cost. State and Wheeling officials hope the project will be done by summer of 1977.

The mile stretch through Wheeling will be resurfaced and strengthened, including the left turn lane at Dundee Road. Four-foot shoulders will be built along the route. However, Milwaukee Avenue will remain a two-lane highway through that part of the village.

The street is willing to pay for the project if the village provides routine maintenance.

Wheeling has received a $20,000 grant under the federal Community Development Act for a redevelopment plan for Milwaukee Avenue. Village officials hope to turn the stretch through Wheeling into a major shopping and entertainment district and believe improvements to the route will aid their plans. The grant, awarded to the village through the county's community development program, will pay for design studies.

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 306-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1953 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also

Trustees try to hold down spending

Work on Wheeling's 1976-77 budget will continue today in an effort to hold this year's expenditures to the $4.12 million spent in 1975-76.

Trustees will be reviewing budget requests from the village police, fire, public works and health departments.

The meeting, a second in a series of public budget hearings, will be at 7 p.m. in the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Village Mgr. George Passolt has asked that departmental requests be limited to that budgeted last year

"but provide equal or better services with no increase in taxes."

VILLAGE OFFICIALS have not released the budget requests of the police, public works and health department, but the fire department is asked

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for speedier collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Ying and Kia

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termex on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

7% pay hike part of pact in Dist. 214

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,850. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,848 approved this week by teachers in New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year.

Other provisions in the contract include:

- An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $400.

Tickets at $2 for adults and $1 for senior citizens and students will be sold at the door.

Dancers from the Sharon Kassel school of dance will perform in selections from "Porgy and Bess," and "George M." Soloists in "Porgy and Bess" include Peggy Linkin, Rosemarie Morgan, Al LaMont and Morris Humphrey. In "Seraphim on High," the soprano soloist is Naomi Rockwell, with alto Marion Gardiner. Art Gardiner is the baritone soloist in "Ballad for Americans."

The 100-voice chorus, directed by Anthony V. Mostardo, will be accompanied by the Harper College Community Orchestra. Selections will include "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "America the Beautiful," and "Song of Democracy."

Wissell named to head new area health agency

Richard Wissell, public health administrator for McHenry County, has been elected president of the new Health Systems Agency board for Lake, Kane and McHenry counties.

Elected to serve with Wissell were: Dr. John Dolce, a Mundelein oral surgeon, vice president; Eleanor Skinner, a homemaker from Crystal Lake, secretary; and C. Richard Anderson, a Lake County Board member from North Barrington, treasurer.

A meeting was scheduled for May 1 to narrow the field of eight candidates for director of the new agency.

The board set a maximum salary of $25,000 for the director.

A committee also is searching for office space for the new agency, which will take over the duties of the Lake County Comprehensive Health Planning Agency and Operation Health, Inc. in Kane and McHenry counties.

The next meeting of the health agency board is scheduled for the fourth Thursday in May. The board will be meeting periodically throughout the three-county area, to make the meetings more accessible to residents of different areas, according to Dolce.

7% pay hike in Dist. 214 contract

$600 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $800 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

• Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.

• A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.

• An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

• An increase in summer school pay. Teachers would still be paid 10 per cent of their base salary but the maximum summer pay would be increased from $1,250 to $1,356.

• The formation of a committee to recommend procedure for reducing staff as enrollment declines. The committee would report to the board by Feb. 1, 1977.

• An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

The contract package represents a total increase in district expenses of about $2 million, 11 per cent. The district has 1,089 teachers.

Library friends ask used books for sale

Friends of the Indian Trails Public Library, 850 Jenkins Ct., Wheeling, will sponsor a used book sale at the library June 5 and 6 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Donations of books, paperbacks, records and National Geographic magazines are sought. However, the library organization will not accept other magazines.

For information about the sale, call Pat Neel, 541-1750, or Carlene Franton, 537-3750.

Panel now inoperative

'76 commission member resigns

by GERRY KERN

The Wheeling Bicentennial Commission has suffered still another defeat. Another member of the commission has resigned, leaving the troubled board without a quorum and unable to conduct business.

Jacqueline M. Bronson, 414 Meadowbrook Ln., is the latest Bicentennial commission member to resign, citing her inability to devote enough time to board work. She said she first must take care of her two children at home.

Her departure from the commission leaves chairman Kathleen Bellwoar, 44 Redwood Ln., and Mrs. Mo Jo Domenick, 183 Cindy Ln., as the only members on the commission — one short of a quorum on the five-member board.

TRUSTEE OTIS L. Hedlund, the Bicentennial commission's liaison on the village board, Tuesday called for residents to come forward so that the vacancies can be filled and work on celebrating the Bicentennial can continue.

Trustees aim to put brakes on village spending

ing for an estimated $533,561 in operating expenses. The fire department budget request includes funds for at least three additional firefighters and plans for a second village fire station.

The Wheeling fire department is partially funded by the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District.

Passolt has suggested several economy measures for the police and fire departments, including the use of para-professionals for nonhazardous duties and the purchase of midsize cars for use by the police department.

Passolt also has recommended the creation of a public safety department to replace the fire and police departments. Passolt said the new department could result in a reduction of staff, because the men would be trained for both police and fire duty.

TRUSTEES LAST week reviewed cost-cutting recommendations of department heads, including elimination of one building department inspector, one public works department inspector and a cut of $4,600 for testing police applicants.

The budgeted salaries of the two inspectors are more than $24,000 per year. One position is vacant and will not be filled.

Village officials also suggested increases in several budget items, including a $12,300 increase for contracted legal expenses and a $12,000 increase for the village newsletter.

celebrating the Bicentennial can continue.

"We've got some applicants, but we could use some more," said Hedlund. "The problem is getting together with Ted Scanlon (village president) to make the appointments."

Hedlund said he's had troubles setting up a conference with Scanlon.

"I think we ought to appoint someone soon," Hedlund said.

Mrs. Bronson is the fourth Bicentennial commission member to leave the board. Three others resigned in January, charging Mrs. Bellwoar with exceeding her authority as chairman.

THOSE MEMBERS were the Rev. Thomas Moran, Carolyn Jenks and Gertrude Trunda, who protested Mrs. Bellwoar's commitment to sell about $12,000 worth of tickets to a Wheeling Bicentennial Night at the March 11 performance of the Shrine Circus in Chicago.

As it turned out, the commission was unable to sell more than about a third of the tickets, and the village stepped in to purchase more than $7,000 of the tickets to distribute free to village residents. The circus ticket affair wiped out the Bicentennial budget, leaving the village and the commission with some bruised pride.

Until at least one more commissioner is appointed, the Bicentennial panel in Wheeling is out of business.

London teachers 'bailed out' by village

A schoolboy's wildest dream — to lock his teacher in jail — won't come true in Wheeling this year.

But it almost did.

Two London Junior High School teachers volunteered to spend one hour in jail for each $5 raised by their eighth-grade students toward the class gift.

The system would be similar to fund-raisers in which participants hike and bicycle-ride for a certain number of dollars donated per mile, with the exception of much less exercise.

However, the Wheeling Village Board denied the teachers' request because it was concerned about the village's legal responsibility in keeping teachers Rich Davis and Jerry Lekas locked up.

"Our homeroom came up with the idea that I would spend the night in jail if they would raise a certain amount of money," said Davis, who convinced Lekas to go along with him. "The kids jumped on the idea," he said.

The teachers' scheme won the approval of the Wheeling police-school liaison officer and the chief of police, but their voluntary "sentence" was rejected by village trustees, who suggested they come up with another idea.

The eighth graders still haven't figured out how they will raise their money, Davis said — and they still have their teachers to contend with in homeroom every morning.

The original center-mounted grass catcher.

Snapper was the first to figure it out. Where to put the grass catcher on a lawn mower.

If you put it on the side, we discovered, it sticks out and gets in the way when you want to do some close trimming. And as the bag fills, the mower gets off balance, making it hard to handle.

Snapper decided to mount the bag in the center, right between the handles. This way you can get in those tight spots easily. And, since all Snapper self-propelled mowers have rear-wheel drive, traction is improved as the bag fills.

Get a Snapper mower. The mower with the original center-mounted grass catcher, developed and perfected over years of experience.

Temporary Dist. 125 chief hired

A temporary superintendent has been hired by the High School Dist. 125 Board of Education to replace Supt. Harold Banser, who will leave the district this summer.

The board hired Harold Richards, retired superintendent of a Blue Island school district who also served recently as a temporary superintendent in the Barrington schools. A salary has not yet been decided.

Richards will replace Banser, who resigned from the district last month. Banser's resignation is effective June 30 and Richards will begin his duties at a time yet to be determined by the two administrators.

RICHARDS WILL remain at Stevenson High School until the board hires a permanent superintendent. The board approved Monday a brochure formulated by the Illinois Assoc. of School Boards which will be used by the association in a search for a new superintendent for the district.

The association will screen candidates for the position and will select five candidates to be interviewed by the Dist. 125 Board of Education, which makes the final selection, said Board Pres. W. Mike Swanson. He said the interviews would be held in June at the earliest.

Francis L. Wolowic, chairman of the "Save Our Stevenson" committee, which campaigned for proadministration candidates in this month's school board election, said Tuesday he objects to the board spending money on a temporary superintendent because there "are qualified administrators already in the high school to carry on for the interim period."

Stevenson to stage 'Music Man'

Preparations are now under way for Stevenson High School's spring musical, "The Music Man."

The musical will be performed at 8 p.m. May 7 and 8 in the auditorium of the school, Ill. Rte. 22, Prairie View. Reserved seats are $2, and ticket information is available from the school, 634-3434. Students with an activity ticket will be admitted for $1.50.

"The Music Man" is set in middle America during the Fourth of July, 1912. The show will feature 160 actors, singers musicians and dancers.

Stevenson's choral instructor, William Misik, is the show's general director with Ron Parker as student director, Tina Isaacson as stage manager and Sandra Lutz as show accompanist.

David Habley, Stevenson band and instrumental instructor, will direct the 30-piece pit orchestra for the production.

Designing and constructing sets for the show are Parker and William Papke, principal. Mary Herold will be in charge of costumes and Rennie Morris, a Stevenson graduate, has been appointed choreographer.

A real 'steel'

Lustron homes--wave of future 30 years ago

by JOE SWICKARD

The house of the future is not only here, but has been for almost 30 years.

Consider the assets: inexpensive and quickly erected but sturdy, almost maintenance free, and warm in winter and cool in summer.

There is one big drawback, though: the houses haven't been built in more than 25 years, since the company went bankrupt.

The Lustron houses stand as monuments to an idea that worked, but whose time had not come.

THE LUSTRON houses, about 25 of which are scattered in the Northwest suburbs, are easily recognizable by their all steel construction and pastel porcelain and baked enamel finish. When the Lustron Corp. promised all-steel construction, they delivered. There is not a stick of wood in its frame.

The small houses, all of the five-room, two-bedroom models, have panel steel exteriors that resemble an overgrown kitchen appliance.

But jokes and wisecracks aside, those who live in a Lustron home are not likely to part with them willingly.

"I wouldn't give it up unless I were a millionaire," said Mrs. Earl Wodrich, of 232 S. Hale St., Palatine.

The Wodrichs have had their Lustron house about 14 months. Retired, and having sold their larger house, they tried apartments and condominium apartments before they went looking for a Lustron house last year.

"THIS HOUSE wasn't advertised. We went to the real estate company looking for a Lustron house. Why? Because there's no maintenance," Mrs. Wodrich said.

Or as her neighbor Gordon Waddell at 325 S. Hale St. said, "This house was the reason we moved out here from Chicago in 1960. We saw one on display in Chicago and decided that's what we wanted. And we've been happy with it."

The reasons that attracted the Waddells in 1960 and the ones that drew the Wodrichs 25 years later are about the same: low costs; little, if any, maintenance; and good design and construction.

The houses' interior walls are enameled steel. There are no conventional doors, but rather sliding metal ones. The bedrooms are large and have picture windows, as do the living room and dining room.

The window placement is such that while both houses have air conditioners, neither one is used often because of good insulation and cross ventilation.

THERE IS VERY little wasted space. The houses have an abundance of cupboards, cabinets and closets, as well as built-in shelves and a vanity.

Originally the houses came with a combination dishwasher-clotheswasher in the kitchen. Waddell explained different tubs were used inside the same machine to accommodate dishes or clothes.

Waddell said when the houses first made their appearance, there was natural resistance from building unions and fears by some that houses would be ovens in the summer with condensation problems on humid days and ice boxes in the winter.

"The house is tight," Waddell said. "It is well-engineered."

"It's cool in summer and in winter it's warm as toast," Mrs. Wodrich concurred.

Both houses are using the original furnaces that force hot air around into the ceiling for radiant heating from the steel ceiling panels.

THERE ARE drawbacks to the houses.

"If you're the kind of person that gets tired of the same color walls all the time, it can be a problem," Mrs. Waddell said.

"But you can always change the drapes or something like that," she said.

Another problem with the steel walls is hanging pictures. The houses came with about a dozen metal hooks that are glued to the wall so pictures could be hung without pounding nails through the steel.

Some Lustron owners did pound nails through the walls and the holes will remain as long as the house stands.

BUT WHAT'S the inconvenience of not hanging a picture just so, when roof never has to be replaced and the house never painted inside or out?

"I figure we've saved $5,000 to $8,000 on decorating since we've been here," Mrs. Waddell estimated.

But the dream of low-cost housing marketed by the Lustron Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, never reached full fruition. Resistance from construction companies and some prohibitive building codes blocked its path.

And after rescue loans fell through, the company stopped operations before 1960.

But the promises they made in their promotional literature are still being met today.

THE WADDELLS ARE a little sad the company could not make a go of it.

"Had they stayed in business, I'm sure they would have continued to make improvements as they went along," Waddell said.

His wife added, "It met the need of a housing shortage. They were low-cost houses for people getting started. And they would have been an improvement over the things that have been put up over the years. These have lasted."

Realtor Jack L. Kemmerley said, "I like them. They've always maintained their value. In fact they probably have one of the highest degrees of appreciation."

ONES HE SOLD in the 1950s for about $12,000 are well into the $30,000-plus range, now, he said.

"I wish I had 100 of them. They're a good house," he said.

Waddell said, "I like it. It's a lazy man's house, it just about takes care of itself."

Village increases animal license fees

Wheeling has raised village animal license fees from $2.25 to $5 to offset the cost of animal control.

Animal owners are required to buy the licenses for their pets by July 1 of each year. The board recently approved a $15 fine for residents failing to buy the animal licenses.

Wheeling ordinances require all pets to be registered within seven days of birth. All animals must be vaccinated for rabies to qualify for a license.

Dist. 59 residents file unit referendum petitions

by JUDY JOBBITT
Petitions requesting a referendum on forming an Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit school district have been filed with the county schools superintendent by a committee of 10 residents from the Dist. 59 area.
The request is expected to receive strong opposition from High School

Vets seek May 30 parade participants

The Wheeling Combined Veterans organization is seeking participants for the group's annual Memorial Day Parade in the village May 30.
The veterans group, consisting of Amvets Post 66, VFW Post 7178 and American Legion Post 7178, is sponsoring the parade which will begin at 9 a.m. at Walt Whitman School, 133 S. Willie Ave. The parade will proceed north on Wille to Center Street, east on Center to Milwaukee Avenue, north on Milwaukee to Dundee Road and west on Dundee to Wolf Road. The parade will end with a ceremony at Chamber of Commerce Park on Wolf Road.
Those wishing to participate in the parade are urged to call the Amvets parade secretary, 537-1655.

Dist. 214, which has already retained legal counsel to block the movement. Dist. 214 officials said they fear the unit district reorganization would weaken the high school district's tax base.
The committee filed the petitions with Richard Martwick, Cook County school superintendent, after getting about 350 signatures during the week-end. The committee said in a press statement that the members "are confident the facts will convince the voters that a unit district will benefit our children's education and the taxpayers who support it."

INFORMATION ABOUT filing the petition and the committee's state- ment were withheld from The Herald until Wednesday by the committee.
Leah Cummins, committee member and Dist. 59 public relations director, said the consensus of committee members was to withhold this and other information from The Herald because of the "adversary stance" the paper editorially has taken on the unit district. She said committee members "wanted to see it in the other papers to be told accurately. Paddock's put itself in an adversary stance with the editorial. You've positioned yourself and you've positioned us."
The petition sets the boundaries for the proposed unit district contiguous with the current Dist. 59 boundaries. The proposed unit district would include Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools, currently in High School Dist. 214, in addition to the 21 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59.

Dist. 59 currently supplies about 40 per cent of the tax base, but only about 27 per cent of the students in Dist. 214. By forming a unit district, the committee anticipates receiving more funding for education in the Dist. 59 area than is currently available under the dual district system.

THE PETITION also calls for a combined education and building fund tax rate of $3.84 per $100 assessed valuation for the unit district, which equals the anticipated combined tax rates for Dist. 59 and 214.

"Speaking as a member but not for the committee of 10, I felt the educational and financial benefits available as a result of reorganization as a unit district made it necessary to move ahead and file the petition in hopes of bringing this issue before the voters at the earliest opportunity," said Thomas Guy, committee member.

In the statement the committee said it decided to file the petitions "based on the conviction that there are opportunities and advantages to be gained by our children as a result of reorganization. Our goal is and always has been to take this important issue to the public."

Frank Bristow, administrative assistant/attorney for Martwick, said Wednesday that the petitions were received. "We have not yet accepted it. We are taking it under review now," he said.

IF THE PETITIONS meet the legal requirements, Martwick will call for public hearings in which any individuals or school districts affected by the reorganization could present evidence. If Martwick approves the petitions following the hearings, the petitions and evidence presented are given to the state schools superintendent, who then must approve or reject the request for an election. If the request is approved, the state superintendent would call for an election in which Dist. 59 residents would vote on the issue.

The hearings and petition process requires a minimum of 130 days. The process could take several years if strong opposition is mounted.

Parks weigh vote plans in closed talks

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Strategy for the Buffalo Grove Park District referendum May 8 was mapped out at a closed meeting Tuesday night between three park district commissioners and the director of parks and recreation.

Park Comr. Raymond Ledinsky said Wednesday a three-hour meeting was held at his home Tuesday night to discuss plans for the district's upcoming referendum. No notice of the meeting was given to the press or public prior to the special meeting, an apparent violation of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Under the provisions of the act, notice of any special meeting must be given 24 hours before the meeting. In an opinion delivered in 1974, Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said, "A gathering need not be prearranged and set as to time, nor need it be an official meeting place to come within the purview of the act."

IN THE SAME opinion, Scott quoted from a California case which read, in part, "the term 'meeting' extends to informal sessions or conferences of the board members designed for the discussion of public business."

Ledinsky said the entire park board was invited to attend the meeting, as well as several residents and a village trustee. Only Ledinsky, park Director Stanley Crosland and commissioners Richard Lapham and William Kiddie attended the meeting, he said.

Park Board Pres. Joseph Settanni and Comr. Dede Armstrong both de-

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 396-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army Intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1953 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

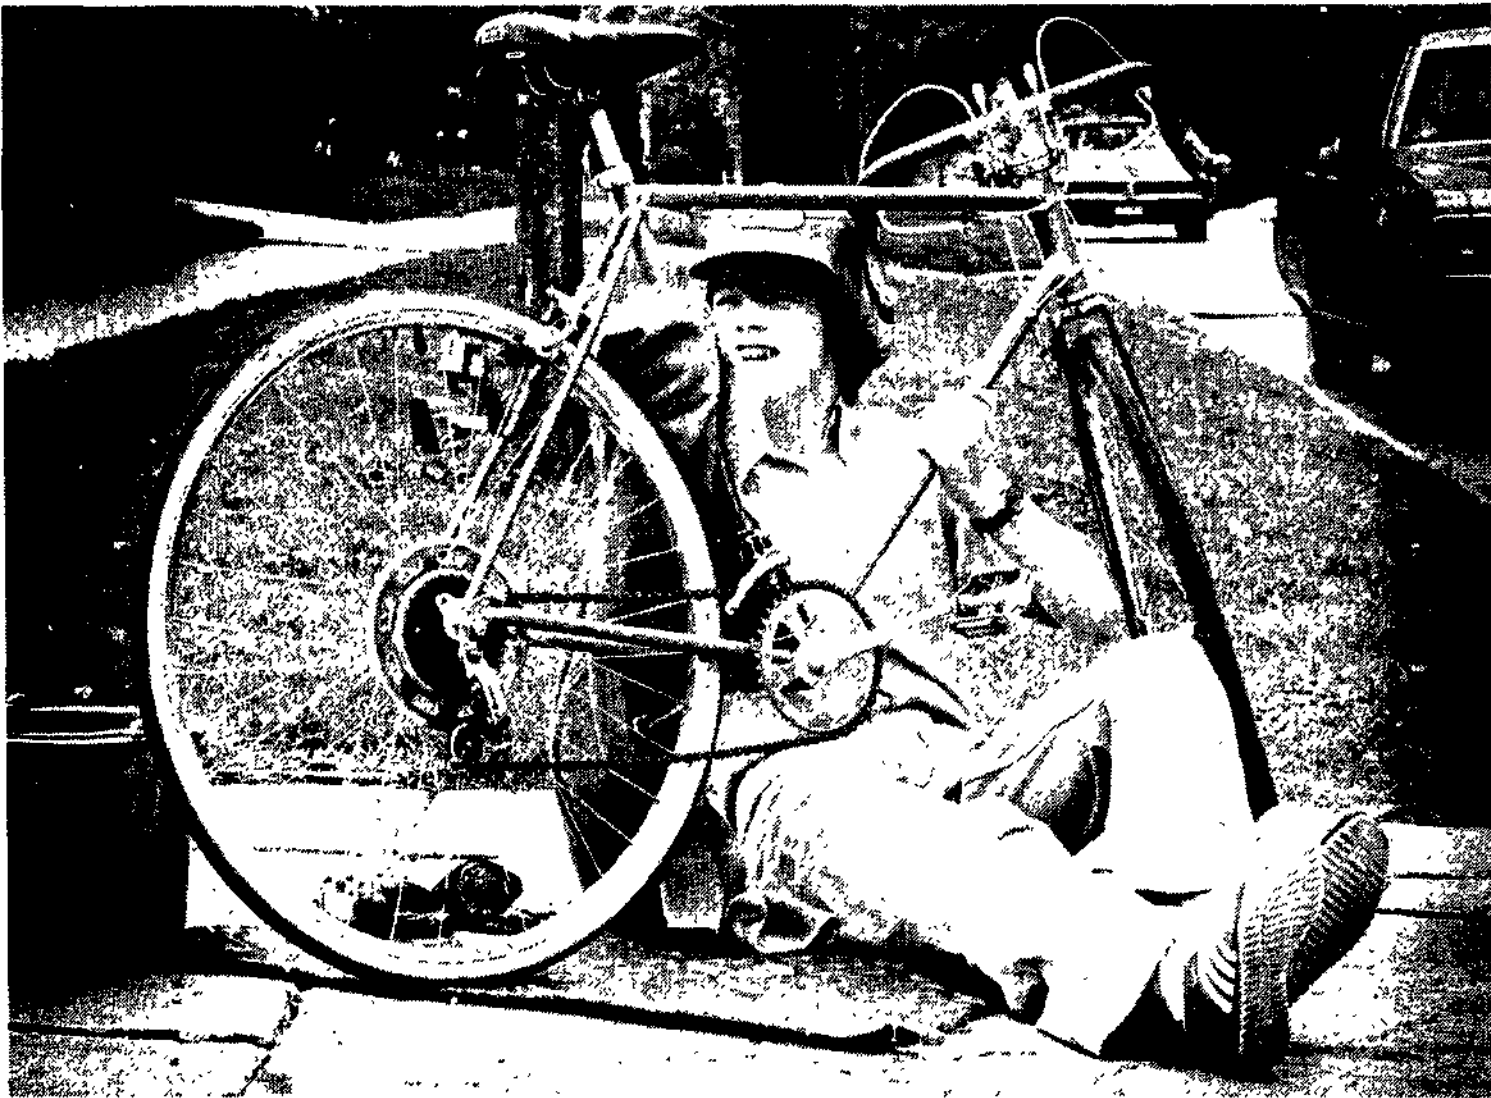

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also

7% pay hike for teachers included in 214 contract

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,650 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement

May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,650. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,848 approved this week by teachers in

New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year.

Other provisions in the contract include:

- An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $400.

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for speedier collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termex on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 6 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

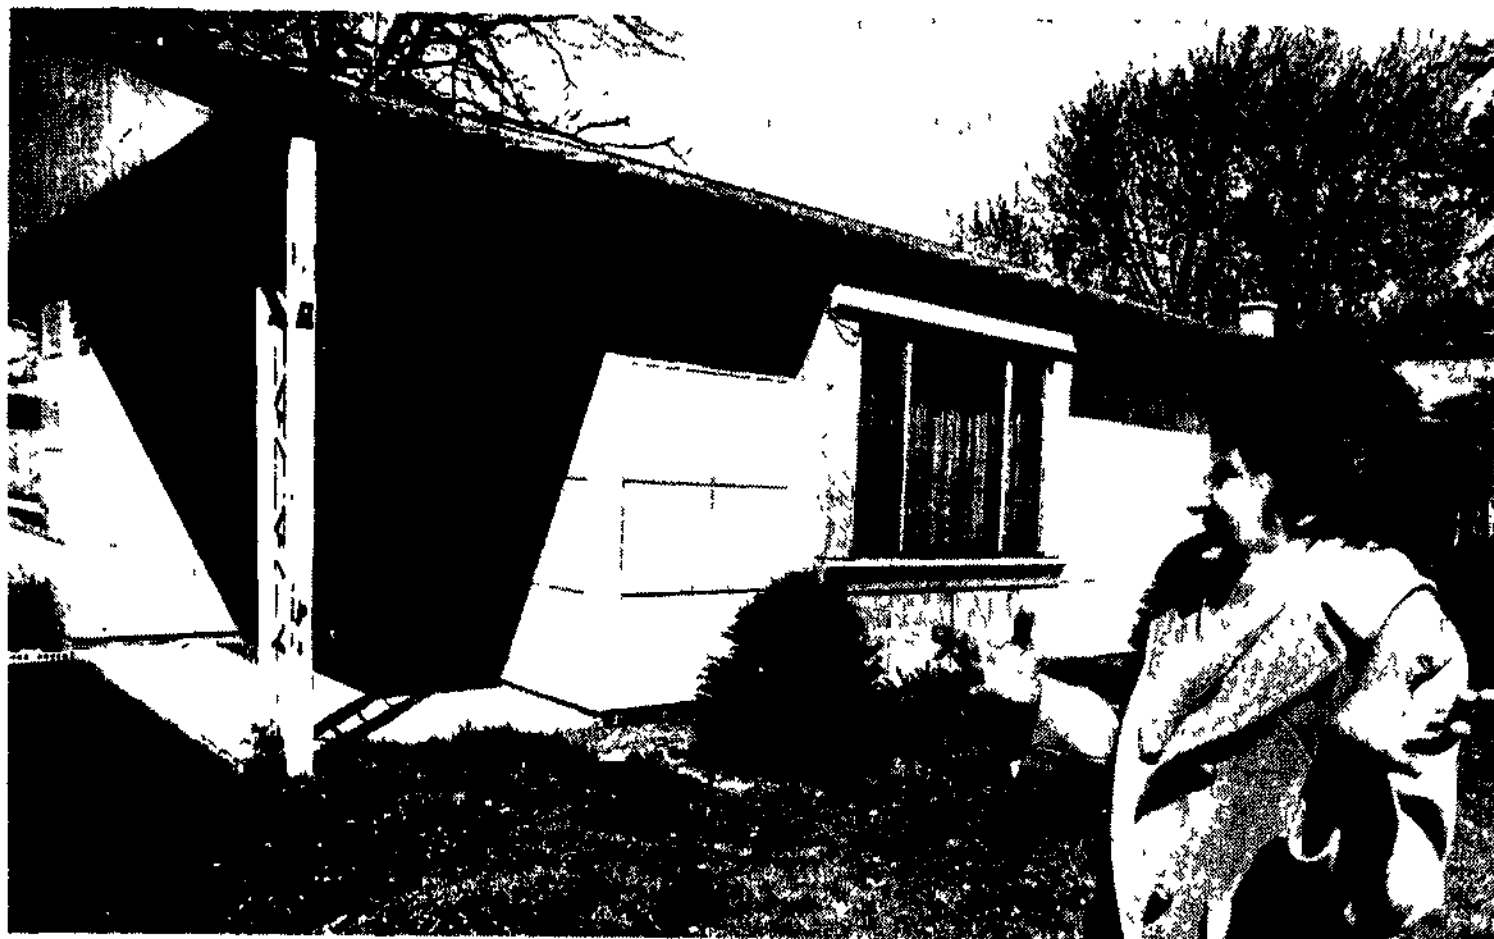

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

LUSTRON HOUSE in Palatine draws praise from new owner Mrs. Earl Wodrich. The all-steel houses were built to ease the post World War II housing shortage but financial problems and restrictive building codes snuffed the dream after a few years.

Lustron home—a 'steel' for owner

by JOE SWICKARD

The house of the future is not only here, but has been for almost 30 years.

Consider the assets: inexpensive and quickly erected but sturdy, almost maintenance free, and warm in winter and cool in summer.

There is one big drawback, though: the houses haven't been built in more than 25 years, since the company went bankrupt.

The Lustron houses stand as monuments to an idea that worked, but whose time had not come.

THE LUSTRON houses, about 25 of which are scattered in the Northwest suburbs, are easily recognizable by their all steel construction and pastel porcelain and baked enamel finish. When the Lustron Corp. promised all-steel construction, they delivered. There is not a stick of wood in its frame.

The small houses, all of the five-room, two-bedroom models, have panel steel exteriors that resemble an overgrown kitchen appliance.

But jokes and wisecracks aside, those who live in a Lustron home are not likely to part with them willingly. "I wouldn't give it up unless I were a millionaire," said Mrs. Earl Wodrich, of 232 S. Hale St., Palatine.

The Wodrichs have had their Lustron house about 14 months. Retired, and having sold their larger house, they tried apartments and condominium apartments before they went looking for a Lustron house last year.

"THIS HOUSE wasn't advertised. We went to the real estate company looking for a Lustron house. Why? Because there's no maintenance," Mrs. Wodrich said.

Or as her neighbor Gordon Waddell at 325 S. Hale St. said, "This house was the reason we moved out here from Chicago in 1950. We saw one on display in Chicago and decided that's what we wanted. And we've been happy with it."

The reasons that attracted the Waddells in 1950 and the ones that drew the Wodrichs 25 years later are about the same: low costs; little, if any, maintenance; and good design and construction.

The houses' interior walls are enameled steel. There are no conventional doors, but rather sliding metal ones. The bedrooms are large and have picture windows, as do the living room and dining room.

The window placement is such that while both houses have air conditioners, neither one is used often because of good insulation and cross ventilation.

THERE IS VERY little wasted space. The houses have an abundance of cupboards, cabinets and closets, as well as built-in shelves and a vanity.

Originally the houses came with a combination dishwasher-clotheswasher in the kitchen. Waddell explained different tubs were used inside the same machine to accommodate dishes or clothes.

Waddell said when the houses first made their appearance, there was natural resistance from building unions and fears by some that houses would be ovens in the summer with condensation problems on humid days and ice boxes in the winter.

"The house is tight," Waddell said. "It is well-engineered."

"It's cool in summer and in winter it's warm as toast," Mrs. Wodrich concurred.

Both houses are using the original furnaces that force hot air around into the ceiling for radiant heating from the steel ceiling panels.

THERE ARE drawbacks to the houses.

"If you're the kind of person that gets tired of the same color walls all the time, it can be a problem," Mrs. Waddell said.

"But you can always change the drapes or something like that," she said.

Another problem with the steel walls is hanging pictures. The houses came with about a dozen metal hooks that are glued to the wall so pictures could be hung without pounding nails through the steel.

Some Lustron owners did pound nails through the walls and the holes will remain as long as the house stands.

BUT WHAT'S the inconvenience of not hanging a picture just so, when roof never has to be replaced and the house never painted inside or out?

"I figure we've saved $5,000 to $8,000 on decorating since we've been here," Mrs. Waddell estimated.

But the dream of low-cost housing marketed by the Lustron Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, never reached full fruition. Resistance from construction companies and some prohibitive building codes blocked its path.

And after rescue loans fell through, the company stopped operations before 1950.

But the promises they made in their promotional literature are still being met today.

THE WADDELLS ARE a little sad the company could not make a go of it.

"Had they stayed in business, I'm sure they would have continued to make improvements as they went along," Waddell said.

His wife added, "It met the need of a housing shortage. They were low-cost houses for people getting started. And they would have been an improvement over the things that have been put up over the years. These have lasted."

Realtor Jack L. Kemmerley said, "I like them. They've always maintained their value. In fact they probably have one of the highest degrees of appreciation."

ONES HE SOLD in the 1950s for about $12,000 are well into the $30,000-plus range, now, he said.

"I wish I had 100 of them. They're a good house," he said.

Waddell said, "I like it. It's a lazy man's house, it just about takes care of itself."

Male kindergarten teacher

He's a big influence in their lives

By PAM BIGFORD

It's lots of singing, skipping and playing with clay. It's bandaging fingers, tying scarves and calming spats.

It's not for those who like organization, quiet and routine. This, for those who can't remember the fifth year of their lives, is kindergarten. And in the middle of it all at Stevenson School, 1414 Armstrong Ln., Elk Grove Village, is Jeff Clapsaddle.

CLAPSADDLE IS Dist. 54's single exception to the rule that all kindergarten teachers are female. A big guy — the kind who looks like he once made short work of his rival college football team — Clapsaddle decided to teach kindergarten this year "to prove to myself that I could teach anything."

Clapsaddle's change to kindergarten was a big one. He had been teaching sixth grade but said he left because "there wasn't enough contact with the kids." In kindergarten, he said, "you can't get away from them."

As a male kindergarten teacher Clapsaddle is a member of a rare species, but he doesn't think it makes any difference to his students whether their teacher is male or female.

"I've heard about studies that said having a male teacher helps the IQ of boys," he said. "But I think it's more important that the teacher, whether male or female, provides an environment where the kids feel secure and can learn."

"A kindergarten teacher has to be the kind of person from whom the kids know they can get affection, but they also have to know where the line is."

CLAPSADDLE SAID he runs into the same problems that other kindergarten teachers do, but he has his personal style of working things out.

"C'mon now, everybody skip," Clapsaddle urged, putting a lively record on the record player.

Most of the children began prancing around the edges of the room, but some five-year-olds apparently still hadn't mastered the art of skipping.

"If you can't skip, then just gallop," Clapsaddle encouraged. "Everybody but one little girl joined the antics of the groups."

"You can gallop for me, Molly," he said, taking her by the hand and joining his skipping charge.

"THERE'S NO mothering here," he said. "It's not just a male-type thing. It was difficult to get used to allowing the kids to do things by themselves rather than having me do it because it was more convenient or faster."

"They tie their shoes because kindergartners are supposed to be able to do that. When they cry I tell them to stop crying and tell me what's wrong," Clapsaddle said, as he later demonstrated when he carefully bandaged a tiny five-year-old's finger that got smashed during gym.

Clapsaddle said teaching kindergarten is "a lot more exhausting" than teaching sixth grade.

"In sixth grade you sit behind a desk. Here I have some days when I never get to sit down at all," he said.

OTHER OCCUPATIONAL hazards include kindergartners' short attention spans and their difficulty in following directions.

"If you get the kids to sit down for 15 minutes, you're doing OK," said Clapsaddle, who plans long lists of activities to capture the attention of his students.

"I think I challenge them by keeping about a half-step above them," he said. "But what really frustrates me most is their inability to follow directions."

Clapsaddle said he has to repeat instructions three times before everybody pays attention, and it's also difficult to switch from one activity to another because kindergartners do not all finish doing the same thing at the same time.

"IN SIXTH GRADE you can change subjects without putting on a circus act in between," he said. "In kindergarten some kids are done with one thing while others aren't. So you have to provide entertainment in between everything. If you wait for them, they'll take off on their own."

Clapsaddle believes kindergartners have been directed too much in the past, that adults "have been giving them the answers when they haven't asked the questions."

"I direct their play only so they won't do the same things every day," he said. "The key is the teachable moment. We call ourselves facilitators. We move around and look for the teachable moments rather than sitting in one spot and telling them this and this and this."

The district's kindergarten philosophy is to get the kindergartners ready for school, and Clapsaddle agrees with it, although there are kindergartners who are quite advanced.

"THERE ARE children here who have to develop the eye-mind coordination to effectively read, and things like playing with blocks helps this. You also have to help a child learn to sit and listen so he'll be able to do that in first grade," he said.

Clapsaddle said what he enjoys most about his new post is the "unpretentiousness" of the children.

"Kindergartners really come out and say what they feel. They're not inhibited. And very rarely do I get one laughing at another one because they haven't learned to do that yet."

Clapsaddle said, barring any offers to move to an administrative position, he'll be teaching kindergarten again next year, and he foresees more men moving into primary education.

"If the men are good teachers, then fine, I'll be glad to see them come in. But I wouldn't want to have more male teachers in grade school just because they're men," Clapsaddle said.

"I would rather have it said about me that I was another good kindergarten teacher rather than a male kindergarten teacher. I just want to be known as a good teacher."

A LITTLE CUTTING, pasting and presto — a crown for a queen is complete. Jeff Clapsaddle, the only male kindergarten teacher in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, in a traditionally female job.

Fill-in hired by Dist. 125 for superintendent post

A temporary superintendent has been hired by the High School Dist. 125 Board of Education to replace Supt. Harold Banser, who will leave the district this summer.

The board hired Harold Richards, retired superintendent of a Blue Island school district who also served recently as a temporary superintendent in the Barrington schools. A salary has not yet been decided.

Richards will replace Banser, who resigned from the district last month. Banser's resignation is effective June 30 and Richards will begin his duties at a time yet to be determined by the two administrators.

RICHARDS WILL remain at Stevenson High School until the board hires a permanent superintendent. The board approved Monday a brochure formulated by the Illinois Assoc. of School Boards which will be used by the association in a search for a new superintendent for the district.

The association will screen candidates for the position and will select five candidates to be interviewed by the Dist. 125 Board of Education, which makes the final selection, said Board Pres. W. Mike Swanson. He said the interviews would be held in June at the earliest.

Francis L. Wolowic, chairman of the "Save Our Stevenson" committee, which campaigned for proadministration candidates in this month's school board election, said Tuesday he objects to the board spending money on a temporary superintendent because there "are qualified administrators already in the high school to carry on for the interim period."

Stevenson to stage 'Music Man'

Preparations are now under way for Stevenson High School's spring musical, "The Music Man."

The musical will be performed at 8 p.m. May 7 and 8 in the auditorium of the school, Ill. Rte. 22, Prairie View. Reserved seats are $2, and ticket information is available from the school, 634-3434. Students with an activity ticket will be admitted for $1.50.

"The Music Man" is set in middle America during the Fourth of July, 1912. The show will feature 160 actors, singers musicians and dancers.

Stevenson's choral instructor, William Misk, is the show's general director with Ron Parker as student director, Tina Isaacson as stage manager and Sandra Lutz as show accompanist.

David Habley, Stevenson band and instrumental instructor, will direct the 30-piece pit orchestra for the production.

Designing and constructing sets for the show are Parker and William Papke, principal. Mary Herold will be in charge of costumes and Rennie Morris, a Stevenson graduate, has been appointed choreographer.

nied they were given notice of the special meeting.

"The meeting was just a few board members getting together to get some ideas," Ledinsky said. "We wanted to discuss what was going to be presented at Thursday's meeting (a public discussion on the referendum) and nothing was hidden from anyone."

UNDER THE STATE open meeting law, the only subjects that can be discussed in a closed session are personnel, land acquisition and pending litigation.

Ledinsky said the officials discussed location and purchase price of real estate in the Mill Creek and Willow Stream areas, but admitted that other referendum plans also were discussed.

Kiddle said, "There was no meeting last night — we were just editing materials for the brochure to be distributed to the residents."

"All the referendum plans have been finalized, and there was no attempt to hide behind doors," he said.

Lapham was unavailable for comment on the meeting.

Crosland refused to comment on the content of the meeting, but said the gathering did not constitute a public meeting because it was "a committee meeting in a private home."

The attorney general has stated, "All meetings of . . . committees and subcommittees which are supported in whole or in part by tax revenue, or which expend tax revenue, shall be public meetings."

7% pay hike in Dist. 214 contract

$800 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $800 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

- Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.
- A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.
- An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

- An increase in summer school pay. Teachers would still be paid 10 per cent of their base salary but the maximum summer pay would be increased from $1,250 to $1,356.
- The formation of a committee to recommend procedure for reducing staff as enrollment declines. The committee would report to the board by Feb. 1, 1977.
- An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

The contract package represents a total increase in district expenses of about $2 million, 11 per cent. The district has 1,089 teachers.

The tax impact on homeowners that would result from the passage of the Buffalo Grove Park District referendum May 8 will be presented at a public meeting today at 8 p.m. at the park district office, 150 Raupp Blvd.

The park district's bond consultant will discuss the financial impact of the referendum, which calls for purchase of new land, upgrading existing or soon-to-be-acquired parks and a hike in the park district's budget.

Also included in the referendum is a proposal to increase the debt limitation to a 5 per cent maximum of the value of taxable property in the district. The current rate is 2.5 per cent.

IF THE REFERENDUM passes, $600,000 would be used to purchase park sites near Mill Creek and in Lake County near the Willow Stream School.

The referendum also calls for improvements to 18 existing or soon-to-be-acquired park sites. The largest projects would be improvements at Twin Groves School and development of a site at the Crossings. The total price tag of the parks improvements is estimated at $300,000.

Also requested is an increase in the park district's corporate and recreation budgets to help stave off cutbacks in service because of a shrinking tax base, said Stanley Crosland, director of parks and recreation. The increase would raise the total budget from approximately $108,500 to $165,000.

If Chicago passes ordinance

Zettek to support youth ban for 'violent' movies

Elk Grove Village Pres. Charles J. Zettek will support a local ordinance banning minors from viewing violent films if the Chicago City Council passes a similar ordinance.

Zettek said Wednesday he agrees with an ordinance proposed by Mayor Richard J. Daley to prohibit those under 18 from viewing "excessively" violent movies. He added he would back a similar code for Elk Grove Village if the Chicago code is upheld in court.

"We will watch with very keen interest what happens in Chicago, and if Mayor Daley is successful, I will urge that we incorporate the same language regarding violence in our own ordinance," Zettek said.

THE VILLAGE has an existing anti-obscenity ordinance which prohibits the showing of movies and the sale of writings or recordings which are deemed obscene by village-designated reviewers and the courts.

The ordinance was adopted in an emergency village board session in January 1974 and was used at that time in an attempt to block local showing of the X-rated film, "The Devil in Miss Jones."

The film was shown for several days while the village and Elk Grove Cinema owner Walter Panceo went to court, but Panceo subsequently agreed to stop showing the movie.

Zettek said he has been following the progress of Daley's proposal, which is now under consideration in a subcommittee of the Chicago City Council finance committee. The proposal would prohibit persons under 18 from viewing films judged excessively violent.

CHICAGO CORPORATION counsel William R. Quinlan has said the measure could survive a constitutional challenge. But the American Civil Liberties Union has said the proposal would infringe on 1st Amendment rights.

"I think Mayor Daley has a very valid and legitimate concern," Zettek said. "I'm entirely in accord with that posture."

"Certainly we don't enhance youths' minds when we expose them to pornography and excessive violence," he added. "If we had the ability (to write such an ordinance) I would be the first to endorse it."

Zettek said under the village's current practices, police officers and selected residents view each X-rated movie before it is shown in the village. He said the ordinance is a "very difficult type to enforce" because the movie must be proven to be "harmful."

"YOU HAVE A difficult time with the civil liberties," he said.

Hoffman Estates also has a local anti-obscenity ordinance patterned after the Elk Grove Village ordinance. The ordinance was adopted in a special village board meeting in March 1975 after a local theater advertised the coming showing of the X-rated film "Emmanuelle."

Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter proposed the ordinance after seeing the advertisement because she said a local standard should exist to judge possible public complaints on obscenity.

The movie, however, was never shown in the village and the ordinance has not been tested.

Mrs. Hayter was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 396-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army Intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1953 to 1973. "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also

7% teacher pay hike included in Dist. 214 pact

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on (Continued on Page 4)

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for expedient collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termex on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on a 2-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

Prospect Heights Dist. 23

Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 will offer a summer program at George Williams Camp, Lake Geneva, Wis. from June 21-26 for students in grades five, six and seven. The camping program is part of the regular summer school program "Off Campus Affective Education."

Students will visit Yerkes Observatory, a camp-run animal farm, a stone quarry and a century-old cemetery.

Cost of the program is $50 which includes lodging, meals, entrance fees, materials, insurance and round trip transportation. Students who live outside the school district may attend by paying an additional $25.

Deadline for registration is Friday, and forms are available at MacArthur Junior High School, 700 Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights. For information call Phil Cornwell, 250-4550, ext. 30.

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59

Orders are being taken through Friday for a spring plant sale sponsored by the ways and means committee at Forest View Elementary School, 1801 Estates Dr., Mount Prospect.

Red geraniums and was begonias in four inch pots will be sold for $1 each. To place orders, call Corrine Marshall, 439-6597 or Judy Briesch, 439-6603. Plants will be delivered May 7.

East Maine Dist. 63

"Our Country 'Tis of Thee," a musical on the Bicentennial, will be presented by students from Gemini Junior High School at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Apollo Junior High School auditorium, 10100 Dee Rd., Des Plaines.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students. The director of the production is Margie Fleishman.

High School Dist. 214

Wheeling High School's senior class is sponsoring a blood drive Friday as a community service project. The drawing will be held in Room 104 at the school, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling.

Donations made during the drive will be credited to the community in which the student lives, and covers the students immediate family, including grandparents, for one year.

In general...

An environmental education workshop for teachers will be held Saturday and May 15, at Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. Conducted by the National Park Service in cooperation with the National College of Education, Evanston, the workshop may be taken for one hour of graduate credit. Sessions will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For registration and information contact Wayne Schimpff, 1866 Mandel, Westchester, Ill. 60153, 562-2127.

7% pay hike in Dist. 214 contract

the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,850. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,948 approved this week by teachers in New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year.

Other provisions in the contract include:

- An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $600 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $800 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

- Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.

- A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.

- An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

- An increase in summer school pay. Teachers would still be paid 10 per cent of their base salary but the maximum summer pay would be increased from $1,250 to $1,356.

- The formation of a committee to recommend procedure for reducing staff as enrollment declines. The committee would report to the board by Feb. 1, 1977.

- An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

The contract package represents a total increase in district expenses of about $2 million, 11 per cent. The district has 1,089 teachers.

At Elk Grove High School

Festival salutes 'Bi-Grentennial'

This year's spring arts festival at Elk Grove High School is titled "The Bi-Grentennial" in honor of the nation's Bicentennial celebration and the school mascot, the Grenadier.

More than 100 events spotlighting the American creative spirit are scheduled through the month of May as part of the Bi-Grentennial sponsored by the Elk Grove High School Humanities division and the village's Elk Grove Arts Guild.

A wide range of events will be featured involving such areas as archeology, architecture, crafts, cuisine, dance, drama, fashion, film, music, poetry and photography brought to the festival by professionals, students and community members.

The Bi-Grentennial program lists events sponsored by the Bi-Grentennial, as well as those of general interest to patrons of the Elk Grove Arts Guild and the public. Information on Bi-Grentennial events is available from the school, 439-4800, ext. 71. All events are open to the public.

Events begin this weekend.

Chicago woman, 21, faces drug charges

A Chicago woman facing prostitution charges in Elk Grove Village has been arrested by local police for drug possession.

Sandra Taylor, 21, was taken into custody Monday after police stopped her auto at Algonquin and Busse roads shortly before 2 a.m. on a traffic violation.

Police then allegedly found a container with preluin and valium pills and PCP, a horse tranquilizer, belonging to the woman.

She was arrested earlier this month on prostitution charges for allegedly soliciting an undercover village policeman.

She is free on $1,000 bond pending an appearance May 27 in the Elk Grove branch of Cook County Circuit Court on the three counts of possession of a controlled substance stemming from Monday's arrest, police said.

The original center-mounted grass catcher.

Snapper was the first to figure it out. Where to put the grass catcher on a lawn mower.

If you put it on the side, we discovered, it sticks out and gets in the way when you want to do some close trimming. And as the bag fills, the mower gets off balance, making it hard to handle.

Snapper decided to mount the bag in the center, right between the handles. This way you can get in those tight spots easily. And, since all Snapper self-propelled mowers have rear-wheel drive, traction is improved as the bag fills.

Get a Snapper mower. The mower with the original center-mounted grass catcher, developed and perfected over years of experience.

Another feature that makes Snapper fast. First.

Village board wrapup

Snorkel to be sold to pay for pumper

The Elk Grove Village Board declared a fire department snorkel as surplus equipment, and it will be sold by bid for a minimum of $60,000 with the money tentatively scheduled to help pay for a new $94,000 fire department pumper engine.

Bisner Road improvements

The village board set 7 p.m. Tuesday for a discussion on how soon it wants Centex Homes of Illinois Corp. to complete improvements to Bisner Road. Trustee Edward W. Kenna Jr. suggested the board might want to delay since the Cook County Forest Preserve District is still using the road to haul dirt from the Busse Woods recreation site now under construction.

Well repairs approved

The board approved repairs for two wells. The cost of repairs at Well No. 5, Walnut Street, north of Tonne Road, is unknown because the cause of the breakdown last Thursday has not been determined. Layne-Western Inc. will receive $41,128.54 for repairs at Well No. 6, 1751 Greenleaf Ave.

Gallon donors honored

The village board honored the following one-gallon blood donors: Zorbas and Albert Domanico. Trustee Nanci L. Vanderweel was Robert Curatti, Anita Freedman, Jeff Jenkins, Frances Lah, James given special recognition as a half-gallon donor and founder of the local blood program.

Village Pres. Charles J. Zetek said since 1973, 1,800 residents have donated a total of more than 3,400 pints, including 40 gallon donors and 168 half-gallon donors.

Chimneys violate codes

Lyle Stine, 770 Leicester Rd., told the board 38 chimneys in the Elk Grove Estates Townhouse Quadrplexes, built by Centex Homes of Illinois Corp., violate the building codes because they are too close to a vertical wall. Stine said this has caused drafts to reverse in a few instances.

Bob Callahan of the building department told the board the village was aware of the problem and that it is part of the code violations being studied in connection with furnace problems in Centex homes in the village.

Material purchase OK'd

The board approved the purchase of 400 tons of concrete for $4,800 and 600 tons of binder material for $6,990 from Arrow Road Construction Co., Mount Prospect. The materials will be used for routine street maintenance.

Centex land accepted

The board accepted from Centex Homes of Illinois Corp. the land donation for the Meacham Road fire station, to be built west of Ill. Rte. 53.

Sewer clog-up cost puts local man out on limb

James M. Johnston says he loves trees but not enough to pay out hundreds of dollars to keep one.

"I just can't see where I can afford it," Johnston, 573 Oak St., told the Elk Grove Village Board Tuesday as he outlined the alternatives he has been given in his battle with a silver maple whose roots continually clog up his sewer line.

Johnston said his options have been to have the sewer line cleaned out once or twice a year at $150 each time, or to put in a special sewer line at a cost of $750.

Johnston, seeking some type of relief from the village board, said he had the sewer cleaned out last October and it was blocked again Easter Sunday. He said the solution offered by Trustee George T. Spees, — pouring copper sulfate into the sewer line — was not working in his case.

Johnston said he would be willing to pay for the replacement of the tree and the village board said it would consider his proposal and rule later.

"There are many, many people suffering," Johnston said, pointing out the trees were planted all through the old section of the village.

Spees, who said he has had a similar problem cured with the copper sulfate treatment, told Johnston future planting of silver maples on parkways has been banned.

Dist. 54 math test helps locate skill deficiencies

by PAM BIGFORD

Standardized math test scores for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 students are up "significantly" compared to the past two years.

Much of the credit goes to a new concept in evaluating math skills that is unique to Dist. 54.

Tests were given this year to students in third, fifth and seventh grades. Third grade students scored better than 78 per cent of students tested across the country, while fifth graders scored better than 69 per cent and seventh graders scored better than 64 per cent of students nationwide.

Carl Seltzer, assistant superintendent for curriculum said the scores are "significantly greater" than scores for the past two years. The greatest increases were in the computation area such as addition, subtraction and fractions.

MARY KAY KARL, Dist. 54 mathematics consultant, said a new method of allowing teachers to analyze their students' weaknesses in specific areas is "probably the greatest reason for the increase in the standardized test scores."

The new evaluation method begins with a math test given to all district students the first week of school. Unlike a standardized math test which indicates to the district only how its students are doing in math compared to students across the country, the Dist. 54 test reveals specific math skill information about individual students.

Seltzer said the idea for the new type of test developed "because the district was very frustrated by the standardized math test. When the math scores go down, the community and the school board starts asking us what we're going to do about it."

Two years ago the district asked the federal government for a grant of about $140,000 to develop a model test that would show teachers where their students stand. The district hired Joseph Cech, who, with the help of district administrators, developed the Program Evaluation Model Project. SELTZER SAID the district has been working on a similar test for language arts, which should be ready by September.

The Dist. 54 test is much less expensive than the standardized math test. Seltzer said it costs the district $7,300 to give the standardized test to 6,000 students, while it costs $2,500 to give the Dist. 54 test to 10,000 students. The amount of information available from the test is 15 times greater than that generated by the standardized test, he said.

"This concept is really the simplest thing in the world but it's never been done before," Seltzer said. "It's a lot of work, but I think it's really beginning to pay off."

Dist. 59 residents file unit referendum petitions

by JUDY JOBBITT

Petitions requesting a referendum on forming an Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit school district have been filed with the county schools superintendent by a committee of 10 residents from the Dist. 59 area.

The request is expected to receive strong opposition from High School Dist. 214, which has already retained legal counsel to block the movement. Dist. 214 officials said they fear the unit district reorganization would weaken the high school district's tax base.

The committee filed the petitions with Richard Martwick, Cook County school superintendent, after getting about 350 signatures during the week-end. The committee said in a press statement that the members "are confident the facts will convince the voters that a unit district will benefit our children's education and the taxpayers who support it."

INFORMATION ABOUT filing the petition and the committee's statement were withheld from The Herald until Wednesday by the committee.

Leah Cummins, committee member and Dist. 59 public relations director, said the consensus of committee members was to withhold this and other information from The Herald because of the "adversary stance" the paper editorially has taken on the unit district. She said committee members "wanted to see it in the other papers to be told accurately. Paddock's put itself in an adversary stance with the editorial. You've positioned yourself and you've positioned us."

The petition sets the boundaries for the proposed unit district contiguous with the current Dist. 59 boundaries. The proposed unit district would include Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools, currently in High School Dist. 214, in addition to the 21 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59.

Dist. 59 currently supplies about 40 per cent of the tax base, but only about 27 per cent of the students in Dist. 214. By forming a unit district, the committee anticipates receiving more funding for education in the Dist. 59 area than is currently available under the dual district system.

THE PETITION also calls for a combined education and building fund tax rate of $3.84 per $100 assessed valuation for the unit district, which equals the anticipated combined tax rates for Dist. 59 and 214.

"Speaking as a member but not for the committee of 10, I felt the educational and financial benefits available as a result of reorganization as a unit district made it necessary to move ahead and file the petition in hopes of bringing this issue before the voters at the earliest opportunity," said Thomas Guy, committee member.

In the statement the committee said it decided to file the petitions "based on the conviction that there are opportunities and advantages to be gained by our children as a result of reorganization. Our goal is and always has been to take this important issue to the public."

Frank Bristow, administrative assistant/attorney for Martwick, said Wednesday that the petitions were received. "We have not yet accepted it. We are taking it under review now," he said.

IF THE PETITIONS meet the legal requirements, Martwick will call for public hearings in which any individuals or school districts affected by the reorganization could present evidence. If Martwick approves the petitions following the hearings, the petitions and evidence presented are given to the state schools superintendent, who then must approve or reject the request for an election. If the request is approved, the state superintendent would call for an election in which Dist. 59 residents would vote on the issue.

The hearings and petition process requires a minimum of 130 days. The process could take several years if strong opposition is mounted.

Dist. 54 math test helps locate skill problems

by PAM BIGFORD

Standardized math test scores for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 students are up "significantly" compared to the past two years.

Much of the credit goes to a new concept in evaluating math skills that is unique to Dist. 54.

Tests were given this year to students in third, fifth and seventh grades. Third grade students scored better than 78 per cent of students tested across the country, while fifth graders scored better than 69 per cent and seventh graders scored better than 64 per cent of students nationwide.

Carl Seltzer, assistant superintendent for curriculum said the scores are "significantly greater" than scores for the past two years. The greatest increases were in the computation area such as addition, subtraction and fractions.

MARY KAY KARL, Dist. 54 mathematics consultant, said a new method of allowing teachers to analyze their students' weaknesses in specific areas is "probably the greatest reason for the increase in the standardized test scores."

The new evaluation method begins with a math test given to all district students the first week of school. Unlike a standardized math test which indicates to the district only how its students are doing in math compared to students across the country, the Dist. 54 test reveals specific math skill information about individual students.

Seltzer said the idea for the new type of test developed "because the district was very frustrated by the standardized math test. When the math scores go down, the community and the school board starts asking us what we're going to do about it."

Two years ago the district asked the federal government for a grant of about $140,000 to develop a model test that would show teachers where their students stand. The district hired Joseph Cech, who, with the help of district administrators, developed the Program Evaluation Model Project.

SELTZER SAID the district has been working on a similar test for language arts, which should be ready for September.

The Dist. 54 test is much less expensive than the standardized math test. Seltzer said it costs the district $7,300 to give the standardized test to 6,000 students, while it costs $2,500 to give the Dist. 54 test to 10,000 students. The amount of information available from the test is 15 times greater than that generated by the standardized test, he said.

"This concept is really the simplest thing in the world but it's never been done before," Seltzer said. "It's a lot of work, but I think it's really beginning to pay off."

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 396-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army Intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1953 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for speedier collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.3 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Ying and Kia

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termex on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start, by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

Reinhardt Luebbers' dream of bringing Abraham Lincoln to Schaumburg may become reality.

Businessmen in downstate Charleston who own a 64-foot statue of the 16th President have agreed to accept bids for it. Bid deadline is July 1.

Luebbers, Schaumburg Historical Society President, said he will begin a campaign to solicit funds from community organizations and local merchants to bid on the statue which now stands in a rural memorial park.

The Fiberglass statue will be placed in the Schaumburg Town Square, if the purchase attempt is successful, Luebbers said.

WILLIAM BROWNING, executive vice president of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, said Wednesday the group agreed two weeks ago to offer the statue for sale.

Browning said he has received notification from two parties expressing interest in bidding for the world's tallest statue of Lincoln, but he declined to name them.

"Pat Paulson wants it bad," Browning said. "But he still wants it for free."

Paulsen, a nationally known comedian, wants to use the statue as a prop in his program "Lincoln Goes West" in which he will travel around

Reunions

Plans for a 25th reunion are being made by the 1951 June graduating class of Stelmets High School, Chicago. The reunion will be held Nov. 13, at the Indian Lakes Country Club, Bloomingdale. Classmates are asked to contact Ron Gliot, 894-3112, for information.

In reinstatement attempt

Ex-cop seeks top court verdict

A former Schaumburg policeman has petitioned the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn his 1972 dismissal.

The Illinois Supreme Court and the U.S. District Court of Appeals have reaffirmed a Schaumburg Fire and Police Commission decision to fire Raymond T. Kweik, and the former policeman has decided to take the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court, Village Atty. Jack Siegel said.

The higher court appeals came after a Cook County Circuit Court judge upheld Kweik's April 1972 dismissal.

"Apparently Mr. Kweik is exhausting all legal possibilities of getting his old job back," Siegel said.

KWEIK WAS discharged by the village commission for violations of department rules and regulations. Most of the charges centered around Kweik's actions concerning another dismissed police officer, William Heidt.

Kweik had been subpoenaed to testify for Heidt in a grand theft case, but did not report the subpoena to his superiors. Kweik also was found guilty of removing records from the police department, giving false statements to superiors and conduct unbecoming an officer.

Criminal charges against Heidt were dropped, but his dismissal was upheld in a Circuit Court administrative review.

The commission has ruled that Kweik divided his loyalties between his duties as a policeman and Heidt.

THE RECORDS, overweight truck and drunken driving reports, were copied and made part of a series of allegations in letters from a man identified only as "Mike Greenfield."

Conroy requested an investigation of Schaumburg Police Department by the Cook County Sheriff's Police.

The Greenfield letters accused the department and Chief Martin J. Conroy of wrongdoing and later of poor judgment in dropping charges in those matters.

The investigation subsequently cleared Conroy and the department of the allegations.

To encourage business

Nine industrialists named to panel

Nine industrialists have been appointed to Schaumburg Village Pres. Raymond Kessell's newly formed industrial development committee, created to encourage major businesses and industries to locate in the village.

Village trustees have ratified Kessell's appointment of Jerry Haney, vice president and controller of International Harvester Co.; William Jones, president of Sackett-Chicago Corp. and Schaumburg-Centex Businessmen's Assn.; and Marshall Bennett, of Bennett and Kahnweiler, real estate brokers, to one-year commission terms.

Appointed to two-year terms were Robert Brawley, Motorola, Inc. facilities manager; Russell Larson, manager of administration and services for Union Oil Company; Charles Urban, president of Rockwell-International and Richard LaReno, president of Arthur Rubloff & Co., Realtors.

BILL WALSH, Walden Investment Co., and Richard Batchen, vice-president of J. Emil Anderson and Sons, developers, were named to four-year terms.

Kessell said he is pleased the men have accepted commission posts, adding many have been asked to serve in a similar capacity in Chicago "but have declined, yet they have agreed to become members of Schaumburg's industrial development group."

With the exception of Bennett all of the men have Schaumburg offices.

Bennett and his partners Jack N. Pritzker and William Lambert own extensive properties in the Schaumburg area including the 236-acre Golf Road site of the proposed $250 million Woodfield '76 "Metro Center" and Schaumburg Airport.

KESSELL SAID the commission will ultimately have 13 members with 5 appointed to one-year terms, 4 to two-year terms and 4 to three-year terms. On reappointment, all commission members will have three-year terms, Kessell said.

Kessell created the commission by ordinance making the panel an arm of Schaumburg government.

It was created as the result of a campaign promise made by Kessell before his election last year, when he said both a homeowners association and business group would be formed as advisory panels.

Male rule over! Shirley Kost named auditor

One hundred twenty-six years of male domination in Schaumburg Township government ended Wednesday with the appointment of Hoffman Estates resident Shirley Kost to the vacant post on the township board of auditors.

Mrs. Kost, 326 Aster St., was named to succeed John Jensen who moved from the community in February.

She will fill the balance of Jensen's unexpired term which ends April, 1977.

In announcing the appointment, Township Supervisor Vernon Aubenstein said Mrs. Kost, an 11-year resident of the community, is "highly qualified" for the township post because of her active history in church, community organizations, PTA work and "community involvement."

"IT WILL BE A unique opportunity to have someone in attendance at functions when those of us with full-time jobs can't get away," Aubenstein said.

Mrs. Kost said she is "very pleased and proud," to accept the appointment. "It is a job I view with much respect and I hope I will be the type of auditor you expect," she said.

Of three applicants for the township post, Mrs. Kost was the only person endorsed by the Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township which has traditionally controlled the township board.

Other applicants included Russell Blas, Hoffman Estates, and Timothy O'Brien, Schaumburg.

Henry Cornet, Hanover Park, earlier applied for the vacant township post but withdrew from consideration when Mrs. Kost was endorsed by the township GOP organization.

the country in honor of the Bicentennial, he said.

LUEBBERS SAID he expects the statue to go for a minimum $25,000, not including transportation charges.

The statue, erected in May 1969, cost an estimated $30,000, although setting it up in a privately owned memorial park ran the total expenses to more than $80,000, Browning said.

Browning said the group isn't interested in turning the Lincoln statue into a money-making venture, because it was a community contribution and funds from the sale probably will be returned to the community for the public library, county jail facilities or community projects, Browning said.

"Money isn't tight right now," Luebbers said. "I don't anticipate much trouble though. The publicity that this thing will bring is worth at least $100,000."

BOLI awards pact for road upgrade

Members of Schaumburg's Board of Local Improvements have awarded a $389,000 paving contract to low bidder R. W. Dunteman Co., Bensenville.

The project will include paving and underground work at American Lane and Stae Pkwy. near Woodfield Shopping Center, and paving of American Lane from Plum Grove Road east to tie in with the existing pavement at the west side of the Chicago Health and Tennis Club, 1020 Meacham Rd.

When the work is completed, American Lane will extend west lounge, which he expects to remain open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Road.

The work will be paid for by a special assessment to be levied over 10 years against the property owners who will benefit from the road improvement.

New rescue squad ordered

Schaumburg officials have awarded a $29,000 contract to Able Fire and Safety Equipment Co. for replacement of a village fire department rescue squad demolished in a Dec. 30 traffic accident.

The village earlier received a $15,000 cash insurance settlement for the vehicle from Employers Mutual Casualty Co., Oak Brook.

Vaccaro liquor license likely

Schaumburg officials expressed no objection to Village Pres. Raymond Kessell's eventual issuance of a liquor license to Ray Vaccaro, who intends to purchase the VIP Lounge, WiseWay Plaza, Wise and Irving Park roads.

Vaccaro has operated the Airport Lounge at Schaumburg Airport for the last several years.

Vaccaro told trustees he will offer an extensive menu at the new from Plaza Drive in Woodfield Shopping Center to Plum Grove seven days a week.

Zettek would back film code if Chicago OKs it

Elk Grove Village Pres. Charles J. Zettek will support a local ordinance banning minors from viewing violent films if the Chicago City Council passes a similar ordinance.

Zettek said Wednesday he agrees with an ordinance proposed by Mayor Richard J. Daley to prohibit those under 18 from viewing "excessively" violent movies. He added he would back a similar code for Elk Grove Village if the Chicago code is upheld in court.

"We will watch with very keen interest what happens in Chicago, and if Mayor Daley is successful, I will urge that we incorporate the same language regarding violence in our own ordinance," Zettek said.

THE VILLAGE has an existing anti-obscenity ordinance which prohibits the showing of movies and the sale of writings or recordings which are deemed obscene by village-designated reviewers and the courts.

The ordinance was adopted in an emergency village board session in January 1974 and was used at that time in an attempt to block local showing of the X-rated film, "The Devil in Miss Jones."

The film was shown for several days while the village and Elk Grove Cinema owner Walter Pancoe went to court, but Pancoe subsequently agreed to stop showing the movie.

Zettek said he has been following the progress of Daley's proposal, which is now under consideration in a subcommittee of the Chicago City Council finance committee. The proposal would prohibit persons under 18 from viewing films judged excessively violent.

CHICAGO CORPORATION counsel William R. Quinlan has said the measure could survive a constitutional challenge. But the American Civil Liberties Union has said the proposal would infringe on 1st Amendment rights.

"I think Mayor Daley has a very valid and legitimate concern," Zettek said. "I'm entirely in accord with that posture."

"Certainly we don't enhance youths' minds when we expose them to pornography and excessive violence," he added. "If we had the ability (to write such an ordinance) I would be the first to endorse it."

Zettek said under the village's current practices, police officers and selected residents view each X-rated movie before it is shown in the village. He said the ordinance is a "very difficult type to enforce" because the movie must be proven to be "harmful."

$4.9 million budget OK'd by council

A $4.9 million Rolling Meadows city budget calling for the hiring of seven firemen, establishment of an $85,000 water fund and approximately $200,000 in equipment purchases has been adopted by the city council.

The fiscal 1976-77 budget was prepared by Acting City Mgr. Charles Green. It is slightly higher than this year's $4.3 million budget, but calls for no immediate increase in property taxes.

The budget calls for a 5 per cent salary increase for all employees and several job classification changes that call for an additional increase in salary for several employees.

MAYOR Roland J. Meyer Wednesday commended Green "for an excellent job in preparing the budget."

He appointed Green budget officer several months ago.

Green's recommendation to add seven men to the fire department also had been proposed in a recent National Loss Control Corp. study of the fire department's needs.

No new men have been added to the department since 1972, although city officials in the 1973-74 city budget had recommended the addition of six new men. The men were never hired because of hiring freezes imposed by Meyer.

Meyer's actions came when city officials feared a revenue shortage in the budget.

GREEN'S PROPOSED budget was adopted almost without change. However, a recommendation from Green that the city also consider establishing a $100,000 capitalization, or planning, fund has been ignored.

Meyer said Wednesday, "The main thing was to get the budget out of the (Continued on Page 6)

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 394-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1963 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also (Continued on Page 2)

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for expedited collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Ying and Kia

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 12-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termux on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war sears still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

7% pay hike part of pact in Dist. 214

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,850. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,848 approved this week by teachers in New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year.

Other provisions in the contract include:

- An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $500.

7% pay hike in Dist. 214 contract

$600 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $900 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

- Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.

- A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.

- An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

- An increase in summer school pay. Teachers would still be paid 10 per cent of their base salary but the maximum summer pay would be increased from $1,250 to $1,356.

- The formation of a committee to recommend procedure for reducing staff as enrollment declines. The committee would report to the board by Feb. 1, 1977.

- An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

The contract package represents a total increase in district expenses of about $2 million, 11 per cent. The district has 1,089 teachers.

Rolling Meadows Ald. Kenneth Retzke, 5th, Wednesday reaffirmed his criticism of another alderman whom Retzke has said is unresponsive to complaints of 5th Ward condominium apartment owners.

Retzke said Ald. Daniel Weber, 4th, did not "do his job" as chairman of the public works committee in connection with the condominium owners' request for free city garbage service.

Retzke's comments came after Weber Tuesday criticized both Retzke and published accounts of a public works committee meeting which the condominium owners attended.

WEBER OBJECTED to an April 21 story in The Herald of the meeting in which a Three Fountains condominium owner, acting as spokesman for his complex, belittled city aldermen.

Weber at the same time criticized the reporting of Retzke's demand that the public works committee produce a study showing comparisons of garbage and water service costs between condominium and single-family housing.

"Ironically, the alderman (Retzke) the newspaper chose to quote is not even a member of the public works committee," Weber said.

Retzke Wednesday said, "I had every right to attend the committee meeting as a councilman or private citizen and especially since I was there to represent the people in the ward.

"I'm going to continue to ask the public works committee for the costs comparisons, regardless of Weber's comments.

"I WOULDN'T HAVE to be involved if Weber had taken care of his job as chairman," Retzke said.

During the session Retzke chided both the committee and Steven Forsyth, a spokesman for the condominium homeowners, for allowing Forsyth's request for free garbage service for condominium units to turn into an exchange of insults.

The story noted that Retzke was not a member of the public works committee and that he told the condominium owners he would make recommendations for the cost comparison study through another city committee.

"I'm going to continue to represent the people in the ward regardless of what Weber says. I'm also going to continue to demand the report. It's information the people are entitled to," Retzke said.

The argument between Weber and the condominium homeowners started several months ago when the group demanded free garbage service, which is provided to other single-family homeowners in the city.

The condominium homeowners now pay a $2-a-month commercial rate for city garbage service.

Petitions ask Dist. 59 unit issue be put to vote

by JUDY JOBBITT

Petitions requesting a referendum on forming an Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit school district have been filed with the county schools superintendent by a committee of 10 residents from the Dist. 59 area.

The request is expected to receive strong opposition from High School Dist. 214, which has already retained legal counsel to block the movement. Dist. 214 officials said they fear the unit district reorganization would weaken the high school district's tax base.

The committee filed the petitions with Richard Martwick, Cook County school superintendent, after getting about 350 signatures during the week-end. The committee said in a press statement that the members "are confident the facts will convince the voters that a unit district will benefit our children's education and the taxpayers who support it."

Information about filing the petition and the committee's statement were withheld from The Herald until Wednesday by the committee.

Leah Cummins, committee member and Dist. 59 public relations director, said the consensus of committee members was to withhold this and other information from The Herald because of the "adversary stance" the paper editorially has taken on the unit district. She said committee members "wanted to see it in the other papers to be told accurately. Paddock's put itself in an adversary stance with the editorial. You've positioned yourself and you've positioned us."

The petition sets the boundaries for the proposed unit district contiguous with the current Dist. 59 boundaries.

The proposed unit district would include Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools, currently in High School Dist. 214, in addition to the 21 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59.

Dist. 59 currently supplies about 41 per cent of the tax base, but only about 27 per cent of the students in Dist. 214. By forming a unit district, the committee anticipates receiving more funding for education in the Dist. 59 area than is currently available under the dual district system.

THE PETITION also calls for a combined education and building fund tax rate of $3.84 per $100 assessed valuation for the unit district, which equals the anticipated combined tax rates for Dist. 59 and 214.

"Speaking as a member but not for the committee of 10, I felt the educational and financial benefits available as a result of reorganization as a unit district made it necessary to move ahead and file the petition in hopes of bringing this issue before the voters at the earliest opportunity," said Thomas Guy, committee member.

The hearings and petition process requires a minimum of 130 days. The process could take several years if strong opposition is mounted.

Arlington assumes duty for new commuter site

by BILL HILL

The new commuter railroad station promised to Arlington Heights will not be completed before next spring, according to Chicago and North Western Ry. officials.

In an effort to hurry the construction of the new station, railroad officials have asked the Village of Arlington Heights to assume the responsibilities of hiring an architect and letting bids on the project.

The village board's finance committee this week gave approval to that agreement. Final approval of the arrangement must be received by the village board Monday.

"We have a mandate from IDOT (Illinois Dept. of Transportation) to get these new depots completed as soon as possible. It will happen much quicker with this type of arrangement because of the many demands on our staff," said Rollins Coakley, manager of commuter services for the railroad company.

COST ESTIMATES for the new station, which will be built immediately east of the present building, are in the vicinity of $180,000, Coakley said.

The Arlington Heights project is part of a replacement and rehabilitation program the railway is undertaking with a grant from the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Stations in Evanston, Lombard, Lake Bluff and Wheaton also will benefit from the program, Coakley said.

During preliminary discussions with railway officials, Village Pres. James T. Ryan and Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson have expressed a preference for a colonial style station, rather than the standard flat-roof style used for the Arlington Park station.

COAKLEY SAID the railway has no objections to the colonial style if the total cost of the project does not exceed $180,000 and the village accepts any extra maintenance duties required by the colonial design.

Coakley estimated that the colonial design would cost about $30,000 more than the standard style.

Hanson predicted that a colonial style station could be completed for about $180,000, including architectural fees.

A final decision on the design of the building will not be made until an architect is hired.

Hanson said he favored the colonial style because the station is located downtown. "It will be here for at least the next 75 years, so it should have a little facade to it," he said.

THE NEW STATION, regardless of its exterior design, will feature two waiting rooms, Coakley said.

City council wrapup

Eatery liquor OK awaits mayor's nod

The Rolling Meadows City Council has created an additional class A-1 liquor license which will be given to a proposed tavern restaurant at 1401 Rohlwing Rd. if approved by Mayor Roland J. Meyer.

Meyer, city liquor commissioner, is reviewing the license application submitted by Donald Neuses, developer of the proposed "Warehouse" tavern to be constructed in the city's industrial park.

Meyer said Wednesday the council recommended granting Neuses' request. "I have in the past followed the council's recommendation and probably will this time also. However, the application is still under review," Meyer said.

Layne well bid accepted

The council accepted a low bid of $3,990 from Layne Western Co. for pulling, cleaning and repairing of Well No. 5 on Industrial Avenue.

The well inspection and renovation is expected to start immediately and the well should be back in operation within four to five weeks, according to James Muldowney, city engineer.

The council approved a contract not to exceed $4,000 for the initial work.

Mental health gift OK'd

The city council has approved a $4,591 contribution to the Northwest Mental Health Center and $3,160 to Clearbrook School. The money will come from the mental health fund.

Valdes to supply fuel, oil

G. Valdes Enterprises has been selected to supply fuel and oil for city use. The council approved a contract for fuel and oil supplies for the 1976-77 fiscal year at the following rates: for regular gasoline, 37.1 cents per gallon; for premium gasoline, 39.6 cents per gallon; for No. 2 Diesel fuel, 35.9 cents a gallon; and $1.21 per gallon for oil.

Sidewalk contract awarded

DiAddosio Construction company was low bidder for a sidewalk repair program expected to begin in May.

The council approved a $5,850 contract for repairs to walks throughout the city.

way, and now that that is done perhaps we will review the planning fund idea."

Green has urged the council to establish the planning fund and said money for the fund is not available in the budget adopted Tuesday.

In a budget report Green urged the city finance committee to undertake a thorough evaluation of the city's future revenue requirements so that a planning fund could be established.

GREEN'S REPORT added "that a comprehensive planning process will be undertaken by the city this year to establish programs and objectives of the entire city operation and to determine applicable measurement criteria."

"Next year's budget will begin to reflect this planning process," Green said.

Green described the budget, which projects an approximate $78,000 surplus, as a document that is a flexible tool that may need adjustment as revenue conditions change.

He said if revenues are less than the estimated amounts, corresponding expenditure changes will be made.

Park official given 7.9% pay increase

Palatine Park Director Fred Hall will receive a 7.9 per cent salary increase effective May 1, raising his annual salary to $25,500.

Hall's salary was set by the Palatine Park District Board Tuesday when it approved a $1,508,922 budget for the 1976-77 fiscal year, a slight decrease from last year's budget which included referendum funds to construct Eagle Park, Home and Oak streets.

The salary increase is designed to bring Hall's current salary of $23,705 in line with that of village department heads.

"I PERSONALLY think he is an extremely capable park district director," Park Pres. Robert Dellamaria said.

"The rapport I have with the board is a good one and I enjoy my work," Hall said in accepting the new salary.

Salary expenditures total $475,170 in the 1976-77 budget, a 15.6 per cent increase from the current year's expenditure of $410,795. Salaries account for nearly a third of the total park district budget.

The hiring of a park supervisor at a salary ranging from $8,200 to $9,000 is included in the budget.

THE BUDGET also appropriates $6,000 for a van to transport people in park district programs although the board indicated the purchase may not be authorized.

Additional details on how the van would be used, who would be authorized to drive it, specifications for the vehicle and advice from the Palatine Police Dept. were requested by the board prior to the purchase of the van.

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 386-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army Intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1953 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also (Continued on Page 3)

The house of the future is not only here, but has been for almost 30 years.

Consider the assets: inexpensive and quickly erected but sturdy, almost maintenance free, and warm in winter and cool in summer.

There is one big drawback, though: the houses haven't been built in more than 25 years, since the company went bankrupt.

The Lustron houses stand as monuments to an idea that worked, but whose time had not come.

THE LUSTRON houses, about 25 of which are scattered in the Northwest suburbs, are easily recognizable by their all steel construction and pastel porcelain and baked enamel finish. When the Lustron Corp. promised all-steel construction, they delivered. There is not a stick of wood in its frame.

The small houses, all of the five-room, two-bedroom models, have panel steel exteriors that resemble an overgrown kitchen appliance.

But jokes and wisecracks aside, those who live in a Lustron home are not likely to part with them willingly.

"I wouldn't give it up unless I were a millionaire," said Mrs. Earl Wodrich, of 232 S. Hale St., Palatine.

The Wodrichs have had their Lustron house about 14 months. Retired, and having sold their larger house, they tried apartments and condominium apartments before they went looking for a Lustron house last year.

"THIS HOUSE wasn't advertised. We went to the real estate company looking for a Lustron house. Why? Because there's no maintenance," Mrs. Wodrich said.

Or as her neighbor Gordon Waddell at 325 S. Hale St. said, "This house was the reason we moved out here from Chicago in 1950. We saw one on display in Chicago and decided that's what we wanted. And we've been happy with it."

The reasons that attracted the Waddells in 1950 and the ones that drew the Wodrichs 25 years later are about the same: low costs; little, if any, maintenance, and good design and construction.

The houses' interior walls are enameled steel. There are no conventional doors, but rather sliding metal ones. The bedrooms are large and have picture windows, as do the living room and dining room.

The window placement is such that while both houses have air conditioners, neither one is used often because of good insulation and cross ventilation.

THERE IS VERY little wasted space. The houses have an abundance of cupboards, cabinets and closets, as well as built-in shelves and a vanity.

Originally the houses came with a combination dishwasher-clotheswasher in the kitchen. Waddell explained different tubs were used inside the same machine to accommodate dishes or clothes.

Waddell said when the houses first made their appearance, there was natural resistance from building unions and fears by some that houses would be ovens in the summer with condensation problems on humid days (Continued on Page 6)

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for expedited collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

WHILE MOST legislators had branded the plan a Walker gimmick when it was first announced in March, some lawmakers indicated they might support the measure after meeting with Walker.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million.

Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Ying and Kia

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termex on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago.

When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church. The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

Honest Abe may find new home in Schaumburg

by DANN GIRE
Reinhardt Luebbers' dream of bringing Abraham Lincoln to Schaumburg may become reality. Businessmen in downstate Charleston who own a 64-foot statue of the 16th President have agreed to accept bids for it. Bid deadline is July 1. Luebbers, Schaumburg Historical Society President, said he will begin a campaign to solicit funds from community organizations and local merchants to bid on the statue which now stands in a rural memorial park. The Fiberglas statue will be placed in the Schaumburg Town Square, if the purchase attempt is successful, Luebbers said.

Public hearing set on village budget

A second public hearing on Palatine's proposed 1976-77 budget will be held at 8 p.m. today in the conference room of village hall, 54 S. Brockway St. The public hearing Monday on the record $7.89 million budget was continued until today after village trustees spent more than an hour debating the need for a $1 million cut. Only five persons attended Monday's session.

WILLIAM BROWNING, executive vice president of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, said Wednesday the group agreed two weeks ago to offer the statue for sale. Browning said he has received notification from two parties expressing interest in bidding for the world's tallest statue of Lincoln, but he declined to name them. "Pat Paulsen wants it bad," Browning said. "But he still wants it for free." Paulsen, a nationally known comedian, wants to use the statue as a prop in his program "Lincoln Goes West" in which he will travel around the country in honor of the Bicentennial, he said.

LUEBBERS SAID he expects the statue to go for a minimum $25,000, not including transportation charges. The statue, erected in May 1969, cost an estimated $30,000, although setting it up in a privately owned memorial park ran the total expenses to more than $80,000, Browning said. Browning said the group isn't interested in turning the Lincoln statue into a money-making venture, because it was a community contribution and funds from the sale probably will be returned to the community for the public library, county jail facilities or community projects, Browning said.

County to vacate right-of-way land

A right-of-way adjacent to Eagle Park in Palatine Township is expected to be vacated by Cook County within the next two months. Fred Hall, Palatine Park District director, told the park board Tuesday the county board had approved a petition from the park district and two homeowners to vacate the Garden Avenue right-of-way between Elm and Oak streets. The homeowners must each pay $2,500 to the county within 60 days to finalize the vacation. The homeowners then would equally divide the 66-by 300-foot right-of-way. Hall said the park district may be able to pay the $5,000, if the homeowners refuse to and acquire title to the parcel. The property could then be used for a parking lot for the park, bike trails or recreational purposes.

Mt. Prospect urged to pay share

The park board voted to send a letter to the Mount Prospect Park Board urging them to allocate the requested $11,700 to the Northwest Special Recreation Assn. Mount Prospect park commissioners have voted to allocate only $6,000 this year and .0045 per cent of their assessed valuation in future years. The association, which provides recreational programs for physically and emotionally retarded children in 13 park districts, has notified Mount Prospect commissioners they must pay $11,700 to remain in the association.

Wooden fence OKd for pool

Changes in fencing for the north side of the swimming pool at Eagle Park in Palatine Township have been approved by the park board. The board approved the installation of a wooden stockade fence instead of a chain link fence at an additional cost of $520. The change will permit the park district to take landscaping planned for the north side of the park and place it in other sections of the park.

"The house is tight," Waddell said.
"It is well-engineered."
"It's cool in summer and in winter it's warm as toast," Mrs. Wodrich concurred.

Both houses are using the original furnaces that force hot air around into the ceiling for radiant heating from the steel ceiling panels.

THERE ARE drawbacks to the houses.

"If you're the kind of person that gets tired of the same color walls all the time, it can be a problem," Mrs.
Waddell said.

"But you can always change the drapes or something like that," she said.

Another problem with the steel walls is hanging pictures. The houses came with about a dozen metal hooks that are glued to the wall so pictures could be hung without pounding nails through the steel.

Some Lustron owners did pound nails through the walls and the holes will remain as long as the house stands.

BUT WHAT'S the inconvenience of not hanging a picture just so, when roof never has to be replaced and the house never painted inside or out?

"I figure we've saved $5,000 to $8,000 on decorating since we've been here," Mrs. Waddell estimated.

But the dream of low-cost housing marketed by the Lustron Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, never reached full fruition. Resistance from construction companies and some prohibitive building codes blocked its path.

And after rescue loans fell through, the company stopped operations before 1950.

But the promises they made in their promotional literature are still being met today.

THE WADDELLS ARE a little sad the company could not make a go of it.

"Had they stayed in business, I'm sure they would have continued to make improvements as they went along," Waddell said.

SPACE-SAVING sliding steel doors are standard features of the Lustron homes. About 25 were built in the area after World War II.

take getting into the transportation park commissioner who indicated he opposed the principle of purchasing the van.

The purchase of a cooler for the Palatine Hills Golf Course clubhouse at a cost of $1,705 plus a maximum of $200 for installation also was approved by the board. The contract was awarded to U.S. Refrigeration Sales and Service Corp., the lowest of two bidders.

for 1976-77 is $262,410, a 6.8 per cent are:

- A museum fund of $7,550 for the

- Bike trail improvements costing $25,000 mainly for the 115-foot under-

Shoppers, merchants rap village business district

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

It's not Chicago's State and Madison streets with its huge, multistoried department stores and hundreds of faithful daily shoppers. Neither is it New York's Broadway and 42nd Street with its blinding neon marquee.

No, downtown Mount Prospect is comprised of about 33 small business establishments, service-oriented for the most part, bound by the triangle formed by Central Road, Maple Street and Prospect Avenue. And downtown shoppers, as well as merchants, generally are not satisfied with what the village's central business district has to offer.

While the village Business District Development and Redevelopment Commission, along with Barton-Aschman Associates of Chicago, is in the process of drawing up conceptual plans for an estimated $1.6 million downtown redevelopment project, Mount Prospect citizens and businessmen have voiced their own pros and cons. Responses obtained from those recently interviewed by The Herald, show the cons outweighing the pros.

Spy groups violated rights: unit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee reported Wednesday that abuses of power by U. S. intelligence agencies have violated the constitutional rights of millions of Americans.

In a 396-page report titled "Intelligence Activities and the Rights of Americans," the panel said the CIA, FBI, IRS, National Security Agency and Army intelligence violated privacy, lawful assembly and other rights by break-ins, wiretaps and buggings, mail openings, physical surveillance and harassment.

"The committee's fundamental conclusion is that intelligence activities have undermined the constitutional rights of citizens and that they have done so primarily because checks and balances designed by the framers of the Constitution to assure accountability have not been applied," the report said.

Discussing the type of domestic spying it was concerned about, it said the CIA opened and photographed nearly a quarter of a million first-class letters in the United States from 1963 to 1973, "producing a CIA computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names."

Other statistics covered hundreds of thousands of surveillance files within the other agencies.

The report made 96 reform recommendations which two committee members — Senators John Tower, D-Tex., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. — considered so sweeping they refused to sign the document. They also (Continued on Page 3)

PARKING FACILITIES, at least the lack of them, seems to be the overriding complaint shared by shoppers and merchants.

"If they can't park here they don't come here," simply stated Bob Anderson, coowner of Anderson-Biermann Hardware, 8 W. Busse Ave. "The only real complaints from customers is that there's never any place to park."

Walter Bloy, 517 S. Emerson St., said there is a definite parking problem. He added, however, "I don't care for any additional parking or housing. It (the downtown area) would no longer have the small-town village atmosphere. That's why I moved here 26 years ago."

Shopper Nancy Dittmar, 608 S. Albert St., said if the stores were less spread out, shopping might be easier. "Now, if you find a space, you have to park the car and walk maybe five blocks. Why bother?"

STRICTER PARKING enforcement was the concern of one downtown merchant. "I'd like to see the parking policed and the 30-minute signs enforced," said Norbert Chmura, owner of Meeske's grocery store, 101 S. Main St. "This store could be empty while the lots can be filled."

To LaVerne Funk, owner of Mount Prospect Jewelers, 108 S. Main St., "parking is somewhat inadequate, but parking is everyone's excuse." Funk said more small department stores, competitive stores are needed to attract people to the downtown area. "My theory is that we need to promote stores in this town, not new malls for the old people to sit around. There are no men's or boys' stores. Competition is good if it's clean."

One Mount Prospect retiree, asking to remain anonymous, said, "We'd like to see a big Jewel like we had before. There's no variety here like in the big stores. We don't shop here too often because there's nothing here."

Mrs. R. H. Seffens, 18 S. I-Oka Ave., agrees the shopping centers have cost the town much of its business. "Like everyone else, I shop in the centers. They're more convenient. Parking is easier," Mrs. Seffens said she feels the community is being taken over with village business. Although she shops downtown for meats and drugs, she admitted, "I wouldn't agree with the planning commission. I feel it's rather a dead town."

JACK KEEFER, owner of Keefer's Pharmacy, 5 W. Prospect Ave., said the downtown area does not provide the kinds of business the people are looking for.

"We need a balance of business — fewer gas stations, real estate agencies and barber shops — and more shopper parking," Keefer said.

Louie Velasco, owner of Louie's Barber Shop, 9 W. Prospect Ave., said new parking structures located on the periphery of the downtown area will do Mount Prospect no good. "You can't get people to walk," he said.

Velasco said Mount Prospect's downtown business district serves citizens in a unique fashion. "Downtown has changed from retail and service to practically all service," he said. "It serves a unique function. People come here for specific purposes, not to shop."

He also expressed concern over the traffic situation should office buildings and apartment complexes be constructed downtown. "What about an increase in traffic?" Velasco asked. "I don't think Mount Prospect can handle it."

SHOPPER OR COMMUTER? It's hard to tell the difference these days. The recent trend shows retail businesses relocating out of the downtown Mount Prospect area are taking the bulk of shoppers with them.

Tax plan can save state default: Walker

by STEVE BROWN

The leaders of the Illinois General Assembly were told the state will not be able to pay its bills in September unless the legislature approves an accelerated tax collection plan proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker met with the leaders of both parties in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate in an unusual session Wednesday morning.

The governor was attempting to garner support for his tax plan which calls for speedier collection of sales tax receipts and income taxes withheld from employees.

The proposal would give the state an additional $90 million during fiscal 1977 without raising taxes, Walker contends. The governor hopes to use the accelerated tax collection plan as part of his strategy in getting enough revenue to balance his proposed $6 billion budget.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, said some leaders in the General Assembly now see approval of the Walker tax plan as one way of meeting state spending needs without raising taxes.

"We will have to talk about it and meet with State Comptroller George Lindberg before taking any action," said Graham, who is an assistant minority leader in the Senate.

The outlook for a series of cash flow problems in September would be a replay of the state's financial problem during the past year. While the state was not totally unable to pay bills, administration officials have slowed the payment of some bills.

Walker also discussed the possibility of making state school aid payments to local elementary and secondary school districts twice each month rather than in a single payment. Walker indicated the two payments would allow the state to spread the strain on the budget. The state currently pays local schools about $100 million each month.

IN AN ACTION related to the state school aid situation, Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin offered a series of proposals that would trim budget requests for school by $160 million. Cronin told a Springfield group that it appears the state cannot afford to give schools all of the money authorized under the law.

Aides to Lindberg have insisted the Walker plan would not solve the state's overall financial problem. They note if the legislature refuses to approve the tax collection $100 million will have to be cut from the budget. Lindberg has already called for the General Assembly to trim $100 million from the Walker budget.

He contends the state will take in about $5.9 billion rather than $6 billion estimated by Walker.

Fear dissolves as Laotian family settles into U.S. life

by BILL HILL

Little Kia Chay threw herself to the ground and cried. It was time to leave the park, its swings and slides.

Unhappy momentarily, but no longer frightened. Not like when Kia and her parents would hide in their native Laos from the North Vietnamese soldiers who roamed the streets of their village.

"We didn't like it there. They take what they want," said Kia's 18-year-old uncle, Yao Thao Chay.

So 4-year-old Kia, her parents El Al and Ying, took advantage of the chance to come to America.

They were also allowed to bring one relative. They chose El Al's brother, Yao.

The family of four now lives in Rolling Meadows. The two men work at Termax on Industrial Avenue. Those arrangements were made in advance by the members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights.

THE FEAR instilled by their final days in Laos followed the family to

Today

Vietnam war scars still healing—Page 9

their new home, but has since subsided, friends from St. Peter's say. No longer do they sleep with the lights on and Kia's mother, Ying, is not so hesitant to open the door when church members come to visit.

But Ying is still very shy. She is 23, but looks much younger, probably because she is barely 4½ feet tall.

Ying also has been upset by a letter received from her family in Laos that reported two of her sisters have died since she left there two months ago. The letter did not say how they died.

Only Yao speaks English, but his knowledge of the language is limited and most questions are not understood unless accompanied by charade-like gestures.

AT HARPER College, where Yao, El Al and Ying are enrolled in "English as a Second Language," Yao has a proficiency rating of 5 on an 8-point scale. El Al, 24, knows only a little English and has a rating of 1. Ying has been given a "minus 1" classification.

Yao, who hopes to earn a high school diploma through equivalency tests and then attend college here, gained his head start by staying in school longer.

In Laos, education isn't stressed much, he said. In fact, most girls are not sent to school. Ying never went, but she is beginning to adopt English in a written form. She now knows the alphabet and has learned to spell her daughter's name. "I've never seen her smile so much as when she did that," said Erma Unger, one of the family's hosts.

The Chays were one of the first families eligible to leave Laos because El Al worked for the U. S. government for four years as a construction worker.

They arrived via New York through the coordination of Lutheran Immigration about two months ago. When they landed at O'Hare Airport, they carried two suitcases that contained a few clothes and a handful of snapshots.

WHAT THEY HAVE, they owe to the people of St. Peter's Church.

The two-bedroom apartment was rented and furnished, too. One member of the parish has volunteered to pick up the tab for the family's entire grocery bill for one year.

Over-all, they seem very happy with their new home and country, the St. Peter's people say. They are sometimes lonely, but not frightened.

Prospect Heights Dist. 23

Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 will offer a summer program at George Williams Camp, Lake Geneva, Wis. from June 21-26 for students in grades five, six and seven. The camping program is part of the regular summer school program "Off Campus Affective Education."

Students will visit Yerkes Observatory, a camp-run animal farm, a stone quarry and a century-old cemetery.

Cost of the program is $60 which includes lodging, meals, entrance fees, materials, insurance and round trip transportation. Students who live outside the school district may attend by paying an additional $25.

Deadline for registration is Friday, and forms are available at MacArthur Junior High School, 700 Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights. For information call Phil Cornwell, 259-4550, ext. 30.

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59

Orders are being taken through Friday for a spring plant sale sponsored by the ways and means committee at Forest View Elementary School, 1901 Estates Dr., Mount Prospect.

Red geraniums and was begonias in four inch pots will be sold for $1 each. To place orders, call Corrine Marshall, 439-6597 or Judy Briesch, 430-6665. Plants will be delivered May 7.

East Maine Dist. 63

"Our Country 'Tis of Thee," a musical on the Bicentennial, will be presented by students from Gemini Junior High School at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Apollo Junior High School auditorium, 10100 Dee Rd., Des Plaines.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students. The director of the production is Margie Fleischman.

High School Dist. 214

Wheeling High School's senior class is sponsoring a blood drive Friday as a community service project. The drawing will be held in Room 104 at the school, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling.

Donations made during the drive will be credited to the community in which the student lives, and covers the students immediate family, including grandparents, for one year.

Serving on the blood drive committee are Vivian Ashe, Tom Atchison, Glenn Barry, Alan Begrowicz, Chris Berkeley, Daniel Black, Matt Brown, Luis Clarkston, Debra Clifford, Paula Coelho, Donna Cofer, Cindy Crehan, Lee Jacobs and Harlene Pearlman, all seniors.

In general...

An environmental education workshop for teachers will be held Saturday and May 15, at Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. Conducted by the National Park Service in cooperation with the National College of Education, Evanston, the workshop may be taken for one hour of graduate credit. ## To replace 1968 design

Village adopts master land plan

A comprehensive land use plan, aimed at improving traffic control, evaluating the needs of the central business district and developing office, research, commercial and light industry facilities, has been adopted by the Mount Prospect Village Board.

Members of the village planning commission have worked since 1973 on the new plan, which replaces the now-obsolete master plan developed in 1968.

James P. Grier Jr., chairman of the commission's comprehensive plan subcommittee, headed a presentation Tuesday for the village board and Mount Prospect residents.

"The basic data utilized in the development of the plan was assembled in a planning study and includes information on physical and geographic characteristics, population size and distribution, economic characteristics, housing supply and demand, traffic and circulation and public facilities," Grier said.

PROPOSALS AND recommendations of the commission are based on projections depicting Mount Prospect as it may appear in 1990, including a population estimated at 54,500. The village population in 1975 was about 49,600.

Planning commission member Marie Caylor cited the continued need for planning as "the village has reached a mature status. It has reached maturity with little vacant land to be developed."

Some specifics outlined in the new plan include:

- Developing schools, churches, playgrounds, parks, public buildings and other "open space" areas.

- Retaining the 200-acre area of land between Euclid Avenue and Camp McDonald Road and Wheeling Road and the River Trails Park District property as a golf course.

- Considering a mix of single-family and multi-family residential developments with some light industrial facilities on what is now the Northern Illinois Gas Co's property, pending possible future annexation by the village.

THE PLAN ALSO is concerned with the trend of declining populations in the 19 elementary and junior high schools in the village and surrounding areas. The schools, with a total capacity for 11,010 students in 1975, housed only 9,174 students.

Grier said the master plan cost approximately $5,000 to prepare, including $3,000 in consultant fees paid to Barton-Aschman Associates of Chicago. He added that if Barton-Aschman were to devise the entire plan without the commission's assistance, the cost would have neared $25,000.

"Some of the proposals won't cost a dime," Grier said. "We hope to obtain funds through federal agencies for others." He could not project when all recommendations would be carried out but said some will take until 1990 to complete.

Grier said one purpose of a comprehensive plan is to determine the optimum use of land in the village and surrounding unincorporated areas for residential, commercial and private services. "We don't want gas stations on every corner or Dairy Delights on every other corner," he said.

UP UNTIL TWO years ago, the planning commission held both planning and zoning responsibilities. Grier said all of the commission's time literally was spent zoning whereas little, if any, time was devoted to planning. "Now, as a separate body," he explained, "we can devote the full time to planning. And the comprehensive plan is the result."

"It isn't perfect. It will never be perfect," Grier said of the master plan. "But as of now it's as perfect as we can get it."

Grier said now that the plan has been approved, the commission's job is to follow up and see that its recommendations are fulfilled or to determine why they cannot be fulfilled and to continue to update the plan to keep pace with changes in the village.

Prospect Hts. parks set budget hearing June 8

The Prospect Heights Park District Board will conduct a public hearing June 8 on its $306,135.75 tentative budget and appropriations ordinance for 1976-77.

The proposed budget will be posted at the park district offices, 110 W. Camp McDonald Rd., for the next 30 days for public examination in accordance with state law.

The park board is expected to approve the budget following the June 8 hearing, said Kent Krautstrunk, park district director.

If approved, the budget will require park district residents to pay about $10 more in taxes annually. Last year's budget was $190,591.82.

THE CURRENT district tax rate of 51.7 cents per $100 assessed valuation would increase to 62.4 cents if the budget is approved.

The 10.7 cent increase will mean that a park district resident with a house assessed at $10,000 will pay about $62 in annual taxes, instead of the $51 paid to the district last year.

The proposed budget, covering the new fiscal year which began April 1, reflects the additional expenses of operating the new $1 million Gary Morava Recreation Center. Two new levies are proposed for police protection and a museum fund.

The district's over-all tax rate increase coupled with membership fees and program charges generated by the new sports complex will cover all district expenses, Krautstrunk said.

Panels draw school rental rules

Parent advisory committees in River Trails Dist. 26 have started to form guidelines for the redistricting and rental of Park View School, which is slated for closing at the end of the school year.

The board voted earlier this month to close Park View, 805 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, in response to declining enrollment and decreased revenues in the district.

A committee to establish new attendance boundaries for Park View students will survey parents to find any preferences for reassigning students.

THE 25-MEMBER committee held its first meeting Tuesday at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

Children from Park View will attend Indian Grove, Feehanville and Bond schools next fall, and the parent committee will make recommendations on how to divide the Park View students among these schools.

"The survey is to see whether we can find a pattern if most people in a particular area prefer a particular school," said Leslie Gallay, cochairman of the boundary committee.

Before beginning the door-to-door survey, the 25-member committee will tour the three schools which will receive the transfer students, Mrs. Gallay said.

The parent committee setting guidelines for leasing Park View also held its first meeting Tuesday.

THE SEVEN-MEMBER committee prepared a list of questions about renting the school, such as the length of the lease, insurance responsibility, tax obligations and custodial service, according to Martin Rosinski, committee chairman.

Rosinski said the committee probably will set parameters for the lease rather than decide who the tenant will be.

WHERE TO PARK seems to be a mystery for many shoppers who frequent the central business district of Mount Prospect. These signs, located along Prospect Avenue just south of the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks, tell the whole story.

To preserve, improve downtown

Business panel tells philosophy

Hurt by the growth of the large regional shopping centers, downtown Mount Prospect is attempting to make a comeback through programs proposed by the village's Business District Development and Redevelopment Commission.

Robert L. Bennett, commission chairman, said one major reason why downtown Mount Prospect has deteriorated is the growing popularity of big shopping malls. Two large downtown food stores and a Mount Prospect landmark, Willie's Hardware Co., have closed, as have other smaller businesses.

"Randhurst is marvelous for Mount Prospect," Bennett said, in that it is the village's largest source of income. But he added the shopping mall also is bad for Mount Prospect because it has prompted shoppers to desert the village's central business district bound by the Central Road, Maple Street and Prospect Avenue triangle.

TO STEM THE tide and make shopping downtown more appealing, the commission has proposed a $1.6 million revamping project partially based on studies by Property Consultants Inc., Northfield.

New facilities to be provided for public use, should the plan be approved by the village board, include improvements to the village hall parking lot, additional parking structures for commuters and shoppers, traffic safety improvements and, perhaps, a new location for the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

Other aspects of the commission's proposal include landscape beautification, sidewalk work and better street lighting.

But new public facilities are not the answer to all of the downtown woes. The village must encourage additional development downtown based on the results of surveys by Property Consultants.

THE CONSULTING firm has found:

- Downtown Mount Prospect will not support much more, if any, retail business.

- There is a market in the downtown vicinity for 10,000 additional square feet of office space.

- Apartment and condominium apartment complexes in the downtown area are increasingly in demand because they are easily accessible to commuter lines.

Though the market surveys show there is no real market for additional retail business, Bennett said, the retail spectrum downtown must be broadened.

"We need a number of different stores to support the downtown character and to bring more people downtown. I am not antiservice, but we have more than enough services," he said.

By service, he referred to real estate agencies, law firms and accounting firms.

WHILE THE RECENT trend has been for retail businesses to relocate outside the downtown boundaries, one major commercial enterprise, the Mount Prospect State Bank, has opted to remain in the central business district. The new six-story, $4 million bank building, 15 E. Busse Ave., opened in September and is the tallest building downtown.

"It is the one hopeful sign we have," Bennett said. "It is the only thing of major importance that says someone will invest there."

Bank President Richard Padula said the convenient central location is the principal reason for keeping the bank in the downtown area.

Padula admitted the over-all downtown situation is deteriorating. "The planning commission has received good recommendations from consultants," he said. "Hopefully, they'll act on them."

Bennett said the project remains in the planning stages and commission members, working with Barton-Aschman Associates of Chicago, are mapping specific locations where offices, stores, housing and parking facilities could be located.

IN ALLOCATING $14,500 last month for consultant fees, the village board retained Barton-Aschman as project consultant.

Barton-Aschman will draft a conceptual plan, and the village planning commission, which is responsible for the over-all village comprehensive plan, will review it. Bennett expects a completed plan by the end of August.

After reviews in public hearings, and upon approval by the village board, the plan could become eligible for federal funds through the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development by the year's end.

"Barton-Aschman is expert in advising us where the money comes from," Bennett said. "They know which funding programs are operative, which we can get money out of, the application dates and when to have our package together by."

7% teacher pay hike included in Dist. 214 pact

by KATHERINE BOYCE

High School Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary of about 7 per cent this fall if teachers and the board of education accept a tentative agreement in teacher contract negotiations next month.

Details of the agreement released Wednesday provide for an increase in the teachers base salary from the current $10,140 to $10,850 for the 1976-77 school year, and an increase based on the cost-of-living for the 1977-78 school year.

Teachers will vote on the agreement May 7 and the agreement will be submitted to the Dist. 214 Board of Education for approval May 10.

Randall Knudsen, president of the Dist. 214 Education Assn., which represented teachers at the bargaining table, said he could not predict whether teachers would accept the agreement. "I still feel a great deal of apprehension," he said. "Neither side got all that it hoped for."

"IN MY OPINION I feel it is a good package," said Knudsen. "I would not take it to the teachers without the hope that they would pass it." He said some teachers have expressed dissatisfaction with some particular items in the contract, but "whether they would veto the entire package on that I don't know."

Beginning teachers now receive 97 per cent of the base salary in Dist. 214 until they are placed on tenure. Under the proposed agreement, beginning teachers will receive the full amount of the base salary, $10,850. That beginning salary compares with $11,000 negotiated by teachers in Dist. 211 for the coming school year and $10,848 approved this week by teachers in New Trier Dist. 203.

For the 1977-78 school year Dist. 214 teachers will receive an increase in salary equal to the increase in the cost-of-living in the Chicago area for the 1976 calendar year.

Other provisions in the contract include:

- An increase in medical coverage providing for hospital emergency room coverage in the event of a sudden illness. Diagnostic coverage is increased from $100 to $200, accident coverage is increased from $300 to $600 and maternity coverage is revised from a flat $800 payment to a $150 deductible policy so that teachers would pay the first $150 with the district picking up 80 per cent of the remainder.

- Elimination of some nonacademic assignments such as corridor duty.

- A provision to freeze a teachers' salary if his evaluation shows his performance is unsatisfactory.

- An increase in extra duty pay. Teachers now receive a flat amount for duties such as coaching, drama, debate, speech events, music and band, but under the proposal they would receive a percentage of their base salary.

- An early retirement incentive plan which would pay teachers age 55 to 60 one-fifth of their base salary not to exceed $5,000.

Dist. 59 residents file unit referendum petitions

by JUDY JOBBITT

Petitions requesting a referendum on forming an Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit school district have been filed with the county schools superintendent by a committee of 10 residents from the Dist. 59 area.

The request is expected to receive strong opposition from High School Dist. 214, which has already retained legal counsel to block the movement. Dist. 214 officials said they fear the unit district reorganization would weaken the high school district's tax base.

The committee filed the petitions with Richard Martwick, Cook County school superintendent, after getting about 350 signatures during the weekend. The committee said in a press statement that the members "are confident the facts will convince the voters that a unit district will benefit our children's education and the taxpayers who support it."

INFORMATION ABOUT filing the petition and the committee's statement were withheld from The Herald until Wednesday by the committee.

Leah Cummins, committee member and Dist. 59 public relations director, said the consensus of committee members was to withhold this and other information from The Herald because of the "adversary stance" the paper editorially has taken on the unit district. She said committee members "wanted to see it in the other papers to be told accurately. Paddock's put itself in an adversary stance with the editorial. You've positioned yourself and you've positioned us."

The petition sets the boundaries for the proposed unit district contiguous with the current Dist. 59 boundaries. The proposed unit district would include Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools, currently in High School Dist. 214, in addition to the 21 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59.

Dist. 59 currently supplies about 40 per cent of the tax base, but only about 27 per cent of the students in Dist. 214. By forming a unit district, the committee anticipates receiving more funding for education in the Dist. 59 area than is currently available under the dual district system.

THE PETITION also calls for a combined education and building fund tax rate of $3.84 per $100 assessed valuation for the unit district, which equals the anticipated combined tax rates for Dist. 59 and 214.

"Speaking as a member but not for the committee of 10, I felt the educational and financial benefits available as a result of reorganization as a unit district made it necessary to move ahead and file the petition in hopes of bringing this issue before the voters at the earliest opportunity," said Thomas Guy, committee member.

In the statement the committee said it decided to file the petitions "based on the conviction that there are opportunities and advantages to be gained by our children as a result of reorganization. Our goal is and always has been to take this important issue to the public."

Frank Bristow, administrative assistant/attorney for Martwick, said Wednesday that the petitions were received. "We have not yet accepted it. We are taking it under review now," he said.

IF THE PETITIONS meet the legal requirements, Martwick will call for public hearings in which any individuals or school districts affected by the reorganization could present evidence.

If Martwick approves the petitions following the hearings, the petitions and evidence presented are given to the state schools superintendent, who then must approve or reject the request for an election. If the request is approved, the state superintendent would call for an election in which Dist. 59 residents would vote on the issue.

The hearings and petition process requires a minimum of 130 days. The process could take several years if strong opposition is mounted.

On Central Road

Dump might soon be golf course

by JOE FRANZ

Today's dumping ground for garbage, tin cans, old tires and other debris may one day be the location of the grassy, tree-lined fairways of a beautiful golf course.

At least that's the tentative plan under consideration by John Sexton Contractors, Oak Brook, operator's of a 160-acre sanitary landfill at 9800 W. Central Rd., near Des Plaines.

Arthur Daniels, executive vice president of the firm said although plans for the property are vague and could be changed, there is a definite possibility the site could be a favorite spot for Sunday golfers after the landfill is closed in about five years.

"WE REALLY have not decided what will be done with the property after the landfill is closed, but we are toying with the idea of a golf course," he said. "It looks like it might be a good location for one."

The property is owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, but is leased to John Sexton Contractors, which will play a role in the development after the landfill is closed and the land is once again vacant.

Daniels said with proper planning, closed landfills can be developed into a variety of projects to restore the property to some useful purpose.

"What we do is incorporate the end use with the entire project," he said.

"We realize that the property will not be a landfill forever and try to plan for its future use."

BUT IN THE meantime, 235 to 275 trucks a day from municipalities and private firms throughout the North and Northwest suburbs empty trash and fill at the site. The refuse is immediately covered with a layer of dirt.

The landfill, opened in 1963, has been excavated to provide space for the refuse, and will be filled with dirt and leveled before the land is reclaimed for a future project.

Daniels said although there is a stigma attached to landfills, he believes they are necessary and if properly operated do not create problems for adjacent property owners.

"The average citizen only thinks of it as a garbage dump," he said. "This is nothing more than a big earth-moving project."

"THERE'S A difference between a garbage dump and a good sanitary landfill," he said "Dumps are a thing of the past because the government won't permit them to operate."

He said he does not believe a properly operated landfill will depress property values, citing the company's Westchester operation as an example.

"I like to show off that project because there are $150,000 and $200,000 homes near it, and people still are building expensive homes nearby," he said.

Daniels concedes, however, that there are places not suitable for landfills. "I think compatibility is very important," he said.

In Dist. 59 report

Division on unit school panel termed misleading

by JUDY JOBBITT

The split of the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit school district study committee should not be construed by the Dist. 59 board as representative of the feelings of the general public, according to a majority report by the committee to the board.

The report, released Monday, urges the elementary school board to take the issue to the voters and stresses that the committee's 14 to 9 vote on the recommendation "should not be interpreted as an indication of the general public's feelings. The composition of the committee negates that possibility."

The report, which outlines the committee's conclusions, states that the members were selected in part because of their views on the unit district subject. Half of the original committee was selected because of known biases on the subject with the number of members pro and con evenly divided. The other half of the committee members' views were unknown.

THE PROPOSED unit district would include Forest View and Elk Grove high schools in addition to the current Dist. 59 schools. It would place elementary and high schools under one administration and school board. Currently Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts in High School Dist. 214.

High School would transfer to Forest View, although provisions might be made to allow these students the option of which school they would attend, the report states.

The report also states that Forest View would not have as severe an overcrowding problem as it is currently experiencing. Dist. 214 has set the capacity for the high schools at 2,500 students and Forest View has Martin, Forest View principal, said the "true" capacity of the school is 2,300.

UNDER THE proposed unit district, the school could have about 100 fewer students than currently enrolled.

The proposed unit district also would have about the same percentage of enrollment decline as the remaining portion of Dist. 214 according to the report, although it states that "critics of the formation of a unit district contended that the forecasted declining enrollment will be hastened in the remaining portion of Dist. 214."

Points made about improvements for the education programs under a unit district include:

- The ability to offer the same curriculum currently offered at the two high schools.

- Provisions for "better articulation and continuity" for a kindergarten through 12th grade program, although "there is no guarantee."

- Improved local control on school financing and decisions on education programs.

- A common school calendar and philosophy on education.

- A good tax base for providing education funds.

The Dist. 59 board plans to discuss the report at the board meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at the administration center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

The financial report states that "Dist. 59 has a unique opportunity via reorganization to retain $3.5 to $4 million to the local area which heretofore subsidized the remaining portion of Dist. 214." Currently Dist. 59 supplies about 40 per cent of the tax base and 27 per cent of the students in Dist. 214.

The report also discusses controversy that developed over the bias of the consultants and committee members and over the administrative abilities in Districts 59 and 214.

It states that Thomas Guy, chairman, said the consultants were "not to be impartial but to give guidance as a result of their professional experience."

The report also states criticism was directed toward the financial report because it failed to take into account a $19 million surplus Dist. 214 currently has when a deficit of about $38 million was computed for the district by the 1980-81 school year. The report states that even with the current surplus the high school district would have a deficit within the next five years which might jeopardize the current education programs in Dist. 214.

Seven CB radio thefts solved; police arrest 3

Library unit installs 4 members Saturday

The Prospect Heights Public Library Board will conduct a special meeting Saturday to install its newly elected members and elect officers for the coming year.

The meeting will be at 11 a.m. at the library, Camp McDonald Road and Elm Street.

Four persons elected to the library board April 13 will be sworn in. Dirk B. Landis, 206 Circle Dr., is a newcomer to the library board and will serve a four-year term.

Rev. Donald Hobbs, 404 N. Elmhurst Rd.; Janet Morse, 200 S. Maple St.; and Otto C. (Chuck) Guedelhoefer, 100 E. Clarendon Dr. were reelected to six-year terms on the board.

Police said William I. Bergen, 19; Curtis Wayne Powell, 20, and Louis J. Holub, 18, all were charged with possession of stolen property.

The three were taken into custody about 5:30 a.m. after they were seen walking in the Huntington Commons apartment complex, 1320 Elmhurst Rd., by police investigating a report of three men tampering with autos there.

Under questioning, the men reportedly told police they had stolen Citizens Band units and an eight-track tape player from autos in Mount Prospect, Park Ridge, and Skokie earlier in the evening.

The stolen items were found in the auto used by the three men according to reports.

Four of the units were later returned to their owners, police said.

Bergen and Holub were released on bond, but Howell was taken to Cook County Jail on $5,000 bond later Wednesday.

All three will appear May 5 in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

The original center-mounted grass catcher.

Snapper was the first to figure it out. Where to put the grass catcher on a lawn mower.

If you put it on the side, we discovered, it sticks out and gets in the way when you want to do some close trimming. And as the bag fills, the mower gets off balance, making it hard to handle.

Snapper decided to mount the bag in the center, right between the handles. This way you can get in those tight spots easily. And, since all Snapper self-propelled mowers have rear-wheel drive, traction is improved as the bag fills.

Get a Snapper mower. The mower with the original center-mounted grass catcher, developed and perfected over years of experience.

Another feature that makes Snapper fast. First.
